Weather conditions and illness accounted for the lack of a quorum at the February meeting of the town school committee, held in the Windham High school building, Wednesday evening. The minutes and communications were read by Secretary Elbert A. Case and the reports of Truant Officer Jean B. Paulhaus and School Inspector Dr. W. P. S. Keating were presented and approved. A letter from the Worcester Institute of Technology was read, in which the outstanding ability of students coming there from Windham High school was noted. Another communication came from the Parent-Teacher association of Windham Center, the properties committee being asked to accept a plan to grade the terrace in the rear of the Windham Center Grammar school, so that the children would have the benefit of a level playground. The plans met with the approval of the committee and immediate action will be taken. George W. Hickey, chairman of the properties committee reported that the request to use a small moving picture machine at the Windham Center school could not be granted at this time, due to the terms of the present insurance policies. A letter from a parent asking for damages for injuries to a student of the Natchaug school, when the latter fell on the icy stone steps of the school, was referred to Town Counsel Thomas J. Kelley. Chairman Hickey also reported that the heat question at the Natchaug had been investigated and that although it was not fully adequate it was hoped that definite steps to remedy the situation could be deferred until the summer vacation period. Any vote taken during the meeting is subject to the approval of a quorum of the committee. Adjournment was taken at an early hour.

Wednesday evening, members of the town school committee and about 30 other visitors viewed the fine exhibit of the work accomplished since last October by the sewing class of the evening school. Both classes are conducted in connection with the Windham night school and are under the supervision of Miss Minnie MacCracken, assisted by Mrs. Brown of The Ridges. The sewing work was effectively displayed and included many varieties of articles well and neatly made. Those tasting of the dainty collation served by the cooking students were unanimous in the opinion that already the class had attained a high degree of skill.

FORMER NORWICH CLOTHIER RETIRES AFTER 50 YEARS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Feb. 11—The successful business career of Homer Ernest Remington, extending over a period of half a century terminated Wednesday, when an announcement was issued that the store which he had conducted at 776 Main street under the firm name of the H. E. Remington Clothing Company had been taken over by Patrick D. Donohue and Joseph M. Berard. Messrs. Donohue and Berard have been employed as clerks with J. F. Carr & Company here for about twenty-five years. A pioneer in the clothing store line in Willimantic, Mr. Remington holds the distinction of being the second oldest man in business in the city. He was born in Waterbury, Vt., February 7, 1853 and attended the public schools of that town until he reached the age of sixteen. He was then employed in a general store and three years later moved to St. Albans, where he became a bookkeeper in a feed and flour store. After three months he went to Norwich, working there for the clothing firm of F. A. Wells and within a few months he was transferred to Mr. Wells' store in Willimantic. In the spring of 1875 he was placed in charge of the establishment and some time later he purchased H. L. Harrington's interest in the business. Within two years he had purchased Mr. Wells' interest in the business and with C. A. Capen as a partner the H. L. Harrington Company became known as the H. E. Remington Company. Mr. Capen retired in 1902 and the firm was reorganized under the name of the H. E. Remington Company, Inc.

The new owners of the company are native sons who entered the business world in their teens. Mr. Donohue went to work for the Willimantic Linen company and then for the H. C. Murray Company, remaining there three years. Twenty-seven years ago he entered the employ of the J. F. Carr company. Mr. Berard also took his initial step into the business world by working for the Willimantic Linen Company. He was a clerk for the H. C. Hall Grocery Company for five years and he entered the employ of the J. F. Carr Company twenty-seven years ago. Both men are prominent in the fraternal and social life of Willimantic and have taken part in practically all of its civic undertakings. They plan to take possession of their new purchase about February 21.

"During 60 years of Married Life"...

Three Generations Kept Healthy and Happy

My wife and sons also believe there is no remedy for constipation and biliousness equal to Beecham's Pills.

So many so-called "cures" for biliousness and kindred troubles leave after effects that are certainly injurious, but Beecham's Pills give prompt relief and leave one in a healthy and happy condition." N. J. M. Ramsay, N. J.

Indication for the last few days seems to point to another local real estate boom. Although there is nothing particular offered just now, yet the man with his ear to the ground, believes that some exceptional holdings might change hands if terms could be adjusted. Evidently it is becoming a more and more established fact, that Jewett City is not only a good place to live in, but that its business prospects and textile activities, were hardly ever more promising. Even the local postal workers stand to get an appreciable advance in pay; they are grinning anyway! With the opening of spring near at hand, this burg is sure going to be on the boom.

Old Cluey Watson declares that he never did lay any claim to being a long distance weather prophet, but he does say that in his years of noting the different sorts of spring approaches, never has open weather seemed so close at hand. Wild geese flying north, pussy willows, a woodchuck feeding among the roots in an open field, sparrows preparing for early housekeeping, and all reported before the middle of February! The old man figures that if all these signs are not out of joint and another edition of winter sets in, there is questionable judgment somewhere. Cluey failed to find pussy willows in many of the places, where not long ago a search was always rewarded with success. Yet, he says when the foliage hogs have stripped the highway, he knows a bank whereon the wild pussy willows with accent on the "wild" is still to be found in plenty.

Not many remember when the cleaning up of a foot or more of ice and snow was ever accomplished so thoroughly and with such little fuss. Three days of fog, mild temperature, and an occasional dash of warm rain formed a method locally much approved.

Judge Sabin S. Russell was at Hartford Tuesday to appear before the judiciary in the interest of measures that have been introduced for the increase in the salary of the judge and the prosecuting attorney of the town court of Killingly, which salaries have not been increased, despite the upward trend of things, since the town court was established more than 25 years ago. It does not appear that there is any known opposition for the moderate increases that have been asked.

There will be a clean slate as to overdue personal taxes when Attorney Louis A. Woisard files his report covering collections up to this year. This has been made possible by an intensive campaign to get what has been due from delinquent personal taxpayers, The campaign has involved many prosecutions before the town court and a searching out of the whys and wherefores for non-payment. Such overdue assessments as cannot be collected for good and various reasons will be abated. A list of all such abatements will be published, Attorney Woisard said Wednesday.

There was no fog to report Wednesday, having done its worst, or best, as one happens to view the matter, and departed. In its place came rain. The first real prolonged thaw of the winter continued to get in its good work and to be the means of increasing the water supply in a way that was highly pleasing to a great many, especially those who have had to carry water for distances for many weeks.

Each year, about this period of the winter the advocates of some sort of permanent paving for the area about the passenger station of the N. Y., N. H. and H. . R. company and around between the Exchange and Danielson Trust company buildings rise up to be heard. Such an improvement has been talked of for ten years. Nothing definite has been done about it. The improvement is desired to be rid of what is a sea of mud for weeks in the late spring and winter. It was suggested Wednesday that one definite way to get at the matter would be to have a clause inserted in the warning for the next town meeting that comes along asking for an appropriaton to do the work.

A card received here from Galveston by W. Clarence Bacon brought him the information that Captain Will Stone, in command of one of the shipping board vessels under lease to the Lykes line, was about to sail on another trip to Germany. Captain Stone, a former resident of Danielson, has been in command of shipping board vessels for several years, sailing out of Galveston for German ports and ports in the British Isles. The ships he has commanded are large merchant steamers.

Radio fans here were interested Tuesday evening in picking up the broadcast from WTIG, the new station just opened in Hartford. Rather unique was the experience of listening in on a station in the home state, through the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs has heretofore made this possible. From Hartford the entire program came through very clearly.

Appointment of a deputy game warden in Killingly is being urged by those who would stop or at least check violations of the game laws; and the appointee in the opinion of those favoring the acton, should be a man who is much in the woods and knows the hunting game. A 28-lb WILD CAT SHOT BY ELLIOTT FOX HUNTER

(Special to the Buletin)

Danielson, Feb. 11.—The Long Rock ledge country, about three and one-half miles west of Brooklyn village, has yielded a wild cat—a tawny, powerfully built animal that looks in death as if he might have been a terror in life, if cornered. The animal was shot Tuesday morning by Chas. E. Pike of Elliott while he was fox hunting.

The great cat was making his way along the ledge when Mr. Pike saw him and brought him down with a well directed shot. At the time the dog Mr. Pike was using was hot in pursuit over what Mr. Pike believed was a fox track, but did not come up until after the wild cat had been shot.

Mr. Pike said Wednesday afternoon that he has hunted through the country where he shot the animal for 50 years and never saw or heard of a wild cat being in that territory before. The specimen he obtained on Tuesday is a splendid one. It weighs 28 pounds. It has a yellowish, tawny, mottled pelt, a wicked looking head, very much like a cat, and teeth like stilettoes. Its great feet and powerful legs supported a supple body. The animal had a stub tail about three inches in length. Mr. Pike has sold the wild cat to a Providence man who is to have it mounted.

There is a possibility that this wild cat is the animal that has stirred up so much commotion in the Allen Hill section of Brooklyn and territory west of there during the past year, but there is no way of establishing this.

PUTNAM

The city council made up its annual budget at its meeting Tuesday evening. The appropriations that will be recommended to the annual city meeting amount to $51,730, which is $1,400 less than the 1924 appropriations. The Fire department was given $10,000 instead of the $12,000 as last year, and the police department $11,500 which had $12,00 last year. The budget as adopted is as follows:

Fire department $10,000, in 1924 it was $12,000.
Police $11,500, 1924, $12,000.
City court, $1,800, the same.
Highway, $9,000, the same.
Sewer upkeep $450, same.
General expense, $3,500; last year $3,000.
Street lighting $8,500, same.
City clerk, $400, same.
City treasurer $400, same.
Interest account $5,400, last year $4,800.
Janitor $480, same.

As the grand list will be a little less than last year the same rate of taxation will be recommended 9 1-2 mills for general expenses, and an additional 1 1-2 mills to pay the interest and part of the bonded sewer debt.

It was the sentiment of the meeting that reductions should be made whereever possible and no increase except when absolutely necessary. It was on the recommendation of Charles H. Brown, city treasurer, that the general expense account was increased by $500 and the interest account by $600.

All property owners whose land is proposed to be taken or affected, or who may be damaged in any day are directed to appear at this hearing and present their claims.

The Putnam Light and Power Company was given permission to extend a high tension line to the plant of the National Rhea Mfg. Company. The council has received complaints that the Central Fire station was not kept warm enough, and Albert Light, city janitor, was asked to appear at the meeting Tuesday evening to explain. He protested that he was not at fault, that he kept the fire going as strongly as possible on cold nights, but that some one would leave the doors of the station house open and naturally the building grew cold.

Mrs. Ada M. Webster sent a letter to the Council complaining of the condition in which her driveway had been left after the building of a gutter on Walnut street. The matter was laid over until the next meeting.

A vote was passed setting the time for a hearing on the layout of certain streets for Tuesday, March 3, at 7.30 o'clock in the evening. The proposed new streets or the extensions of others include the following: Church St, north of the present accepted portion to a poin tnear the home of L. F. Battey; Cottage street, south of Woodstock avenue; Nichols street for 277 feet east of School street; Alpha St, for a distance of 230 feet east of Mechanics street; Mill street for a distance of 339 feet from Providence St., Morse st street between Church street and Mill street, Gilman street and Maple street, near Church street.

The home of Dr. Gardner Miller at Providence was broken into Saturday night, and the burglar who, according to the chauffeur's story fired at him, got more than $500 from a safe, but overlooked several times that amount in money and bonds. Dr. Miller, formerly lived in Putnam, and still maintains a country home at Thompson, a short distance from the city. During his residence here his daughter, Florence Miller, married Sir William Bereford of London, brother of Admiral Charles Bereford. The story of the burglary follows:

A presentment something was wrong at Dr. Gardner Miller's house, 286 Benefit street, Providence, led his chauffeur, Irving Wheeler, 27, to get out of bed at his home, 8 Hopkins street, an 2.30 o'clock this morning, and go there, to surprise an armed burglar, who got away with $525 in money, so the chauffeur told the police.

Wheeler, the personification of fidelity to the Millers, the police were told, let himself in with his key to the house, and snapped on the electric lights, he says. The burglar fired a shot and escaped through a window, the chauffeur told the aroused household. The Miller safe was found rifled of money, but $3,610 in Liberty bonds and stocks, at first believed stolen, were found in the bottom of it. Dr. Miller recalled having put them there. Mrs. Miller's platinum—diamond ring, a prized possession, was found in the jewel case, which had been removed from the safe. About $50 or $60, $5 of which was in gold, was gone from Mrs. Miller's Japanese silk embroidered purse. Dr. Miller said he did not lock the safe although he shut the door. The chauffeur awoke, as if after a dream; hustled into his clothes and hurried up to the Benefit street house, around the corner, so the story goes.

Wheeler is quoted as saying that as he let himself in and opened the door from the hallway to the sitting room, he saw a man in a small room off the sitting room where the doctor's safe is. Wheeler, who is very tall, said the burglar was a white man, about 5 feet 6 inches in height and about 30 or 35 years of age, wearing light clothes. The burglar, on being surprised, fired a shot at Wheeler and the then jumped through a window which had been left open. This shot went through a curtain and through the glass. The police said that they did not see how the shot holes lined up with the spot at which the burglar stood, according to Wheeler's story. They added that Dr. Miller, whose life Wheeler once saved, and Mrs. Miller were perfectly satisfied with the story.

Lieut. Harry F. Drown and the reserves from the Fountain street station went to Dr. Miller's house on the receipt of a telephone call from there, at three o'clock in the morning. Inspector Lewis F. Godfrey and Headquarters Sergeant William A. MacKay were called to the house soon after. The chauffeur went over the story of the robbery there and at 8.30 this morning, retold it to the investigators and Capt. John T. Haran at headquarters.

Soon after he left the police building and officials of the detective bureau said they had nothing to say.

At the meeting of Putnam Lodge of Elks Tuesday evening the chairs were filled by past exalted rulers. Archibald Macdonald presided as exalted ruler, J. J. McGarry was esteemed leading knight, Proper Vigiard, esteemed lecturing knight, Edward W. Mullan, esteemed loyal knight, Lucius P. Merriam, esquire, Walter J. Bartlett, chaplain. Her motion was supported by a number of the members, and opposition from as many more. Miss Cheney's resolution to refer was lost, with but few of the members voting for it.

Miss Cheney had offered a resolution notifying the action of congress. Miss Cheney, in opening her address, said that for the second time within a few days, she saw the approaching shadow of an eclipse." It drew hearty laughter from the members.

The debate lasted for an hour and a half and was brought to close by Sturgess of Woodbury moving the previous question.

The vote taken by roll call resulted in 238 votes being cast of which 7 were in favor of the passage of the resolution and 231 were against. Of the 15 lady members 4 (Miss Cheney of Manchester, Mrs. Fennimon of Naugatuck, Mrs. Townsend of New Haven and Mrs. Crawford of Westport) voted in favor. The senate was in session six minutes and adjourned to Thursday at 11.15 a. m.

Notes

The weekly meeting of the Farmers' association drew a good attendance, several of the lady members always being in there.

Tax Commissioner Blodgett was the speaker this morning and discussed the problem of unequal assessments in the small towns, especially as it affects the state aid as given to these towns. Mr. Blodgett quoted several concrete cases. He was given the closest attention. Any one that would study the faces of the farmers as Mr. Blodgett was speaking would think for a moment that they were a lot of "hayseeds."

It requires quick thinking on the part of any speaker to answer the pertinent questions that are sure to be showered upon him.

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, Feb. 11—Willimantic was well represented at the hearing before the judiciary committee on H. B. 273 introduced by Mr. Weatherhead of Windham. At the present time the charter of the City of Willimantic requires that the judge of the city court shall appoint as prosecuting attorney some person who is of an opposite political faith from himself. The proposed bill will make it possible for the judge to use his own judgment in the matter. The bill was sponsored by Weatherhead and Pomeroy, representatives from Windham, Sheriff Chas. A. Gates, N. A. Daniels, Alderman Wm. E. Jackson, Walter King and Raymond Gates, all of Willimantic Thomas J. Kelly and acting mayor Hickey, opposed the bill and predicted dire results if it was passed and proposed that it be left to a vote of the city as to whether the present condition should be changed.

S. B. 58, introduced by Senator Robbins by request an act concerning sale of electrical appliances by municipalities, has been withdrawn. It did not meet with the approval of Senator Robbins.

RADIO BROADCASTING BILL BEFORE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Hartford, Feb. 11—Opposition to a bill that would require the state to do something to prevent noises on the air which interfere with reception on radio sets, was expressed to the judiciary committee of the legislature today. The bill was unsupported so the committee was unable to ascertain what means might be adopted to clear the air for radio broadcasting. On the other hand those in opposition claimed that state could do nothing unless it stopped every electric light and telephone circuit, every battery charger which sent out electrical emanations, and every machine or vehicle which in operation gave out an impulse on the ether. The nearest approach the committee came to authorship of the measure was that some amateur radio operators or experimenters wanted the air to themselves. The committee was informed also that the state had no jurisdiction in the matter as the federal government had taken jurisdiction and also was trying to control some problems of radio broadcasting.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Farmer Brown's Boy is Worried

The kindly heart has always thought
For those by grim misfortune caught.
—Blacky the Crow.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked out on a world of glistening white. It was a beautiful world. As jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun climbed above the tree tops it seemed as if millions of diamonds were flashing everywhere. Yes indeed, it was a beautiful world.

But the face of Farmer Brown's Boy wore a worried look. "It looks to me as if there is a hard crust," he muttered. "Yes, siree, it looks to me as if there is a hard crust. That means trouble for a lot of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Some of them are going to go hungry unless I look out for them. This is certainly going to be hard for a lot of them, and the sooner I get out the better."

So Farmer Brown's Boy hurried through his breakfast and took a lot of food out for the birds and other little people. Such a welcome as they gave him! They hardly waited for him to spread it. Then Farmer Brown's Boy looked over the Green Forest. "I'm afraid it's going to be hard on Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse. I'm worried about them. If they're caught under this crust it will go hard with them. Yes, sir, it will go hard with them. I'm afraid they will starve to death. I do hope they slept in a tree last night."

All the time he was doing his morning's chores he kept thinking about Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. As soon as he could get away he started for the Green Forest. The crust was so hard that he could walk on it without breaking through. "I know," said he, "where those Grouse have been feeding lately and where they have been sleeping. Several times lately I have found the holes left by them when they came out of the snow. I'll just go over there and see if they are anywhere around. I'll take some food for them."

But when he got over there, course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw nothing of Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse and heard nothing of them. He looked everywhere. His face grew more worried looking than ever. "They were not up in the Old Orchard after apple buds," said he, "for I came through there. They are not anywhere around here unless they are somewhere under this dreadful crust."

Then Farmer Brown's Boy began a careful search all about. Finally he discovered what looked as if there might have been two holes in the snow which had been filled in. They were just below a certain spruce tree. He looked at them thoughtfully. Then he looked up in the spruce tree.

"If those Grouse were up in that tree and plunged into the snow for the night this is about where they would have gone in," said he. "Of course they would have worked quite a way under the snow. I believe I'll just break the crust all around here. Then if they are underneath they may have a chance to escape." So by stamping with his feet Farmer Brown's Boy broke the crust for some distance all around.

Suddenly there was a startling roar of stout wings right behind him. He turned to see Mrs. Grouse shaking the snow from her wings as she flew and disappeared among the trees. A moment later Thunderer burst out behind him in the same way. Farmer Brown's boy laughed softly. "I've saved them!" he exclaimed. "I guessed right. They were caught under that crust and by breaking this I've set them free."

As for Mr. and Mrs. Grouse, their hearts were filled with gratitude to Farmer Brown's Boy.

RED PIMPLES ITCHED BADLY

Neck and Chest Broken Out. Cuticura Healed.

"My daughter's neck and chest were very badly broken out with red pimples that festered and itched badly. She scratched the affected parts and caused the trouble to spread. At night she could not sleep and the breaking out caused disfigurement.

"I tried everything I could think of but nothing helped her. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more, and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. E. B. Cross, 81 Seneca Parkway, Rochester, N. Y.

CONNECTICUT SAYS "NO."

Connecticut has voiced through the legislature its opposition to the child labor amendment. The vote in both the senate and the house disclosed how little support there was for it and how general the feeling that it undertook to place under government control a matter which should rest with the state, and unless we are mistaken it registers the sentiment of the people against further centralization of government in Washington.

It is a bit unusual for the legislature to dispose of matters without first submitting them to committees for hearings. In this instance there would of course be no harm done if that course had been followed. It would have provided something for the federal relations committee to do and it would have permitted a long and loud presentation in behalf of a small minority, requiring the time and the attention of the opponents of the amendment. It would have meant the use of a lot of time for the accomplishment of nothing more than has been done. The refusal to send the amendment to a committee has been a means of saving time. Had the vote upon it in either branch of the general assembly been close there would have been ground for feeling that a hearing should have been held, but the appearance of only eight votes in its favor indicated that the sentiment of the legislature was properly judged in advance. In view of such an inevitable outcome the short cut to a decision worked no injustice, and there has been disposed of in a week what might have been dragged along with no different results for a month or the whole session.

Connecticut has registered its opposition to this proposed amendment with nearly one-half of the states, and it has voiced its opinion in a manner which is unmistakable and certainly gives no impression that there is likely to be any change of heart, or any regrets over the refusal to ratify. Connecticut's "no" is emphatic.

THE COLLINS CASE.

Keen interest has been displayed during the past week in the fight for a life at Cave City, Ky. It is an unusual affair and one that has caused many a person to express surprise that a man should be caught in such a predicament. Some cannot understand why he should be crawling about underground and inviting the trouble he has experienced.

Human nature is highly diversified. There are those individuals with hobbies which amuse others because they happen to have a bent in another direction. It is hard for instance for some to understand why persons should want to risk their lives as human flies, in climbing mountains, in going into unknown jungles, into the polar regions, or in doing a great many other things that are out of the ordinary but which have a special appeal to certain ones.

Exploring caves is no different than many other chance taking propositions from which it is expected some new information, or some new avenue to the public pocketbook, may be disclosed. Floyd Collins is not the only one who has sought to locate new underground caverns in that part of Kentucky where they are known to exist, and in spite of the handicaps and dangers, it is possible that the attractions in that direction are quite as great as they would be in tackling some of the other stunts for which most individuals have no liking, but about which they are eager to read whether the venture proves successful or not.

It makes little difference where a human being is lost or trapped, there is bound to be an eagerness to find or release him. What is being done for Collins is no more, or in fact as much, as has been done for many another. Great efforts have been made to recover mountain climbers, explorers and hunters. Because this Kentucky case is less remote from civilization than most of the instances more attention is being directed to it, but Collins, under the presumption that his predicament is a real one, is only one of many whose willingness to take a risk has brought him to nationwide attention.

COAL MINE EXPLOSIONS.

Where mine accidents are due to the explosion of coal dust, it is insisted by the director of mines that not only can they be prevented but that they are actually being prevented in England and France. That being the case the indictment is a serious one when it is shown that such explosions caused the death of 452 bituminous coal miners in the year just closed.

Must we shoulder this responsibility as one of the instances where we fail to give heed to the importance of preventive measures? Do we stand in the same position in regard to the distressing situation resulting from coal mine explosions that we do regarding fire prevention? European countries are pointed out to us as examples of what can and should be done by this country in the way of reduced fire losses. Reports show that those countries have so such fire losses as the United States. The answer is that proper care is exercised to prevent them, and that we have failed year after year to profit by the lesson.

Prevention of coal mine explosions, when dust is responsible, has been found by experiments to lie in the sprinkling of the floors of mines with ordinary shale dust. When such a simple method of dealing with such a serious problem is available there is good reason for general adoption.

Time and again it has been necessary to obtain legislation in order to establish needed safeguards. Legislation has imposed requirements upon all those disposed to provide protection and those who ignored them. Perhaps it will be necessary for the states to legislate in this matter, although the fact that such disasters as distress the country from time to time can be prevented should be a sufficient reason for preventive action waiting to be forced to do something of a protective nature.

If this solution is a satisfactory one there can be no further excuse for coal mine explosions due to the coal dust.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The anniversary of Abraham Lincoln is one that may well be marked by the country in which and for which he did so much. His character and policies have probably had as great an influence as those of any man who has labored for the welfare of his fellow citizens, or of any president who has struggled for the welfare of the nation.

It has been said of Lincoln that he cut his way with an ax. It may also be said that he made his way and gained his success through the common sense manner of tackling and solving problems. There was nothing in the way of ostentation displayed by Abraham Lincoln. His was the straightforward course, the greatest good for the greatest number and he had the courage of his convictions when it came to standing up for what he considered right.

As one of the commoN people he made a special appeal, and to a large degree because of his simplicity, his honesty, his determination, his fight for the right, his unbending faith, his democratic principles and his leadership under trying conditions he stands forth as the great national figure. As the years have gone by there has been a greater and greater appreciation of the man who began as a rail splitter and ended in the white house.

His was a career that gave men hopes and set an example which cannot be kept too prominently before coming generations. Let his birthday anniversary be fittingly observed and let it be not left entirely to the exercises in the schools. His influence makes its appeal not solely on this anniversary, but each year there may well be concentration of special consideration of the man and his accomplishments.

BACKING GOOD GOVERNMENT.

Confidence was indirectly expressed in Governor Trumbull when Governor Hingham was elected to the United States senate, since it was understood that Lieutenant-Governor Trumbull would succeed to the governorship.

In view of the service that he had rendered on the finance committee as a senator, there was in formation in advance of the type of an administration he would favor as chief executive, but there was nevertheless good and sufficient reason for the resolutions that were this week adopted by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce approving his recommendations for a state fiscal policy "similar to that employed by large and successful business corporations, whereby income is determined and expenditures then fixed in accordance therewith."

This means a recognition of the businesslike basis upon which he desires to place the state whenever it is found otherwise, and to maintain it where it exists, and the state organization likewise makes no mistake in commending the work of the state board of finance, appropriations and finance committees of the past three sessions of the legislature for their work is bringing the state to its present financial position.

It is the hope of Connecticut that the governor's policies may be carefully carried out, that legislation may be sane and expenditures and taxation kept on a sound basis. When the state organization pledges its support in the protection of the state treasury it speaks for the state as a whole.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Lincoln day provides the first opportunity of the new year for the display of your flag.

The man on the corner says: It is not very often that February can be referred to as a month of mud.

When Nevada seeks to have the prohibition amendment reconsidered it can expect to get no support from the bootleggers.

Those thrilling days when a runaway horse created the big excitement are now replaced by those of the automobile accidents.

Walter Johnson's decision to abandon the ownership idea and return to the mound will not be disappointing news to Washington fans.

There are localities where the spirit of strike is as contagious as the measles, and others where it encounters the same rebuff that disease does in antitoxin.

If Europe is cold to a new arms parley now it is to be remembered that the administration has been saying for some time that the time was not propitious.

Sentences ranging from two years to life for crimes ranging from auto theft to murder at Boston indicates the recognition by the court of the need of doing its part to prevent crime.

An effort is being made to get the Massachusetts legislature to ratify the child labor amendment, and this comes after the legislature has been told in an overwhelming referendum vote to refuse to ratify. There should be no question what the legislature will do.

GOOD MEMORIES

"I met somebody today whom we used to know away back before the war," declared Loretta. "Really, I believe it's ten or twelve years since we met."

"I'll bet it was that pretty Lucy Lane," cried her brother, sitting up from the depths of an easy chair. "Why the dickens didn't you bring her home to spend the afternoon and have dinner? Did she ask after me? Did she say how long she's going to be in town?"

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" cried Loretta, laughing. "Don't get in the least bit excited, for it wasn't a girl at all, but Sam Watkins. You remember him, a tall man with black hair and gray eyes and a masterful sort of way with him, don't you?"

"I presume he never used that masterful way with me," chuckled her brother, subsiding into the easy chair again. "A fellow like that has to be masterful with mere girls, because he knows real men wouldn't stand for such stuff.

"And why shouldn't he put it over when the girls remember it all their lives as something charming about him? They gaze at each other soulfully and sadly and one girl asks another does she remember Sam Watkins, who had such a dominating personality that he was irresistible? And the other sighs deeply and declares longingly that she wishes she knew what he was doing at that moment and is he married or anything?"

"How silly!" exclaimed Loretta. "You almost make me forget what I intended to say about him. I was in a department store when I came face to face with him and he took me up to the tearoom for refreshments. He was just passing through Chicago and had two hours to kill, so he was glad to meet me instead of seeing a part of a movie. After we had eaten we adjourned to some wicker chairs by the elevators and had a real nice chat. I certainly enjoyed talking over the fun we used to have when he was here in college."

"Sweet memories, sweet memories!" chanted her brother derisively. "I don't remember much about him, though, of course, if I had known at the time that my only sister was going to see him again and admire him so deeply I should have sized him up better at the time. Wasn't he sort of skinny and a little stoop-shouldered?"

"He was slender, and, of course, being a student, he didn't stand as straight as some persons who never opened a book," Loretta told him indignantly. "But he isn't slender any longer and he's sensitive about it."

"Well, what did your fat friend have to say?" asked her brother.

"I started him off by asking if he remembered certain dances and picnics," Loretta said. "And he changed the subject and told me a lot about his experiences during the war and how he was decorated."

"Yes," said her brother, solemnly. "When they talk to girls they've all been decorated, some several times."

"He was really very modest," Loretta declared. "And sometimes he grew almost pathetic in the pictures he drew and the comments he made. He really is very well educated, and so he can tell a story with a good deal of power and quite a thrill."

"Give me a good-looking girl sitting opposite me," said her brother, "and I can do marvels, too, in the way of story telling."

"He told me of one night when they were expecting the enemy to attack at any moment and he thought he should be killed, or at least badly hurt," Loretta went on. "And he said his thoughts had turned to me, and he wondered how I would feel if I read his name in the paper, and whether I'd care."

"How touching!" cried her brother. "I hope you were good to him."

"Yes, I think I was," laughed Loretta as she picked up the book she had been reading. "I seemed properly grateful and impressed, and I never said a word when he called me Agnes and so showed that he hadn't such an awfully good memory after all."—Chicago News.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Partnerships.

Partnerships as sucmh are not subject to the income tax, but are required to make returns on Form 1065 showing gross and net income. The net income of a partnership is computed in the same manner and on the same basis as the net income of an individual, except that deductions for contributions or gifts are not permitted.

Individual members are taxed on the distributive shares of a partnership, whether distributed or not, and are required to include such shares in the individual return of income, though they may not have been actually received.

Every partnership must make a return regardless of the amount of its net income, or even if it has no net income. The return must show the name and address of each partner and the amount of the distributive share of the net income, if any, of each. Any one of the partners may sign and swear to the return, which may cover the calendar or fiscal year, according to the firm's method of accounting.

Where the result of a partnership operation is a net loss, the loss is divisible by the taxpayer in the same proportion as net income would have been divisible and may be taken by the partners in their individual returns of income. However, if the partnership agreement provides for the division of a loss in a manner different from the division of a gain such proportionate losses may be deducted by the partners as so agreed.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Earle B. Mayfield, who has won his fight for a seat in the United States senate, was the successful candidate for the democratic senatorial nomination in Texas in 1922, but his election was contested on the allegation that his victory was due to a conspiracy of the Ku Klux Klan and to an excessive expenditure of money. These charges have now been dismissed by the senate committee on privileges and elections. Though still comparatively young in years Mr. Mayfield is a veteran in Texas politics. When 25 years old he was elected to the Texas senate. He served two terms in that body and then was elected to the state railroad commission, which office he held for ten years. He is a native of Overton, Texas, his father being a wealthy merchant of that place. The senator attended Southwestern university, at Georgetown, Texas, for four years, completing his law course there. He was admitted to the bar when 21 and began practice at Meridian, Texas.

Herr Had to Wait Before He Could Try For College.

In his boyhood days, E. M. Herr preferred work to school; after circumstances compelled him to go to work he determined to acquire an education, but was told he did not know enough to enter college.

During the summer vacations in his home city of Denver, the lad got a job as messenger for the Western Union Telegraph Company because his father, although well-to-do, believed boys should be busy. Keenly interested in telegraphy, Edward, during the school season, spurned his bed, slid down the water pipe and went to the telegraph office, where he learned operating at night.

Then came financial reverses to the family and at 16 he had to go to work as telegrapher. Next he was Kansas Pacific railway station agent at little Deer Creek, working 16 hours a day and sleeping in the station at night. In spare time he acted as election clerk, secretary of the school board and in like capacities.

Soon appreciating that he must acquire further knowledge to advance in life, he quit work at 18 and with his small savings sought entrance to the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale university—and was told that he did not possess sufficient knowledge to pass the entrance examinaions.

After intensive study for a year he passed the tests and by tutoring and doing odd jobs earned his way to graduation at 24. Then he became apprentice in a railroad shop and won promition until he was assistant engineer of tests. Next with a locomotive works in Chicago, he was general superintendent when the concern failed in the panic of 1893. Now 33, he was out of a job.

To broaden his knowledge he went to Europe, then took another railroad job. At 38 he was invited by George Westinghouse to be assistant general manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Corporation. Then came a slow and gradual climb, and at 51 he was elected president of the organization, the largest of the Westinghouse group, and pioneer in the field of radio manufacturing.

Today at 64, Herr still directs the company with its 45,000 employes at East Pittsburgh, and is interested in other business organizations.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

CHILD TRAINING

IN PRIVATE
E. M. Megraw

Eight of them sat at table and each had a fling at Dickie—grandparents and parents, sister and brother—and their missiles, though only of words, were sharp and stinging and Dickie grew "madder" every minute.

He seemed a tough little proposition, it is true. He had pitched greedily into the feeding process as soon as he had noisily and rudely taken possession of his chair.

Grandfather and Grandmother looked frowningly at him. Their projectiles began with "In my day—"

"Look at those hands!" big sister demanded of the company in general. "I'd be afraid to eat the bread they touched, but Dick seemed to thrive on a germ diet."

Big brother's ammunition required a big gun, he raised his voice for the mention of some perfectly awful thing Dickie had done that day, and Dickie's shortcomings, which were generally very short indeed, were resurrected and hammered at one after another.

Father looked as fierce as a South Sea Islander as he said, "I'll tend to you later."

There was no such ugly trouble in the family near by, though it included a boy of Dickie's age and proclivities. For fault in the presence of the family, a quiet "Go to your room, Tommy," from his mother was sufficient.

It was true that one might have thought Thomas had been shod by the blacksmith judging by the noise he made climbing the steps, but he obeyed. One cannot expect ill temper to be wiped out magically, only that it be treated sensibly and considerately, regard for the child's future regulating word and action.

Dickie's mother visiting Tommy's mother on one of these occasions, appreciated the even flow of cheerful conversation that continued uninterrupted by Tommy's deflection. It was so different from the general squabble in her own home that followed misbehavior by Dickie.

When Tommy's mother reappeared, and her son had dashed out of doors to his play, the less successful mother put her plea:

"Please tell me how you settle things so easily. I can't do anything with Dickie. I believe he takes a pride in his successful rebellions."

"I make it a rule never to correct Tommy in the presence of others," her friend answered quietly. "Notice that tree," she continued, pointing through the window to a fine, straight little beauty. "A few months after it was planted it began to lean. I set the gardener to work. He drove a strong stake, the top pointing as directly to the sky as if a plummet had been hung as a guide from the cloud above it, and to it he fastened the young, growing thing. Not with flimsy strings that would break in a day—as inefficient as intermittent discipline—nor did he pull it violently into place allowing others to join in the rough treatment. No, alone he tied it with strong bands neither harsh nor confining, leaving it room to grow true to the guide, upright. My dear, a mother may be the strength that will keep the child growing straight, bound and protected by bands that will not break—truth, affection, respect. The child respects the mother who shows respect for him. One of the ways of doing this is by recognizing his one, inviolable right—correction in private."

Stories That Recall Others

Choice Places Taken

"A Mormon was on his death bed and one anxious little wife was waiting patiently outside when the doctor came out of the room. In a tearful voice she asked the physician if there were any hopes for the beloved husband.

"No," said the doctor in a grave voice, "there is none."

"May I then," asked the wife, "go in and sit at his bedside during the last moments?"

"Yes, madam, but hurry, most of the choice places are already taken."

NEARLY INSANE AT TIMES

Knoxville, Tenn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while going through the Change of Life. I was very nervous, could not sleep and had melancholy spells. In fact, I was nearly insane at times and my memory was almost a blank. I was so weak I could not do my housework half of the time and suffered dreadfully with my back. My doctor said I would have to worry it out and I went through this for three years before I began taking the Vegetable Compound which I saw advertised. I think it was eight bottles that I took. It has been two years since I took any and I haven't had a doctor since for that trouble. I do all my washing and ironing and I have gained from 116 to 138 pounds. I advise all women who suffer physically and mentally as I did to give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. I hope it will do as much for them as it did for me."—Mrs. T. A. SAUNDERS, 711 E. WOULD PROBE RISE IN PRICE OF GASOLINE

Hartford, Feb. 11—Following a conference today with Governor Trumbull, Senator John G. Butler, of Roxbury laid before the judiciary committee a draft of a bill calling for an immediate investigation by a special committee of the legislature of the rise in the price of gasoline in Connecticut. The senator pointed out that the wholesale price of gasoline had advanced 61 per cent. since last summer and that the retail price had increased correspondingly. He said that the reason advanced by some of the large distributors, that the reserve supply was nearly exhausted, was combatted by the United States bureau of mines and that the public was entitled to all the facts in the case.

Senate Leader Daniel M. Cronin said tonight that the judiciary committee had had the bill under consideration yesterday afternoon in executive session, but had come to no decision. It will come up in the committee before tomorrow's session. There was a question of procedure involved, according to the senate leader, who will confer tomorrow with Senator Butler and Governor Trumbull.

Senator Butler said he did not think the state would have the power to fix gasoline prices, whatever the result of the investigation, but that public opinion would force the prices down if it should be brought out under oath that the distributors were realizing abnormal profits as a result of a rise in prices justified by them on the statement that the condition of the reserves necessitated it.

SHORTAGE OF FUNDS FOR WORK AT THE NAVY YARDS

Washington, Feb. 11—Owing to a shortage of funds, work at the navy yard on both the Pacific Coast and Atlantic coast will be curtailed beginning March 1.

Monthly appropriations for all of the plants during the remainder of this fiscal year will be reduced, resulting, it was explained, in the possible laying off of men and a shortened week for others in the regular forces.

The principal yards to be affected are the Mare Island, Puget Sound, New York, Philadelphia, and Norfolk plants. Inquiry at the navy department by senators brought the information that monthly allotment for the Mare Island yard will be reduced to $95,000 and that for the Puget Sound plant to $85,000.

The Atlantic Coast plants, senators said they were informed, probably will be more seriously affected, since there is not as much necessity for work at those plants as at the Pacific Coast yards.

FRENCH DEPUTIES IN WAR DEBT IMBROGLIO

Paris, Feb. 11.—(By The A. P.)—Leaders of the government majority in the chamber of deputies, in agreement with Premier Herriot, have brought parliament into the war debt imbroglio. Conferences between the premier, Finance Minister Clementel and spokesmen for both the radical and socialist parties, have been held recently to discuss the situation with the result that the chamber's finance committee today nominated a sub-committee "to study questions involved in the settlement of war debts."

In view of the rather unusual proceeding to bring parliament into a question which is the object of diplomatic negotiations, the action of the finance committee, in accord with Premier Herriot's part to have more backing in the difficult negotiations ahead of him.

GIANT OF IND. SAND DUNES CRAZED BY DEATH OF WIFE

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Crazed by sorrow, Paul Winson, giant of the Indiana sand dunes and husband of Mrs. Alice Gray Wilson, known as "Diana of the Dunes" drew a pistol in the midst of funeral services for his wife today and threatened to kill two men.

As a result he was taken to Gary, Ind., police station while his wife was laid to rest in a Gary cemetery. The men threatened were a relative of Mrs. Wilson and a newspaperman. In the midst of the services the giant husband of the woman who, though a college graduate, forsook the society of humans for the solitude of the dunes where she met and married Wilson, suddenly threw himself on the casket, weeping. Then he rose and drawing a pistol, announced he intended to kill two men. Relatives took the weapon away from him.

MERIT BADGES AWARDED TO SCOUTS AT COURT OF HONOR

In the absence of the president, Arthur L. Peale, a former council president, presided at the meeting, which was opened with assembly blown by the bugler. This was followed by the scout salute to the court after which Mr. Peale gave an interesting talk on leadership. Mr. Peale said in his talk that boys will either be leaders or followers and that the Boy Scout movement tends to make leaders.

Mr. Peale's talk was followed by the announcement of the names of scouts attaining the first class since the last court of honor. The list was as follows:

Boy Scout's Composition.

Among those awarded merit badges was Reginald Avery. He read a composition entitled Working For My Gardening Merit Badge. The composition follows:

There are four requirements listed in the Scout Hand Book for the passing of the gardening merit badge. Out of these, two had to be executed. I picked out the first and third on which I have been working during my vacation. Also another requirement is to write a composition on all the work that you have accomplished. My duty was to keep the back and front yard in good condition, lawns mowed, rubbish cleaned up, etc. Besides this I had to raise a garden and from it obtain five dollars at least.

I began my work on May 19, 1924, by mowing the front and side lawns. Practically through the summer vacation and into the school term I worked on the lawns, kept the sticks and rubbish cleared up, planted a flower garden in the back yard, and kept things looking well in general. The record will give a complete outline of what I have done.

I started my yearly vegetable garden June 9. According to the lateness of the season my garden was rather late. Beginning the work I planted a good deal of string beans, the kind being the Golden Wax. These grew well and reaped me a good harvest. Next I planted corn, the Country Gentlemen, a white, small kernel breed, but which was very nice eating. Of this corn I am still gathering dozens of ears now and will have some until the frost nips it. I then put in a considerable amount of lettuce, the curly and head. Of this I did not have an abundant harvest for the simple reason that it went to seed in the hot weather before it was large enough for marketing, although I did get rid of about five dozen. I planted as many as a hundred and fifty plants. Then as soon as possible I planted pumpkins, squashes and cucumbers. I raised the small sugar pumpkin which is famous throughout New England. Of this I have had good results. Although I have not yet harvested my pumpkins there are a great many lying in the field, ripening up. I planted the Hubbard squash and the yellow Marrow squash, two good winter varieties. These turned out also to be a good success as I have quite a number. I also planted such minor things as celery, cabbage, tomatoes, peppers, carrots and radishes. I had quite a crop of the early Goble radishes of which I sold quite a number. The carrots I have not yet harvested but they will soon be ready to pull. Such vegetables as tomatoes, celery and cabbages I only planted a very few. Even now I have some nice tomatoes and a considerable number of green ones on the vines. My summer squashes, the crook-neck variety, turned out very well and they have supplied our family with all the summer squashes we could eat and I still have some. I have not sold half of the vegetables yet that I intend to sell because the squashes and pumpkins are my chief standby. I have figured a total so far of about $11.41. My expenses being about $1.55, I had a balance of $10.86. This is of course not reckoning the money I shall probably get from my other vegetables.

Repetition of the pledge of allegiance to the flag and the blowing of taps by the bugler brought the meeting to a close.

PROGRAMME FOR ITALIAN NIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

Notwithstanding the stormy evening a large number of the Italians of Norwich gathered at the local Y. M. C. A. on Wednesday night by special invitation of the management of the association.

B. P. Bishop, vice president of the Y. M. C. A., and chairman of the educational committee, presided and welcomed the visitors warmly in well chosen words. He urged the audience to be loyal to country, and to home and to be thrifty. Four reels of moving pictures on Columbus were shown and frequently the audience heartily applauded as the high points of the discoverer's experiences were portrayed on the screen. Mr. Bishop introduced President James C. Macpherson of the association, and he held the close interest of all present by his brief address on Americanization. He dwelt on the great accomplishment of Columbus, the great Italian, and urged them to never cease to revere the memory of the great men of Italy. He urged them to loyalty to America and to the flag of their adopted country.

Several slides of the great characters of America were thrown on the screen, including Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Roosevelt, Wilson and Coolidge, and Mr. Macpherson told briefly of what these men had meant to America. He was frequently interrupted by applause which indicated the deep interest the Italian visitors have in our America.

After the pictures the entire company was shown over the building, including the fine swimming pool. Evidently the guests enjoyed the hospitality of the Y. M. C. A.

The music which added so much to the pleasure of the evening was kindly furnished by Hugh Kinder.

BOY'S SKULL FRACTURED IN FALL FROM PORCH

About 1 o'clock Wednesday morning Edward Chmielewski, aged 6 years and 27 days, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Chmielewski, fell from the railing of the porch on the third floor of his home No. 149 Franklin street and he was so badly injured that he died on the way to the hospital. The child was playing on the porch with his brother when he climbed to the top of the railing and losing his balance fell over.

The child landed on a lower wooden step leading to the first story tenement. An occupant of the building carried the suffering child upstairs to his home and Dr. John W. Callahan was called. Seeing that the boy was in a serious condition he started to take him to the hospital in his machine but the child died on the way. He had received a fractured skull.

The boy leaves his parents and two brothers, Stanley and Leonard Chmielewski. He was in the first grade at St. Joseph's school.

BIMBO REPEATED BEFORE GOOD SIZED HOUSE

The second presentation of Bimbo, the Musical Romance of the South Seas, was presented Wednesday evening at the Palace theatre, under the adspices of the American Legion, with an audience of 700, and the members of the cast displayed fine ability well meriting the applause they received during the production.

Miss Eunice Taft as Sylvia Vandeveer, the American heiress, again played her role in a manner most admirable and she was ably supported by J. Warren Kane as Jack Damon, her lover. All the principals displayed fine talent in their presentations and the musical and dance numbers were well received.

The play ran off with a smoothness that is characteristic of professional performances and the audience was ready with applause and quick to appreciate the efforts to please. Having considerable comedy interwoven with a triple love plot, the play afforded plenty of opportunity for individual effort and every member of the cast handled his part admirably.

The principal song hits of the play, Bimbo Land, In a Bungalow for Two, Come Dance an Old Fashioned Waltz, Little Boy Blue, Romance Land, Same Sort of Love and Toddle Town received the same reception as on Tuesday evening and there were repeated calls for encores.

Carl Lyons and the girls in the old fashioned waltz earned applause which caused them to repeat several times and Miss Taft with the Boys took the house by storm in the dance and song number in Little Boy Blue. As usual the song and dance number Toddle Town was a feature and William Mitchell as soloist was called back for several encores and the number Jingle Jungle Melody by Herbert McNeeley and the South Sea Island Belles was also a feature.

The entire production was presented in a capable manner and showed great ability in professional acting among the members of the cast, featuring the second annual production of the American Legion.

In spite of the weather a jolly crowd appeared and the affair proved to be a huge success. The committee in charge of the affair were as follows: Mrs. Esther Trachtenberg, chairman, Mrs. Charles Jacobson, Mrs. Rudolph Heschel, Mrs. Harry Roshberg, Mrs. Nathan Tractenberg, Mrs. Bessie Salomon.

The feature of the evening was a prize valentine elimination dance. Each couple was given a number. Corresponding numbers were put in a box. 18 MAKES OF CARS ON EXHIBITION AT ARMORY

Success greeted the opening of the automobile show at the state armory on Wednesday evening, when several hundred people visited the large drill shed and inspected the cars on exhibition. Thirty-six cars are being shown at the automobile show, which is being conducted by the Norwich dealers in the Used Car Exchange, nine dealers being represented by 18 makes of nationally known cars, the models including sedans, coupes, touring cars, and phaetons.

The drill shed presented a most attractive picture as one entered the armory, the booths being arranged to most advantageous manner to show a most elaborate display of all models in the show. Not only were the cars a sight worth seeing, but every automobile was set off to best advantage by the clever arrangements of decorations which had been placed by the firm of Hawkins the Florist. The inside of the drill shed is a fairyland of beauty. The entire ceiling has been enclosed in balloon effect, huge spans of light blue cloth shelled with nile green balloon streamers, forming a canopy beneath the girders. In the center of the hall is a beautiful big blue moon with a center drop, the smallest automobile at the show. Chain lights run to the corners of the hall. Blue moons are also placed at either end of the shed, small balloons and many colored lights making them most attractive. Southern smilax, palms and balloons also feature in the wall decorations. Cylindrical orange-tone lanterns hang at the corners of the hall, while the walls of the shed are draped entirely in blue and nile green, American flag runners making an attractive contrast of color. The archways and paths between the rows of machines are decorated with southern smilax, cut flowers and palms. The same color scheme is carried out in every booth, palms, ferns and baskets of flowers being elaborately placed about the hall.

The automobiles are placed along the sides of the drill shed and there is a row of cars down through the middle of the shed, leaving plenty of space for patrons to inspect the models on exhibition. Representatives of the dealers showing cars were at the booths at all times and readily explained details about their cars or offered advice in making selections.

Thirteen models of cars are being shown for the remainder of the week, most dealers having from three to five models on exhibition. In addition to automobile exhibits, a number of automobile accessory dealers have displays in the hall, and Ferguson, the Jeweler, has a fine display of radio machines and parts.

Right of drill shed: W. R. Friable, Reo cars, showing the Gold Standard 5 passenger sedan, Gold Standard coupe and the 20th Anniversary 5 passenger sedan. Mr. Friable also had on display a stripped-down Reo Six motor and a full line of parts, arranged on a parts board. The booth during the show will be in charge of Mr. Friable and employes of the company.

Thornton N. M. Lathrop is showing a Studebaker special six sedan, special six duplex phaeton, standard six duplex phaeton and a standard six sedan. The booth is in charge of H. E. Underhill and other Studebaker representatives.

The Motor Mart is showing Oakland and Chevrolet cars, four models being displayed, the Oakland landau sedan, Oakland coach, Chevrolet coach and a Chevrolet chassis, which gives one a view of the unseen things about a car. The booth is in charge of Abraham Krieger and Harry Rosoff.

The Jordan Auto company of Norwich and Willimantic is exhibiting four of their Dodge Brothers' cars, including the special type A sedan, new coach, business coupe and special touring car. Throughout the show the booth will be in charge of Roland B. Jordan, A. B. Small and C. E. Coon. In the center of the drill shed and at the front is the exhibit of Flint and Star cars by William F. Bailey. Four cars are being shown, the Flint 5 passenger winter enclosure, model 40, and the Star touring. Mr. Bailey is in charge of the booth.

Another exhibit is by the Norwich Motor Sales, Inc., showing five models of Hudson and Essex cars. These exhibits include the Hudson 7 passenger [illegible] Hudson 5 passenger sedan, Hudson coach, a Hudson chassis and [illegible]. This is one of the largest exhibits at the show, and the booth is in charge of Fred Preuix, Ernest D. White and Mr. Freeman.

On the left of the drill shed is the display of Maxwell and Chrysler cars by A. J. Herbert. Three models are displayed here, including the Maxwell club sedan, Maxwell special 4-door sedan and the Chrysler regular 5 passenger sedan. William Stinson and Mr. Herbert are attending the booth during the show.

Julian L. Williams is showing five new models of Buick cars, which include the master six coach, master six brougham sedan, master six 4 passenger coupe, standard six 4 passenger coupe and the standard six chassis. This large display is in charge of Mr. Williams, William A. Bottomley, Kenneth M. Webb and W. Russell Baird.

The Nash Motor company has four models of Nash cars on exhibition, including the Nash Advance six, four-door coupe, advance six 5 passenger sedan, advance six touring car with winter top and the Nash special six 5 passenger sedan. This booth is in charge of M. Bernard and Joseph F. Ring and William B. Miller, district wholesale representative of C. P. Rockwell of Boston.

Four automobile accessory dealers have fine exhibits at the show, the exhibit of Hill's Tire Shop including Dunlop cords and balloons and Yale cords and balloons. A. J. Scaff & Son are showing Flat-lite reflectors, Zenith carburators, Indian tires and other accessories. Watson's Stabilator company of Hartford have a fine display of their products and the Hinckley Motor Replacement company of Middletown is exhibiting its work.

There is also a booth occupied by the Automobile Digest, a magazine of interest to motorists.

In the main lobby is a fine display of radios exhibited by Ferguson, the Jeweler. This display includes many prominent makes, the Greve Synchrophase, Freed-Eisman, Fada, Temko, Gilfillan and the Magnavox. Mr. Ferguson is also displaying general radio parts and loud speakers. The prize radio was also exhibited at the booth and during the show, between concert numbers, music was rendered by radio operated by Herbert Ferguson.

As special attractions during the remaining days of the automobile show fine concert programs are to be rendered by D'Atri's Wauregan Hotel orchestra. In the Wednesday evening program the orchestra merited the well earned applause and their numbers were extremely well chosen. Additional entertainment was furnished by Arthur Roy and Mrs. Mary Mathieu of Willimantic, their solo and duet numbers being most pleasing.

The show continues for the remainder of the week, the hours being from 1 p. m. until 10 p. m. nightly, ending Saturday evening. Special musical programs have been planned for each evening in addition to orchestral renditions, Norwich's favorite tenor, Edward T. Connelly, having been secured for Friday and Saturday evenings.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germs.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

AGGIE FRESHMAN NOSE OUT SPRINGFIELD YEARLINGS IN CLOSE BATTLE, 24 TO 21

Storrs, Feb. 11—In a thrilling game here tonight the Connecticut Aggies Freshmen quintet chalked up its sixth consecutive victory by nosing out the Springfield College yearlings with a 24 to 21 score. The game, though clean and well played, was a battle royal throughout with neither team showing any decided advantage. By winning tonight the Aggie yearlings are still undefeated and the brand of play displayed against Springfield was easily the best shown during the season. Springfield scored first when Nordyke sanked two from the free throw line and followed with a doubledecker from the floor a moment later. Williams and Hadley then took a hand in the scoring and following fast floor work and clever passing the Aggies knotted the score. Springfield was leading 6 to 4 at the end of the first quarter.

Coming back strong the Aggies flashed a brand of play that could not be stopped and from then on the battle was on even terms. Four times in this period the score was tied and at half time Connecticut was leading 12 to 11. Springfield came back strong in the second half but not strong enough to overcome the slight advantage that Coach Alexander's men were showing at this time. The Aggies maintained a lead but at no time were they more than five points ahead of Springfield, and most of the time but one or two points separated the teams. In the closing minutes of the game Springfield resorted to long shots in an attempt to come from behind but to no avail. For Connecticut the work of Capt. Hadley on the offense and the guarding of Heller and Donohue was a feature. Connecticut guards were at a great disadvantage in playing the tall and husky Springfield forwards, but their hard playing more than overcame this disadvantage. James and Nordyke showed to the best advantage of the physical directors, scoring eight and twelve points respectively.

In the preliminary game Putnam High school defeated the school of agriculture by the score of 19 to 17. The score:

CHAPMAN TECH CANCELS GAME WITH NAUGATUCK

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 11—Chapman Technical High cancelled the regularly scheduled contest with Naugatuck High School five which was to take place at the school auditorium on Saturday evening. The reason is believed to be the recent expulsion of two members of the team which weakens the function of the quintet, thus bringing the play of the Red and Black below par. Unless arrangements are completed for a game on either Friday or Saturday, the Chapman Tech five will be seen in action but once this week and this was on Tuesday, when the Tech five was defeated by Windham High at the school auditorium.

The next game on the schedule is with Deep River at New London on Tuesday, Feb. 17. The makeshift five which was thrust upon the floor against Windham High performed splendidly in their first appearance. The shifting of Martin to center from a guard berth was a last minute change and his huge bulk and fine jumping ability will give Chapman Tech all the effectiveness which was thought to be lost due to the losing of Hewitt from the pivot berth. Both of the newcomers distinguished themselves during the game with Windham Tuesday night. Martin's work especially standing out as a feature performance. Martin caged six goals, making up for the baskets which would have been missed had Hewitt's position been filled by some one else on the squad. L. Hewitt played a fine game at left forward much to the surprise of many present. He caked the ball four times from the field and was equally as active in defense work.

The performance of the team in general, as a patched up five gave something to enthuse over to the Tech followers. Considering that Tech was defeated by a much larger score by Windham at Willimantic earlier in the season with her regular five in action makes the performance of Tuesday night all the more outstanding. It means that the Tech five has seemed to lose none of the play which was evident in the contests when the regular five was in the fray.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 11—The annual schedule meeting of the eastern league will be held in this city February 19, according to announcement today by President Dan O'Neil of the league.

NURMI WILL TRY FOR MORE RECORDS AT BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 11—Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish marvel, who tomorrow night will attempt to lower two more world track records on the eight-lap oval of the 106th Field Artillery armory, spent most of today acquainting himself with the Buffalo boards.

He has been offered a special prize by the 106th Field Artillery Athletic association if he succeeds in establishing a new record at either one and a quarter miles, or 1,500 meters. He will try for both records in a one and a quarter mile race. Jimmy Connolly, Georgetown star, will be pitted against him.

At Nurmi's request the 106th armory track, one of the few indoor tracks in the country measuring eight laps to the mile, has been resurveyed in meter measurement and the distances certified.

Other entrants of note in the meet will include Ray Watson, Illinois A. C. running star, who will oppose Allan Helfrich of Penn State in the 500-meter handicap; Willie Ritola, Nurmi's fleet-footed countryman, who is entered in the two-mile handicap, and Willie Plant, champion walker. Watson will attempt to lower his own world's record for 500 meters and also will run an extra 100 meters, accompanied by Helfrich, and Manny Lochnitch of Buffalo, in a try for a 600 mark.

TILDEN'S 1925 CAMPAIGN NOT YET ARRANGED

New York, Feb. 11 (By the A. P.)—William T. Tilden hasn't decided yet exactly what effect the new amateur tennis rule, with its player-writer and motion picture provisions, will have on his 1925 court campaign but he will get an early competitive start, at any rate, when he appears tomorrow in his first tournament of the year. The national champion is in a group of sixteen players, others of whom include Francis Hunter, Watson Washburn, Zenzo, Shimizu, and Howard Voshell, entered in the invitation men's singles at the Heights Casino the last few days of the week.

Tilden will sandwich his tournament competition between work at a motion picture studio on Long Island, where today he found only time enough to say, in answer to questions, that he hadn't made any definite plans about his playing for 1925. It would be some time, he added, before he could tell just how his various interests would affect his championship competition, but he gave the impression that there is little doubt he will be on hand for the major events of the year.

JUNIORS LEAD IN AGGIE INTERCLASS BASKETBALL

Storrs, Feb. 10.—Students at the Connecticut Agricultural College are taking much interest in the interclass basketball league, which as in past years, is being conducted by the department of physical education at the state college. The league games serve to bring more men into the game, and at the same time develop valuable varsity material. Class games are played every Monday night in the Hawley armory, and the contest always serves to bring out a large gallery of undergraduates and faculty members.

In last night's games, the juniors retained their hold on top place by defeating the school of agriculture, while the sophomores drew up into second place by decisively trouncing the freshmen. The juniors have a good chance to cop the interclass championship for the year, provided they hold the advantage they now possess.

The class standings follow:

Juniors	4	0	1.000
Sophomores	2	1	.666
Seniors	1	2	.333
School Agriculture	1	2	.333

AGGIES TO PLAY FAST ST. MICHAELS TEAM TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, Feb. 11.—The Connecticut Aggies will start on the second half of their schedule tomorrow night, when they clash with the St. Michaels five on the Hawley armory court at Storrs. Coach Dole's men have been hard at work this week in preparation for this contest, and the Aggies will put their strongest lineup on the floor against the Vermonters.

But little is known of the record of the Vermont team, but in past years they have always given the Storrs team a hard battle, and it is expected that they will be up to their usual form tomorrow. In Boiselle, the Vermonters have a star forward, and followers of the St. Michaels team are counting on him to score often against the Nutmeg team tomorrow. The lineups:

St. Michael's: Boiselle lf, McAlpine rf, Gazett c, McInerney lg, Gillette rg.

PLANT BEATS NURMI FOR WILCO AWARD

New York, Feb. 11 (By the A. P.)—Willie Plant, premier American walker, scored a victory over Paavo Nurmi, the phantom Finn, today, but it was not on the track. The heel and toe star of the Morningside A. C. was announced as the winner of the meritorious trophy, awarded by the Wilco Athletic association, after a keen contest with Nurmi in the popular vote cast by spectators to decide the outstanding performance at the farewell Wilco indoor meet, held last Saturday.

The detailed vote was not announced but Hugh H. Hirshon, director of the Wilco meet, said Plant won by only a "handful of votes" over Nurmi in the contest, which was confined principally to these two stars. Both figures in world's record performances, Plant hanging up a new mark for the 3,000-metre walk, while Nurmi raced to hollow victory and a new record at two miles, displacing the last indoor standard which Joie Ray had held outright.

GIBBONS WILLING TO MEET WILLS AT ANY TIME

St. Paul, Feb. 11.—Tommy Gibbons, contender for the heavyweight boxing championship, declared today that he was willing to meet Harry Wills, for the right to battle Jack Dempsey for the title.

"I doubt very much that Wills will sign for a bout with me as he had evaded such a meeting in the past," Gibbons said. "If the New York boxing commission will get Wills' signature for a bout with me, they can consider the match clinched as they will have no trouble in signing me."

LINDSTROM TO BE GROOMED TO FILL GROH'S PLACE

New York, Feb. 11.—Freddy Lindstrom, youthful third sacker who played a stellar part in the 1924 pennant victory of the New York Giants and also their world's series battle with Washington, returned his signed contract today for the coming season. Heinie Groh, whose injury last year gave Lindstrom a chance to star, will be back at his regular post this season, but Lindstrom is being groomed to succeed him.

Grover Hartley, veteran catcher, who was with Columbus in the American association last season, also has signed for 1925.

Munn Beats Zbyzko.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 11.—Wayne "Big" Munn, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, successfully defended his title in a short but fast match here tonight by tossing Stanislaus Zbyszko, veteran Pole, in straight falls with crotch and body holds. DANIELSON BATTERY FIVE WINS OVER BALTIC WANDERERS IN LAST MINUTE

In a nip and tuck game at the Baltic gym on Wednesday evening the Danielson Service Battery five nosed out the Baltic Wanderers in a last minute rally, 38 to 37. The game, although marked by fast and hard playing, was clean throughout and it was one of the best games yet played in Baltic.

The Wanderers took the lead at the start of the game but were unable to hold it for very long and the game see-sawed back and forth until half time when the score was 25 to 20. At the opening of the second half the Wanderers took the lead which they held until the last few minutes of play. With the score 35 to 32 against them the Danielson Battery unloosed a brilliant passing attack and in the remaining two minutes of play they went into the lead and at the final whistle the score stood 38 to 37 in favor of the visitors.

Ridgeway and Simineau led the attack for the Baltic team scoring 6 and 5 baskets respectively. For Danielson Poirier and Goodrow bore the brunt of the attack and accounted for 28 points between them.

BULKELEY WINS CLOSE GAME AT DEEP RIVER

Deep River, Feb. 11.—Jumping into the lead from the very first whistle the Bulkeley basketball five defeated Deep River High by a 28 to 23 score at the town hall here this evening. Bulkeley had things pretty much her own way, Deep River never heading the reckless Orange and Black five at any time. The first half ended with Bulkeley decisively outplaying the home five, the score at half time standing 16 to 4 in favor of the visitors. However a strong comeback by the locals in the second half made things more interesting.

Deep River is the same five which easily defeated Chapman Tech here last month which makes the Bulkeley victory gained this evening all the more sweet due to the intense rivalry between the two New London teams. Huck Taylor as usual played a stellar game at forward for Bulkeley and sunk seven baskets from the field. Parisi also played a good game with Vogt, Watterson and Graves helping to make the evening's game a success. Both O'Brien and O'Leary played well for Deep River. The score:

SPORTING NOTES

Kitchener, Ont., boasts of a crack hockey team made up of seven brothers.

There are 173 packs of foxhounds in England and Wales, and ten in Scotland.

Women's hockey has had a tremendous growth in popularity in England since the war.

The lawn tennis championships played at Wimbledon last summer yielded a net profit of $65,000.

Herbert Sutcliffe, a Yorkshire batsman, has created a cricket record by being the first Englishman to complete three consecutive centuries in a test match.

No golfer has ever driven a ball four hundred yards. The official record for the world is 395 yards, James Braid drove a ball this distance at Walton Heath in 1905.

The Manitoba Dog Derby is the longest contest of this kind in the world in which animals take part. The course is 200 miles long, and the record time is twenty-tree hours forty minutes.

The return bout between Jack Renault, the Canadian champion, and Quintin Romero, the South American heavy, is carded for Madison Square Garden on the night of February 13.

A team representing the All-England Woman's Hockey Association is to make a four months' tour of South Africa this summer. Among the members will be Miss Bryan, declared to be the foremost woman player of the game.

Arthur Decatur, right-handed pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has been released on option to the Portland Pacific Coast League club. Decatur had been with Brooklyn for the past three seasons and last year won ten games and lost nine.

Nick Allen, manager of the St. Paul American Association team in 1924, has signed a contract for this year. It is understood Allen received an increase in salary from the new owners of the Saints, the principal stockholder of which is Bob Connery of St. Louis.

President Heinemann of the New Orlans Pelicans, announces that the signing of two new ball players for his 1925 team. Outfielder Emery, who played with Birmingham, has been bought, and Pitcher Tutweiler, brother of Guy, will join the team in the spring.

Wade Killefer, manager of the Seattle Club has signed a new second baseman. He is Bert Wallis, a Seattle high school boy. Wallis is an all-around athlete, having played football, baseball, basket ball and track work. He also has boxed in several tournaments.

The admirers of Vic Foley, the Canadian bantamweight champion, who believed their favorite was headed for the world's title, were keenly disappointed when the little Vancouver boxer was defeated at the hands of a comparatively unknown fighter the other night in Seattle.

Fred Schweiger, a right-handed pitcher, is the first player to sign a contract with Albany of the Eastern League for 1925. Schweiger is an Albany boy and has just finished a five-year term in the United States Navy. He was stationed on the Pacific Coast last year, where he pitched independent ball.

The Jockey Club of Buenos Aires is probably the richest and most exclusive sporting organization in the world. It scarcely knows how to spend the vast revenue piled up by its race meetings. The entrance fee is about $2,500 and only the sons of members of ten years' standing are now eligible. Even so, there is a considerable waiting list.

Outfielder Clarence Hoffmann has been sold by Springfield of the Western Association, to Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League. Hoffman joined the Springfield Club shortly after the opening of the second half last season. He has one of the strongest throwing arms ever seen in the Western Association and batted close to the .400 mark all season.

Barney Burch, owner of the Omaha Western League Club, has regained possession of Outfielder Frank Osborn, buying him outright from the Seattle club. Osborne was with Omaha last year on option from Seattle and at the close of the Western season joined the Seraphs. Burch also announced that he secured Second Baseman Johnny Monroe from Houston, for a cash consideration and Pitcher Robert L. Burns, Jr.

Scorers in the National League will not be bothered with the two Bells of the St. Louis Cardinals, as they have released Herman, a big right-handed pitcher, to Milwaukee. Bell gained fame last year with the Cardinals by pitching a doubleheader against the Boston Braves on July 19, and winning both games. The unusual part of the Bell situation is that while Herman goes to Milwaukee, Lester comes to the Cardinals from the Brewers.

Belden Hill, president of the Cedar Rapids Club, announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election at the annual meeting of the club to be held January 9. Hill has been at the head of the club for several years. It is reported that Hill would like to succeed Mike Sexton as head of the Mississippi Valley League, and his friends are pulling the wires with that object in view, as Mike Sexton has announced that he will retire at the league's annual meeting at Moline, January 20.

A. A. Stagg, while coaching the Yale baseball team many years ago, devised a very simple scheme to teach his men how to steal bases. He constructed in the Yale gymnasium a wooden frame, fourteen by seven feet covered with canvas, drawn tightly, and with its surface elevated about four feet from the ground. The collegians ran a distance of about 20 feet or so and then hurled themselves—either head or feet foremost—on the canvas covered frame.

The Prince of Wales, who has been elected president of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, is not the first royalty to honor the 'roarin' game's governing body. As far back as 1843 the Prince Consort became patron of the club, and in later years his example was followed by King Edward and King George. The Prince of Wales, however, will be the first royal president. He assumes office in July, and it is hoped will be present at one of the functions connected with the visit of the Canadian curlers.

Topeka and Hutchinson will remain in the Western Association and are making plans for their 1925 teams, according to Warren Seabough, president of the league. Both clubs announced their decision to quit the circuit at the close of the 1924 campaign because of the charges that many clubs were "padding" payrolls to buy a pennant. A new league ruling regarding salaries caused the decision to remain in the circuit. Bartlesville is the only problem in the league and it is probable this franchise will be moved to Joplin, Mo.

People Must Have Joint-Ease Says Druggist

"You can't stop people from buying Joint-Ease for sore throat and cold in chest," writes one of our druggist friends. "They say it's the best ever."

We know that, of course, but please remember that Joint-Ease is for stiff, swollen, painful joints, whether rheumatic or not, and its tremendous sale for that purpose proves that it is the one joint remedy that gets the most satisfying results.

A tube costs 60 cents at Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere. Just rub it on and in a few seconds it disappears through skin and flesh right down to the ligaments and tendons of the joints—then relief follows instantly.

ONE OF RUM-RUNNER CREW, N. LONDON, ACCUSED OF ATTEMPTED BRIBE

While headed through Long Island Sound this afternoon, laden with 400 cases of Scotch and rye whiskey, the fishing sloop, K-1618, was captured by the United States Coast Guard destroyer Jouett and brought into port, together with the cargo which is valued at approximately $15,000.

The rum-runner is of New York state registration and it is believed that the craft is owned in Greenport.

The master of the fishing craft is Olof Steindeid; the other members of the crew described themselves as Samuel and Albert Johnson, 25 South street, New York city.

The Jouett, which has been successful of late in apprehending rum-runners, was lurking off Montauk Point when the sloop was sighted low in the water and headed from the rum-fleet and toward Greenport. The destroyer overtook the sloop, after a chase of about 20 minutes. When the sloop came to a stop officers of the destroyer boarded the former craft and the contraband cargo was found in the hold.

The hearing was continued until tomorrow afternoon.

It is understood that one member of the crew will face a more serious charge than violation of the prohibition law, for it is stated that he attempted to bribe a member of the destroyer's crew. The bribe offer was turned down and when the crew were brought into port the act of the accused man was reported to the customs officials.

The employes in the municipal building have arranged for a dinner and dance, and the event will take place at the Hotel Mohican on the night of the 20th inst. A dinner will be served at 9 o'clock, and this will be followed by dancing. The committee in charge of the arrangements consists of Director of Finance Carey Congdon, City Clerk Julian D. Moran and Miss Helen Gilmore, clerk in the office of City Treasurer Herbert J Huntley.

Mrs. Frank Mouse of Noank, Mrs. O. H. Tounge, Lincoln avenue, Harry Edwards, Hempstead street, and Mrs. Peter Quagliano and infant son, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were dismissed today.

County Commissioner and Inspector of Motor Vehicles George H. Bradford is ill at his home in Montville. Mr. Bradford's condition is not considered serious, and it is believed that his trouble is grip.

The police were summoned to Ledyard street, near Broad street, this evening when it was claimed that a man was acting strangely in that vicinity. When the patrol automobile and officers reached there no one could be found, the street being deserted.

A special meeting of the city council will be held tomorrow night, for this evening City Manager William A. Holt issued a call for the extra sitting of that body. It is understood that the business to come before the meeting will be to approve the modifications of the plans and specifications for the new $150,000 schoolhouse that it is contemplated being erected on the former J. N. Harris property, corner of Williams and Mercer streets, and the approval of a bond sale which occurred today.

An automobile owned and operated by Raymond Hilliar, 2 Terrace avenue, knocked down a youth at the corner of Huntington and Richards streets this evening. When Hilliar brought his machine to a stop and inquired of the boy if the latter was injured, the boy replied that he was unhurt and refused to reveal his name. Hilliar reported the accident at the police station.

The 28th annual banquet of New London lodge of Elks took place this evening in the clubhouse of the organization, Washington street, and was attended by about 250 members and guests, together with visiting Elks from Norwich, and Westerly. Exalted Ruler Alfred G. Rudd was toastmaster and the speakers were Past District Deputy Martin Cunningham, Danbury; Grand Trustee Edward Cotter, Hartford; Attorney John C. Geary and Judge Cornelius G. Costello. Following the speechmaking, an elaborate vaudeville program was presented, the bill including acts from local theatres and New York.

Fire caused considerable damage late this afternoon when a serious chimney blaze was discovered at the residence of Daniel Davine, 198 Connecticut avenue. Shortly after 5 o'clock a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters, and Northwest Hose company and Allen Hook and Ladder company responded. When the firemen arrived the soot in the chimney made a lively blaze, and it required the contents of several tanks of chemicals to subdue it, and then not until the building had been damaged. The fire was one of the most stubborn of its nature that has occurred in New London in several years.

John Murphy, formerly of Uncasville, who suffered an injury to his spine a year ago when he was run over by an automobile while in the employment of the state highway department at Niantic, shows considerable improvement, for he now has a sense of feeling of the upper limbs. Murphy is receiving medical treatment at his home, 127 Willetts avenue.

Thomas J. Connors, 45 Terrace avenue, son of Mrs. Herbert Chapman of Cedar street, and Miss Bertha Graymala, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Graymala, Thames View park, Quaker Hill, were married Monday at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Joseph Raniszewski, pastor of the church. Alphonse Martin was best man and Miss Liona Champlin attended the bride. Mr. Connors is employed as night fireman at Connecticut College for Women. Mr. and Mrs. Connors are making their home at Broad View, Quaker Hill.

Robert J. Tuohey, Walter G. Wolffe and Raymond L. Davis, sailors stationed at the United States Coast Guard, will be in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with intoxication. They were taken into custody this afternoon and when searched at the police station Tuohey had two quarts of alcohol in his bag. Tuohey, Wolffe and Davis had been ordered to go to Brooklyn navy yard for duty, but before they went to the union station they imbibed too freely, with the result that they soon became intoxicated and were arrseted.

The condition of Traffic Officer Frank Linehan, who underwent an operation at Lawrence hospital a fortnight ago, is so far improved that the patient, it is expected, will be able to return to his home on Jefferson avenue in a few days.

The street management of New London was wise "in its day and generation" in neglecting to wash the sidewalks of the city to clear them of muck and ice, for today the rain has done for the city what the use of hose and Konomoc water would have done. Rain fell most of today and it certainly cleared the sidewalks so that they are now safe for pedestrians.

Opinion is divided as to what will be the result of the bills before the general assembly of the state for the establishment of a town court in Waterford, for the condemnation of land of Edward Hammond at Great Neck, and for the establishment of a third district for that section of the town known as Cohanzie. The selectmen have been petitioned to call a special town meeting to give citizens an opportunity to express their wishes as to the measures proposed. Those in favor of the bills declare that the opponents of them will be beaten to a standstill when a referendum vote is taken, while the opponents of the measures say that the advocates of the new ideas will not have "a leg to stand on" when the voters have expressed themselves.

Mrs. Ella Smith Baker, wife of Lewis L. Baker, steward of the steam yacht Narada, died this morning at her residence, 227 Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Baker who was of advanced years, had been in ill health a long time and her death was not unexpected. Besides her husband, she is survived by six children, two sons and four daughters.

James A. Pell, of Houston, Tex., an ocean marine engineer, has written the New London police in an effort to locate H. S. Cables, of this city, also a marine engineer. Pell stated that charges have been brought against him by United States steamboat inspectors and if the charges are proven he will suffer the revocation of his license. He declares that Cables' testimony will save the taking away of the license. No marine engineer by the name of Cables is known to the police, nor is the man wanted known at the United States customs house or at the local office of the United States steamboat inspectors.

Thomas Conboy, ticket agent at the union station, is in New York and tonight attended a banquet of the ticket agents in that city.

Edward Foley, a young man who was taken into custody, Sunday, charged with the theft of a letter containing $5 from Mrs. Richard Prusher, 36 Brewer street and who has been at liberty on bail of $500 furnished by George H. Beck, for his appearance on continuance in the police court next Monday morning, was rearrested today when Mr. Beck vacated the bond. The accused is now a prisoner at the county jail where he will remain until the day of his trial as he was unable to obtain another surety. The vacating of the bond resulted when Mr. Beck obtained information that Foley and a companion were planning to leave within a day or two for Buffalo, N. Y. Foley, who was asleep at his rooming house and where the theft of the letter and money took place, denied that he had any intention of leaving the city.

OCCUM & VERSAILLES

Thursday evening, Feb. 5, there was the impressive initiation of members and installation of officers of St. Joseph's council, No. 399, Union St. J. B. d'A., in St. Joseph's hall, Occum. Rev. F. R. DesSureault, chaplain of the newly organized society, opened the meeting with prayer and the blessing of the charter. Initiations were then held. The charter was witnessed by the following four members: resident, Moise Lafreniere; vice president, Miss Alice Thebeault; secretary, Miss Aldea M. Lessard; treasurer, Omer Fournier. Next came roll call of officers as follows Honorary president, Mrs. Julia Peloquin; president, Moise Lafreniere; vice president, Miss Alice Thebeault; secretary, Miss Aldea M. Lessard; treasurer, Omer Fournier; doyen, Charles Rebidoux; master of ceremonies, L. Goddaire; ordenance No. 1, Ovelina Champagne; ordenance No. 2, Eva Thebeault; auditors, Fred Champagne and R. Dugas.

Alma Fortier of Goodyear then presented the general president, Henri T. Ledoux of Nashua, N. H., who installed the members, which numbered 40. He said in his brief address: "We did not belong to the 400, quite, but very near, as we are the 399th camp." He explained how this organization has progressed in 24 years of existence. Over 50,000 members are now enrolled, with a $2,000,000 reserve. The society funds are to take care of its aged, sick and incurable. It also has a scholarship fund to educate young men for the priesthood, or any other vocation which they may choose.

Rev. Father DesSureault in his short address said: "As a mother rejoices over the cradle of her newborn, so do I rejoice over this new organization in this parish, as good societies are its foundations." Rev. Ulric O. Bellerose of Taftville and Rev. A. A. Jalbert of Baltic also spoke in a very pleasing manner. Alma Fortier, a representative from headquarters in Woonsocket, also spoke of the organization and its works, his remarks being very interesting. A. Baudette of Woonsocket, one of the general organizers, with the untiring help of Moise Lafreniere, has the credit for this new organization in Occum. Mr. Baudette said although Occum was not so large as some places, the people he had come in contact with showed great spirit and courtesy. The garde of honer, Council St. Marie, Baltic, gave exhibition drills and then escorted the officers to their places. The installing officers were Henri T. Ledoux, Mrs. O. Dugas of Norwich, Joseph Marsan and Mrs. J. Lebrocque of Taftville, Alma Fortier of Goodyear, P. Cardin, Mrs. A. Cote of Baltic, Mrs. Reuchette of Norwich, A. Baudette of Woonsocket and Mrs. L. Gingras of Jewett City were master and mistress of ceremonies, respectively. Next came the entertainment composed of the following: The Sacred Heart choir of Taftville under direction of Miss Frechette sang the national hymn; Miss Marsan of Taftville gave violin selection, accompanied on the piano by Miss E. Fontaine; little Miss Cecile Lafreniere of Occum sang La Gloutons, and was so heartily applauded that she sang La Violet as an encore; a declamation entitled A Leap Year Proposal was given by Miss Tellier and a friend from Taftville and kept the house in continuous laughter. The orchestra of Taftville was composed of the following: Piano, Miss Blanche Fontaine; violin, Miss Marsan; cornet, O. Laroche; saxophine, John Pomphiski. Furnished music for the evening. Miss Irene Lavallie gave a piano solo. Chicken sandwiches, cake and coffee were served to over three hundred guests from Norwich, Taftville, Baltic, Willimantic, Plainfield, Jewett City, Goodyear, Woonsocket and Nashua, N. H. The hall was decorated with red, white and blue crepe paper, also large American flags and the drapeau du Carillion. Miss Lessard, Mrs. Moise Lefreniere and Mrs. Julia Peloquin welcomed the guests as they entered the hall and escorted them to seats. Miss Lessard provided the chickens for the sandwiches, Mrs. Lefreniere was chef, and was helped in serving by members of the society.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

As the 12.40 p. m. trolley car was coming to Central Village Tuesday it struck the butcher auto-cart of John Bednarg of Moosup as the auto became stalled on the cross at Texas, one-eighth mile below the local station. The man and boy in the car jumped and saved themselves from death or severe injuries. The automobile was a total wreck and was picked up by a wrecker and taken to Moosup, probably for the junk pile. State Policeman Williams was sent down and investigated the accident. The trolley car was badly damaged and the people in it were considerably shaken up.

Charles Parkhurst of Jewett City had his arm broken at the wrist last Friday night while cranking his automobile. He was taken to Dr. J. L. Gardner's office where the bone was set and splints applied. Parkhurst, with other young men and girls had been attending the junior prom at P. H. S. that evening and the party was getting ready to go home when the accident occurred. An X-ray made by Don Heughton showed the bones well set and recovery will take but a few weeks.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET CONTINUER ERRATIC

New York, Feb. 11—Stock prices continued to pursue an erratic course in today's market with chief speculative interest again centering in the violent fluctuations of specialties manipulated by professional traders and pools. The main body of stocks moved irregularly lower with the usual pre-holiday profit-taking playing an important part in the day's selling.

United States Cast Iron Pipe again furnished the pyrotechnics of the session, it opened 3 1-2 points higher at 239 and then bounded upward to 250, a record for all time, with frequent jumps of 1 to 2 points between sales. With the immediate requirements of the shorts apparently satisfied, the stock broke precipitously to 220 in the late trading, closing at the low figure for a net loss of 15 1-2 points on the day. On the way down it broke from 234 to 225 and thence to 32 with no intermediate sale reported.

A sudden demand for Savage Arms, which sent that stock from 89 3-4 to 95 1-2 and then back to 92 1-2, was a sequel to the recent heavy over-subscription of the new Kelvinator issue, both concerns being engaged in the manufacture of electrical refrigeration apparatus, and having the same stock market sponsors. Virginia Railway and Power soared 3 points to 72.

Other outstanding strong spots included Maxwell Motors B., Peoples Gas, Worthington Pump, Adams Express, And Reduction, American Sumatra Tobacco, Commercial Investment Trust Nash Motors and United Railways Investment, all of which closed from 2 1-2 to 4 points higher. Jewell Tea preferred responded to the resumption of dividends by climbing nearly 5 points to 109.

The so-called standard industrials showed mixed changes on the day. American Can closed 1 1-4 points higher at 171 1-4 having touched 173 1-2, and Studebaker which crossed 46 in the early trading, later sagged to 45 3-8 where it was up nearly a point on the day. Baldwin closed 1 5-8 lower at 131 5-8 an United States Steel common showed a small fractional loss at 126 1-4. Independent steels were heavy, Bethlehem, Gulf States and Republic closing a point or so lower.

Commercial Solvents A and B, broke 9 3-4 and 8 points respectively. Heaviness also cropped out toward the close in Mack Trucks, Universal Pipes and Radiator common and preferred, American Agricultural Chemical preferred American Express, Burns Brothers B, Mathieson Alkali, Reynolds Tobacco B., and the United States Realty & Improvement issues, all off from two to three points.

Chief interest in the railroad group centered in the brisk demand for "Nickel Plate," which advanced 5 3-8 points to 133 1-2 in reflection of the approval of the lease terms by the directors of Pere Marquette railroad. Reactionary tendencies prevailed in most of the other carrier shares.

Call money held steady at 3 1-2 per cent. Time money and commercial rates were unchanged.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet with little change in rates. Demand sterling ruled around $4.77 5-8 and French francs around 5.35 1-2 cents.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO JUDGE GARDINER GREENE

Minute Adopted by Directors of The Dime Savings Bank.

At a special meeting of the Directors of The Dime Savings Bank of Norwich, Wednesday morning, Feb. 11th, 1925, the following minute was unanimously adopted:

Our sorrow at the death of our President is too deep to be suitably expressed, but we wish to record our sense of the great loss we have sustained.

Judge Greene had been connected with the bank for thirty-six years, as a director, and was elected a vice president in 1909 and president in 1922.

He was also its counsel for several years until he was appointed a judge of Superior Court—a position which he was eminently qualified to fill.

With his wide experience on the bench, as a member of the legislature, and in handling numerous trust estates he was a most valuable legal and financial adviser.

His tact and charming personality made him an ideal presiding officer, and a true friend of each of his associates, whose heartfelt sympathy goes out to his wife.

It was voted to close the bank at 2 o'clock on the day of the funeral, and to attend the services together.

JOHN H. PERKINS, Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM.

GRACE S. STODDARD,

JUDGE SUSTAINS LANDLORDS' CLAIM IN NORWICH LEAKY ROOF CASE

Judge C. L. Avery of the superior court has sustained defendant's demurrer which was argued before him last week in the suit of William H. Murphy against Samuel Taylor and Ike Beckenstein, all of this city, on a claim for $3,500 damages for alleged failure to keep in proper repair the roof of the building, 104-110 Main street, where Murphy leases a store from the defendants.

In his memorandum of decision on the demurrer, Judge Avery says:

The complaint in both counts seems to proceed on the theory of a breach of agreement to repair. In this state, under ordinary circumstances, the general rule is that the landlord cannot be held to respond in damages in an action of tort to the tenant for failure to keep the demised premises in repair. This principle has been expounded by our supreme court in the leading case of Gallagher vs. Button, and Valin vs. Jewell.

The rule established by the great weight of authority is that the landlord is not liable to a tenant for personal injuries due to a breach of the landlord's express agreement to repair.

On the other hand, it is clearly recognized that where a landlord leases separate portions of a building to different tenants and retains control of the stairways and passageways, etc., used in common by all the tenants, the landlord is under an implied obligation to use reasonable care to keep these parts in a safe condition for use and the failure to perform that duty renders him liable for injury resulting therefrom to the tenant or a member of the tenant's family or any person properly on the premises who is itself free from negligence under the circumstances.

There is no allegation anywhere in either count of the complaint that the plaintiff was free from negligence and in the exercise of ordinary care. The theory underlying the complaint is obviously a breach of contract and not tort and in an action based upon the theory of a breach of contract by the landlord to repair, the damages recoverable would ordinarily be the cost of repair. Personal injuries by the plaintiff could not be recoverable in an action of that character.

The demurrer is sustained upon the second ground therein stated.

Allegations of Complaint.

The allegations of the complaint are that Murphy had a lease of the stores from Aug. 1, 1920 at the annual rental of $1,950 and that the landlord had agreed to furnish heat and keep the roof and walls in repair. This, it is claimed, he did not do, as a result of which water leaked through, damaged stock to the extent of $1,000, obliged the lessee to give up the sale of candy for four years at a loss of $500, obliged him to close the store for six weeks at a loss of $600, and caused Mr. Murphy to have pleurisy, because of the damp conditions, obliging him to stay home for six weeks at a loss of $1,000 and to spend $200 in medical bills. A second count in the complaint alleges that the landlords reserved to themselves the control of hall, lobbies, staircases, walls and roofs of the building.

WHITE CROSS COUNCIL WILL CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, February 22nd, will mark the fortieth anniversary of the institution of White Cross council, No. 13, Knights of Columbus, and the council is planning to commemorate the occasion in a fitting manner with a banquet which will be held at the Wauregan house.

As the number would indicate, White Cross council was the thirteenth council of the order to be organized, the first having been formed in New Haven and for several years the Knights of Columbus was strictly a Connecticut organization, with a state-wide membership, its purpose being to encourage social contact between the Catholic men of the state and to provide some measure of protection, through its insurance feature, for the dependents of its deceased members.

Since its birth, little more than forty years ago, the growth of the order has been nothing less than phenomenal. From an organization whose affiliations did not extend beyond the borders of Connecticut, it has expanded, until today it has councils in every section of the United States as well as in Canada and Mexico. With such a background of growth and expansion, it is the intention of the committee which has the fortieth anniversary exercises in charge, to make this the most elaborate affair ever held by the council. The banquet, which will be at 7.30 Sunday evening, February 22nd, at the Wauregan house, will be open to all members of the order and their lady friends and a programme of exercises has been arranged that will be enjoyed by all who are privileged to attend.

The principal speakers will be William J. Mulligan of Hartford, state deputy for Connecticut, and Dr. John G. Coyle, of New York city, former state deputy for the state of New York. State Deputy Mulligan is well known to Norwich members of the order, as he has spoken here on numerous occasions and it is expected that he will have an interesting message to give the members and their friends. Dr. Coyle is a very eloquent speaker. He is a practicing physician in New York city but finds time from his professional duties to write and lecture on various matters of wide public interest. He is very prominent in Knights of Columbus affairs and has been knighted by the pope for distinguished services.

The musical part of the programme will be under the direction of Edward T. Connelly which is a guarantee that it will be a feature of the evening's exercises. Judging from the activity of the committee and the interest displayed by the members, it will be a well attended and enthusiastic gathering and a red letter occasion in the history of the local council.

GRIFFITH MAKES HIGH SCORE PLAYING PINOCHLE

Griffith was high man with a score of 8,266 in Tuesday evening's pinochle play of the Colonial club and Allen was low with 5415. Amburn retained first position, although Drake reduced his lead somewhat. Scores for the evening were as follows: Griffith 8,265; Cochran 8,225; T. G. Washburn 8,200; McNaught 8,200; Gifford 8,135; Lamb 7,866; Huntington 7,845; Kenefick 7,795; Gee 7,690; Harwood 7,570; Higgins 7,530; Drake 7,450; Thompson 7,435; Burlingham 7,345; Amburn 7,335; Willis, 6,780; R. B. S. Washburn 6,720; Crowell 6,305; Oat playing for Tracy 6,290; Allen 5,415.

Standing at date with two more evenings to play: Amburn 39,380; Drake 38,710; Harwood 38,540; T. G. Washburn 38,560; Burlingham 38,430; Gee 37,865; Kenefick 37,565; McNaught 37,545; Higgins 37,200; Lamb 36,855; Thompson 36,800; Crowell 36,515; Huntington 36,310; Griffith 35,975; Gifford 35,390; Willis, 35,255; Cochran 34,895; Tracy 34,075; R. B. S. Washburn 33,295; Allen 32,660.

SUSTAINS DEMURRERS IN GROTON SCHOOL SUIT

Defendants' demurrers in the suit of John Le Beau of Groton against the Fifth school district of that town and the three members of the school committee, Walter H. Lathrop, Louis M. Allen and A. W. George, have been sustained by Judge C. L. Avery of the superior court who finds that the cause of action is set out against any of the defendants.

Le Beau brought suit as administrator of the estate of his six-year-old son, Kenneth, who died from the effect of injuries received Nov. 7, 1922, when he fell from a rocky ledge into the school playground. Damages of $7,500 are asked for in the suit.

Judge Avery's memorandum of decision on the demurrers of Lathrop, Allen and George says:

Stated generally, the complaint alleges a schoolhouse with a playground annexed thereto and that on one end of the playground there was a cliff, a fence separating the edge of the cliff from the end of the playground, which fence had fallen out of repair and a child had wandered through the fence and fell off the cliff. The claimed negligence is the failure to properly maintain the fence to prevent the child from wandering near the cliff and falling therefrom.

It is manifest that this complaint charges no negligence against the district other than the failure to properly perform a claimed governmental duty, nor does the complaint set out any action of negligence on the part of the individual defendants separate or distinct from the governmental duty of the district. In the case of Hourigan vs. Norwich, 77 Conn. 558, our supreme court of errors used the following language:

"The state cannot, without consent expressed by legislature be sued for injuries otherwise tortious resulting from an act done in the exercise of lawful governmental power and pertaining to the administration of government; and when this power is exercised, as in most cases it must be, through an agent the agent cannot be sued for injuries resulting from a strict performance of the agency.

Inasmuch as the complaint sets up no act on the part of any of the defendants other than the non-performance of a strictly governmental duty, no cause of action is set out against any of the defendants and the several demurrers are sustained on all the grounds in said demurrers stated.

NEMROD GROTTO PLANNING ATLANTIC CITY PILGRIMAGE

Reservations are now being made by P. M. Chappell, secretary of Nemrod Grotto, for a party of about fifty members of the order to attend the National Convention at Atlantic City the latter part of June.

The exact dates covering the three day annual get-to-gether of all the Grottos in the country are June 23, 24, 25. At present preparations are in order covering a pilgrimage extending over a period of practically the whole week, leaving Norwich on Sunday evening June 21st and returning Sat., June 27th, which includes a side trip to Philadelphia where the party would visit several places of interest including the U. S. Mint, Betsy Ross house and Independence Hall.

With the itinerary already approved by over twenty of the party, it is quite evident now that all reservations will be taken up within the next few days, as the uniformed patrol members are yet to decide whether or not they will attend to compete in the several contests.

However, should more than the fifty already provided for, declare their intention to go, there remains ten days before reservations are closed after which the party will be complete.

As very few eastern cities provide the facilities for handling a convention of such magnitude it is doubtful if an opportunity equal to this will again present itself, so that the local boys may be within the radius of activities. As some 100,000 are already making plans for this unusual event which demonstrates the good fellowship of the Grotto, the occasion is always looked forward to many months ahead.

Nemrod Grotto is quite fortunate in having the opportunity now to get such an attractive itinerary including all reservations, and it is hoped by the officers the uniformed bodies will attend and bring home the bacon.

OBSERVED BIRTHDAY OF HAVILAND CLASS MEMBER

The Haviland class met with Mrs. Robert Montgomery, Coit street, Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Edward Adams. After the devotional meeting there were readings. The feature of the meeting was the celebration of the birthday of the vice president, Mrs. Fanny Adams, who has been a member of the society for fifty years. Mrs. Adams was presented a birthday cake by Mrs. Montgomery besides receiving flowers and presents. The hostess served dainty refreshments.

EULOGY OF LINCOLN GIVEN BEFORE ROTARIANS

As today (Thursday) is the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, the anniversary was noted at the meeting of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday by a very fitting address on Lincoln, The Emancipator, by Rev. A. N. Foster of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Address Upon Lincoln.

Mr. Foster, who was introduced by Herbert B. Cary, chairman of the program committee, said in part:

The observance of Lincoln's birthday becomes more general every year. This custom even appears in foreign lands and so assumes, almost, an international character. This is deeply significant for there is a tendency in our midst to obscure or forget the distinctive elements of Lincolns appeal. It was the glory of the Civil War period that an enslaved race was liberated; this as an act of just—if not generous, policy on the part of the dominant white race, and a rebuke to the dangers of race prejudice. And yet, some would now tell us—as in an undertone that the 13th Amendment, and all other Amendments were mistakes.

It was the glory of the Civil War period to win confirmation of the fair promise and command that government of, by and for the people should not perish from the earth; in such government, a cardinal feature of Lincoln's political philosophy was the policy of Federation; his paramount purpose was to have the Union of sovereign states. And yet men are today timid and cautious and halting in applying Lincoln's policy of Federation to the pressing world of our time.

Because there is danger of forgetting the lessons of the past, it is well to commemorate the birthday of the great War President.

A foremost literary prophet of his own generation, on a historic occasion, referred to Lincoln as "new birth of our new soil, the first American." The intervening years have done much to confirm that estimate and his name today commands respect and honor in far greater measure than in his life time. Indeed, War and tragedy have lent an undying halo to his fame.

A statement of negation helps to locate the great Emancipator in our thought. He was not widely travelled nor a college graduate nor a church member; he was not a mechanical expert, like Fulfman or Ford, nor a wizard of science like Edison nor a man of wealth like Morgan or Rockfeller. He never used the telephone, the radio, the typewriter nor the aeroplane nor attended the moving pictures; things which are part and parcel of our daily routine. And yet, today his name connotes leadership almost above every other American name. It is the greatness of moral leadership and appears in contrast to our vast material achievements.

In him the inheritance of the Puritan and the Cavalier blended, and his western environment made the composite representative of American life.

Analysis of his character shows striking and significant contrasts. He was practical enough to be a rail splitter, and, on occasions, to retrace the steps of his journeys for two miles that he might lift a mired pig out of the mud by the road side, and yet, he was as meditative and thoughtful as Marcus Aurelius. He shared the simple life of the people in pioneer days in a state yet on the western frontier where contracts were commonly made with the native Indians, with French traders and with migratory tradesman from the east; and yet he is later known to the world as an expert in diplomacy in dealing with a contentious war cabinet, with the strife and tempest of the border states and with the practiced maneuvers of European courts.

He was born in a log cabin of one room and as a boy shared the privations and the rawness and the uncouthness of life in new settlements and yet his twentieth century memorial in the City of Washington, reflecting the simplicity of conception, the beauty of proportion and the nicety of finish of the Greek parthenon, is one of the art treasures of the world.

Lincoln was ever known for his social qualities, for the wit and anecdote of the practiced story-teller who mingles easily in hay gathering; the friend of the poor man and the slave; certainly as easily at home with the latest immigrant as with judge or jurist or with captains of industry.

Indeed his knowledge of human nature was such as to make one believe that his contract—like Shakespears'—ran the entire gamut of human experience from despair to high aspiration and noble purpose.

And yet, we do not know Lincoln if we fail to consider the loneliness of his nature; bordering on melancholia after disappointed love in youth; a loneliness felt in high office when counsellers and friends failed to appreciate, or even to understand his high aims and unselfish purposes; alone with his high power as Michael Angelo was alone with his chosen work, yea, even a loneliness akin to that of Gethsemane and impelling also the bended knee in prayer that the light of Divine guidance might come.

The lonelinessof this man, commonly so replete with social story and apt anecdote, is real and impressive and despens further the mystery of that character which so commands our veneration of our love.

Our estimate of personal gains added significance when studied on historic background. A hundred years ago, and less, the influence of chattel slavery permeated American society; it was the pronounced feature of the industrial life of the south; it affected the economic and commercial life of the country; it entered the home circle and domestic life and even commanded the sanctions of the Church and the ministrations of religion. The issues involved social pride and money profits and rights of property and of inheritance and of person.

It raised barriers of social exclusion and of racial feuds. To the dominant leaders in the south it was the vital part of their industrial system. The north regarded slavery as a burden on industry and as a mistake in economics and the abolitionist branded it as a monstrous moral wrong and declared "If slavery be not wrong, nothing is wrong."

Hence the bitterness which deepened to exasperation and bloody sacrifice. Hence the passion for vengeance even to the point of cruelty when angry men declared it would be bliss to them to see their enemies suffer! Such elements were back of the vast armies and the great fleets of the Civil War.

And what policy would wisdom countenance in such conditions and what remedy would heal the deep wounds made by war?

Realizing Lincoln's associations with the life of the frontier, one might expect from him the policy of drastic violence. Such policy was ruthlessly used by ancient Rome against Carthage. Lincoln's policy was otherwise.

It was forecast in his first inaugural when he assured the southerners as "dissatisfied countryfellow men" that they must strike the first blow if war were to come.

The second inaugural breathes the spirit of the Old Testament prophets and has become a classic in all English literature.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds. After Appomattox he would have restrained violence for the captured leaders or reprisals for the south. And history now adds, a thousand pities that his conciliatory policy was not tried rather than the Congressional policy of force.

To paraphrase Stanton's remark at the death of the great President, Lincoln does not belong to one generation alone but rather to the ages; not to the Sangamon Valley or to America but rather to mankind and the world. By contemplating his influence and appraising his worth we are lifted to the realm of the universal for he was of the "type of the true elder race and one of Plutarchs men talked with us face to face."

At the conclusion of his very interesting talk a rising vote of appreciation was extended Mr. Foster by the club.

At the business session Vice President E. LaRue Bliven presided in the absence of President Hugh B. Campbell. George L. Ingalls acted as song leader and received the condolences of the club on his recent bereavement—the loss of $130 in Lyme.

Secretary J. Nelson Weymouth reported on the recent directors' meeting, saying that it had been decided that the annual Ladies' Night of the club would be held on Wednesday evening, April 15th. He also spoke of the Boys' Week program which will be brought before the club at a later date.

Current Events Speaker.

Willis Austin was the speaker on Current Events, taking for his topic the entombment of Floyd Collins. Mr. Austin described the general composition of the earth in Kentucky, saying that in that state there is about 8,000 square miles of limestone which ranges from 10 to 400 feet in thickness. In many places this limestone has been worn away by erosion, leaving many large caves. The largest of these is Mammoth cave, which has 230 passages in it and which lead about underground for 150 miles. Mr. Austin also spoke of the animal life in the cave which includes fish without eyes, blind bats and blind crickets. The cave was discovered about 1800 and was of great value during the war of 1812 when great deposits of saltpeter were found there and used in making gunpowder. Mr. Austin also spoke of the cave in Connecticut near Simsbury which is 300 feet deep and about 200 feet wide. This cave was used as a prison during the revolution.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott on behalf of the club, in an eloquent manner, paid glowing tribute to Frank P. Welch, a member of the Rotary club, who is soon to leave for Arlington, N. J., to accept an executive position with the Dupont company. Mr. Abbott presented a fountain pen to Mr. Welch as a gift from the club, expressing the regret and sense of loss felt by every member at Mr. Welch's going. He extended the best wishes of the club to Mr. Welch in his new field. Mr. Welch gracefully responded, expressing his sorrow at being forced to leave the club, but said that he would always remember the days spent with the members with a feeling of joy as he has experienced much happiness as a member of the club.

F. Russell Smith, chairman of the Brown concert, reported on the sale of tickets. He announced that people desiring tickets may secure them from a member of the club.

Among the many visitors at the club was Gen. William A. Aiken, 93, who was a personal friend of Lincoln. Mr. Aiken is a real youngster for his years and thoroughly enjoyed the meeting and the talk by Mr. Foster.

Wants Change of Name

Roger W. Davis argued before the committee on incorpations in the legislature Tuesday afternoon in support of Senator Doty's bill concerning the Connecticut Sunday School association, changing its name to the Connecticut Council of Religious Education. He said that the change was in line with like action in many other states. The association was incorporated in 1897 and conditions had advanced materially since then. The bill also would give to the association wider power to hold and sell realty.

U. S. DOCTRINES EXPOUNDED AT LINCOLN DAY DINNER

Secretary Hughes Gave Assurance That the United States Desired to Avoid "Entanglements" so That We May be Free to Follow the Dictates of Reason and Conscience—Resented Attacks Upon Our Supreme Caurt and Decried "Disturbers of Our Peace" Who, Under the Guise of Patriotism, Claim They Desire Security, Liberty, Opportunity and Justice—Congressman Bingham Deprecated Excessive Congressional Investigation.

New York, Feb. 12—Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes told members of the National Republican Club tonight that the United States desired to avoid "commitments and entanglements" throughout the world in order that it might be free to "follow the dictates of reason and conscience."

"If we have a mission," Mr. Hughes said in addressing the guests at the club's annual Lincoln Day dinner at the Waldorf Astoria, "it can be proposed only in the spirit of reasonableness. We are constantly seeking to promote peace in this hemisphere, but this can be done only as we convince the people of our sister republics that we respect them, that we do not threaten their independence, and that we are ready with wise, friendly and impartial counsel.

"We are scrupulous throughout the world to avoid commitments and entanglements so that whatever contingencies arise we may be free, not to exercise an arbitrary choice, but to follow the dictates of reason and conscience, to take the action approved by an enlightened people. This freedom and our detachment for age-long racial and national conflicts make our influence the greater. But we can never be safe to ourselves and refuse the cooperation in the interest of peace and mutual helpfulness which is made possible by our independence and does not forfeit it.

"We are now at peace with the world and the opportunities of friendship are open on every hand. If the turbulent spirits among us whose aim seems to be to ferment illwill, to turn friends into enemies, to erect between well-disposed peoples the barriers of lying imputations of motive and action, could only be quieted; if those who are loud-est in exalting their patriotism would do less harm to their country; if some of our advisers would be as astute in finding ways out of trouble as they are in getting us into trouble; if we could sound the note, not of an ignoble pacificism or of a violent Chauvinism, but of a noble reasonableness, we should be thrice blessed and the security secured in a just influence would be such that no one could set the bounds."

The secretary found that "constant emphasis on study, serenity and reasonableness" were needed "as the essential qualifications for successful democracy," and he answered the "disturbers of our peace" who say [illegible] security, liberty, opportunity and justice.

"After every allowance is made for the regrettable conditions which every lover of mankind must desire to remedy," said Mr. Hughes, "it still remains true that nowhere is labor better circumstanced or rewarded, no where is there such a high standard of living or so many comforts enjoyed by almost the entire population. It still remains true that we have on every hand groups studying conditions, diffusing knowledge, creating a better social hygiene. The only serious threat to labor in this country is the threat of political impotency and of the impoverishment which would come from the destruction of the confidence which is the vital breath of enterprise."

Asserting that "the first lesson in politics is that efficient government should begin at home," Mr. Hughes said:

"If the citizens of New York city have not sufficient civic interest and organizing ability to meet adequately their own obvious needs, it is with poor grace that they criticize lost motion in Washington, the trouble is not with our system, but in applying the power that is going to waste.

"In the recent campaign the attention of our people was focused on our institution, especially on judicial institutions. We have nothing better than our supreme court and our people intended to protect it against the attacks of demagogues. It does not need, as some think, to be popularized.

Mr. Hughes recalled that since Lincoln's day the country had tripled its population and multiplied its wealth many times.

"If we save ourselves it will be because we exhibit organization and organic life," he said. "It will be because we know how to maintain essential institutions and to safeguard them equally against attack and decy. We cannot afford to overestimate our immunity and to look with unconcern upon those among us who would destroy our form of government. We cannot ignore their organized efforts to poison the mind of our youth and lead them in their inexperience to menace their own future.

The test of the nation's safety and the measure of its capacity for progress the secretary said, is "in our temper, in the reasonableness which enables us to work together and to get results.

"I am happy to think," he added, "that this quality is more in evidence than formerly. It is more conspicuous in the press. I do not wish to charge our friends of the press with an undue reticense or an excessive sobriety of statement, but the rancor of an earlier day has largely disappeared.

"But the best evidence of the growth of the grace of reasonableness is shown by the futility of the extravaganices of vituperative politics. These assaults are still numerous on the platform and in the press, to say nothing of more privileged places. But while they attract much attention they do little damage because our people are increasingly disgusted wit hthat sort of thing. At the last election, they voted on that proposition."

Mr. Hughes found that the greatest difficulty "in an age of fleeting observations" was not so much the task of informing the public" as to make the information stick."

CONGRESSIONAL INQUIRIES OVERDONE, BINGHAM SAYS

New York, Feb. 12.—Congressional investigations of the last year were cited by Senator Bingham of Connecticut at the Lincoln Day dinner of the National Republican club tonight as evidence that the doctrine of the division of governmental powers into legislative, executive and judicial departments is breaking down.

Popular demand for speed and efficiency is responsible, said Senator Bingham. The public has become "impatient with the slow movement of the wheels of justice and the cumbersome machine set up by our constitution."

"During the past year," he continued, "congress has authorized a great many investigations which are not legislative in character, but executive.

"Notwithstanding our confidence in the president, and in the heads of departments he has chosen, we are continually tempted to direct him to investigate this or that, when by law it is his duty to do it.

"Because the senate of the United States believed that certain officials of the federal government were guilty of misconduct, the senate decided to adopt grand jury proceedings to investigate their conduct. It seems to me that the constitutional course would have been for the house of representatives to bring an impeachment against the federal officials and for the senate to act as a judicial body rather than a grand jury."

Discussing "the principle of paternalism versus self-reliance," Senator Bingham saw a "tendency to a weakening of the moral fibre of our people," in the presence of "thousands of people who believe in a paternalistic form of government," and who "would like to see the government build all the roads, run all the schools and pay for all the improvements" of all the states.

CERTAIN THAT 90 MEN ARE DEAD IN THE STEIN MINE

London, Feb. 12.—A despatch to Reuters from Dortmund concerning the explosion in the Stein mine last night said:

"It is certain that the 90 men still in the mine are dead. The mine was regarded as exceptionally safe, owing to the per cent ventilating system which is now destroyed. Tuesday and Wednesday a series of trifling explosions occurred, but were regarded as unimportant.

"Thirty minutes before the mid-day shift changed over yesterday an explosion occurred in the first levels of the mine, which was followed by other explosions on two lower levels, and the pit immediately filled with fire-damp. The damaged ventilating system rendred the work of recovering bodies most hazardous and one of the rescue party was killed. A number of doctors and nurses are awaiting at the pit-head in the forlorn hope that some of the miners may be rescued alive."

CAUSTIC COMMENT ON COOLIDGE'S WOODEN HORSE

Washington, Feb. 12—Commenting on President Coolidge's wooden horse, Representative Howard, democrat, Oklahoma, declared on the floor of the house today he would not be surprised to see it "heralded to the people of the United States that the president is riding this wooden horse for the purpose of cutting down the oat bill at the white house stables."

Recalling the executive's trip to Chicago in an ordinary Pullman coach, the Oklahoma representative remarked that he had since become even "more economical in his means of transportation," and added:

"I have an idea that when in the future any program for the benefit of the livestock producer is referred to, the farmers will be advised to produce wooden horses."

"I should not be surprised to hear that the next great stroke of economy will be the placing of oars on the Mayflower," he continued.

COMMITTEE FAILED IN ITS MISSION IN ARABIA

Cairo, Feb. 11.—The delegation of the Indian caliphate committee, which spent several months in Arabia in an effort to bring about a peace settlement between the Hashmite family of Hedjaz and Ibn Saud, Sultan of Nejd, sailed yesterday for Bombay, disappointed at the failure of its mission.

Both warring leaders, Ibn Saud and King Ali, asked the delegation not to interfere in the internal affairs of their countries and finally declared that they had no confidence in the Indian Caliphate committee's good intentions or in its representative character.

Plea for Protection of Fr[illegible]

Paris, Feb. 12 (By the A. P.)—Premier Herriot today made a strong appeal in the chamber of deputies for the protection of the franc. He said he was willing to allow the severely maimed a proposed increase in pensions involving 45,000,000 francs, but added that propositions which would increase the pension budget four billion francs could not be inscribed in the general budget.

PROPOSE CHANGE OF SEAT OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Geneva, Feb. 12.—(By The A. P.)—Nothing has ever caused such commotion on the staff of the secretariat of the League of Nations as the bringing up in the British parliament yesterday of a suggestion that the seat of the league might be removed from Geneva to some other city. Officials of the league, however, are unanimous in interpreting the governmental reply as meaning that England would not take the initiative in such a step. These officials say they know of no serious project to transfer the headquarters of the league elsewhere.

Discussion of the removal of the league's seat is coincident with a recent decision of architects that the new assembly hall will cost 8,000,000 Swiss francs, instead of the four-and-a-half-million which had been voted, and their judgment that the vacant land adjoining the present secretariat building is not sufficient for a proper assembly auditorium, especially if it is later desired to make additions.

If a vote of the league employes was taken, it probably would be in favor of removal, as the rigorous Geneva climate has caused considerable illness among the women members of the staff. Vienna or Brussels have been suggested as feasible locations, but the prevailing conviction is that the league members will abide by the late President Wilson's insistance that neutral Geneva was the most ideal home for the league.

TEN INJURED IN TROLLEY ACCIDENT IN NEW BRITAIN

New Britain, Feb. 12.—Ten persons were injured, some of them seriously here tonight when a trolley car jumped the track at a switch at Chestnut and Stanley streets, crossed the road and overturned on to the sidewalk. There were 25 passengers in the car at the time of the accident.

An investigation was started at once to determine the cause of the accident which tied up trolley traffic for some time. The car, in charge of Motorman Robert Hartnett and Conductor John Rowlins, both of Hartford, left the rails just after it struck the switch and did not stop until the front trucks had struck the curb. The car then toppled, landing on its side on the walk.

Practically all of the passengers received minor cuts and bruises and ten were found seriously injured enough to cause their removal to the New Britain General hospital.

Both the mortorman and the conductor were arrested charged with criminal negligence and were held in bonds of $1,000 each.

NEWS AND OTHER MESSAGES BY NAVAL RADIO STATIONS

Washington, Feb. 12.—The senate today passed a joint resolution extending for two years from next June 30 the authorization for transmittal by naval radio stations of certain news and other messages.

The service applies particularly to the Pacific coast and the extension has been recommended by the department of commerce. Continuation of this service by the navy is necessary, Senator Jones, republican, Washington, said, because private agencies have been unable so far to complete construction of facilities to handle the messages.

TO INVESTIGATE RADIO ROW IN CINCINNATI

Washington, Feb. 12.—Complete investigation of the radio row in Cincinnati in which stations WLW and WMH have been broadcasting on one wave length simultaneously, was ordered today by Secretary Hoover.

The trouble arose when the two stations, unable to agree on a division of time in which each would have unrestricted use of the wave length, began broadcasting on one wave length simultaneously.

TELLS OF GREAT DEMAND FOR ONE DOLLAR BILLS

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—The demand for one dollar bills recently has been so great that notes of that denomination are being turned out by the government at Washington without proper seasoning, E. R. Thomas, president of a bank at Royersford, Pa., told members of Group 2, Philadelphia Bankers' association in annual session here today.

The bills should ordinarily be seasoned for a six months period, otherwise they will not stand the wear and tear they should, Mr. Thomas said.

ANNUAL STATE DINNER FOR SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Washington, Feb. 12. — President and Mrs. Coolidge entertained about fifty guests tonight at the annual state dinner in honor of the speaker of the house.

The dinner was followed by a musical program in the east room.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Clio Hinton Bracken.

Mrs. Bracken was born at Rhinebeck, N. Y., July 26, 1869. She was the widow of William Barrie Bracken, a lawyer, to whom she was married in 1900, a year after she obtained a divorce from the late James G. Huneker, music critic.

Mrs. Bracken studied in Paris with Rodin, St. Gaudens and Macmonnies. At the age of 29 she won a $10,000 prize for her statue of General Fremont in Montana. Another of her principal works is a bust of Paderewski.

Cold Weather May Help Check Floods

Heavy Damage Has Resulted Along Upper Reaches of Connecticut River.

Boston, Feb. 11.—Falling temperatures may bring relief to the flood situation caused by five days of record-breaking warmth followed by heavy rains and the sudden melting of the winter snows. New England rivers were still rising tonight swollen by the rush of melted snow from the hills, but a heavy freeze promised by the weather forecaster would check the freshets, it was hoped.

The greatest damage from the floods was in northern New Hampshire where the Connecticut river and its tributaries received the melting of a heavy winter snowfall within a few days. Colebrook, N. H., had many anxious hours when two ice jams on the Mohawk river, a tributary of the Connecticut, dammed the water back until several streets were flooded. Workmen labored all night with dynamite to blast a passage through the ice and today the jams broke and the obstruction was carried down to the Connecticut. There a huge jam threatened dams and brides. Enormous cakes of ice were strewn along the shore and on Colebrook street as the jams gave way with a grinding roar.

Considerable damage to railroad tracks was reported from points farther down the Connecticut river. At Woodsville, N. H., the river was seven feet above normal stage and rising rapidly, fed by heavy rains. While the snow had almost disappeared in that region farmers said there was a greater accumulation of ice on the highways than the aggregate of five seasons past. The overflow of the Ammonoosuc river, a tributary of the Connecticut, covered the tracks of the Boston and Main railroads at Bath and Lisbon, N. H., and at Cherry Mountain, N. H., caused a 25-foot washout on the Berling branch of the railroad. The Wells river, which also flows into the Connecticut at Woodsville, overflowed its banks and at South Newbury, Vt., the state highway was under water.

Damage from flooded cellars was reported from many places in New Hampshire and Vermont, and traffic on the West River railroad, a branch of the Central Vermont railroad was suspended for a time at Townshend, Vt., when the tracks were covered with water and ice. Dynamite was used to break up ice jams on the Winooski and other rivers.

Reports from many parts of northern New England indicated that the highways had been rendered almost impassable by the unseasonable warm weather. In Rutland county, Vt., it was said there would be an almost complete tie up of vehicular traffic unless cold weather intervened. Many of the main roads were reported blocked with mud.

SEVERAL BRIDGES WERE CARRIED AWAY BY FLOODS

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Three railroad and two highway bridges had been carried away in Tioga county, numerous villages were inundated and a number of families had been rescued from their homes in boats, when a drop in temperature tonight checked flood conditions menacing the southern tier. At Owego, the water reached a record height. Passengers on a branch of the Lehigh Valley railroad were transferred in boats at two points where bridges had been swept away.

Nimmonsburg, north of Binghamton, was under water and several residents were taken from their homes in boats when the Chenango overflowed, blocking the state highway to the north.

PORTION BOSTON POST ROAD THREE FEET UNDER WATER

Port Chester, N. Y., Feb. 12—Nearly 100 yards of the Boston post road at the foot of Nigger Hole Hill between here and Greenwich, Conn., was under 3 feet of water tonight four special deputies were stationed at the hill to warn autoists of the danger. Some of the cars still crossed the inundated section tonight, although several trucks were stalled. This section of the road has been under repair and the water was carried by a gully which empties into the road at the foot of the hill.

CALIFORNIA RECOVERING FROM SEVERE STORM

San Francisco, Feb. 12.—Northern and central California were recovering tonight from a storm severe enough to rip buildings from their foundations, cause at least one train wreck, wash out railroads and highways, prostrate light and power wires, and even change the contour of the landscape in places by causing tremendous landslides.

The storm is not over, according to the United States weather bureau here, but it is generally believed that the "peak" has passed.

Many thousands of dollars damage was caused and one life lost.

John Watson, a former marine and former resident of Aberdeen, Wash., was killed in a cellar cave-in near St. Helena. Two fellow workers, R. S. White and C. D. Clark were injured, White seriously. The cellar had been undermined by flood waters.

ICE JAM IS BLOCKING HOUSATONIC VALLEY

Newtown, Conn., Feb. 12.—The biggest ice jam in the history of the Housatonic valley is blocking the Housatonic rivber here and piles of ice from 17 to 20 feet high extend back from the Sandy Hook bridge connecting Newtown and Southbury for more than a mile. The bridge under normal conditions is 20 feet above the water, but the ice is now within three feet of the bottom of the bridge.

The water has flooded a large section and the highway which crossed the bridge has been closed to traffic. Telephone poles are down and the water is flowing across the road.

The home of State Senator Robert Mitchell, a mile above the bridge, is completely surrounded by water and the first floor of the house is flooded. Water also has reached the home of Edward Mitchell nearby.

The water reached the barn of Charles Asthee today and the caretaker returning from Sandy Hook was unable to get the horses out of doors. With an axe he cut holes in the back of the barn and horses reached safety after swimming through the water.

Committee Hearing On Sunday Trains

New Haven Road Would Alter Statutes in Conflict With Public Welfare.

Hartford, Feb. 12.—No opposition developed before the legislative committee on railroads this afternoon on the bills introduced for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad which would alter statutes of many years standing prohibiting the road from running Sunday excursion trains for transportation of excursion trains for transportation of excursion parties from one point to another within the state, and prohibiting the giving of special rates on Sundays.

Trains run through Connecticut on Sunday because they carry the mails and are under the interstate commerce commission but the New Haven road has not been able to do this. There had been a growing demand for excursion trains and excursion rates on Sunday, Mr. Buckingham, counsel for the company, said. The company is not going into the Sunday excursion business, he added, but does desire to be in a position to grant requests to run a train to the seashore or to a pleasure resort inland which it cannot do now. He explained that last summer many requests were made by organizations in inland cities and towns for transportation to the Long Island sound shore on Sundays but this could not be done. Excursions were run out of the state but those who went on them travelled on interstate trains.

Mr. Buckingham said that lest anyone think the road is encroaching on Sunday observance laws or desires to break down Sunday observance he had a substitute bill which places with the public utilities commission the right to pass upon the company's application to run these Sunday trains. Mr. Buckingham said that equipment used for Sunday trains would be that which is at present idle, and the crews would be men who would have this as regular runs and not as overtime.

Before the committee on finance Tax Commissioner Blodgett opposed the bills to tax cuts an dto lay a tax of three cents per package on cigarettes. He said that in neither instance would there be any revenue to the state from the taxes and in fact it would cost the state money to collect them. No one appeared to support either bill.

WHEELER WOULD ELEVATE PROFESSION OF THE LAW

Bridgeport, Feb. 12—"Leaders of the bar must cease to be hired men of individual interests," Chief Justice George W. Wheeler of the supreme court of errors of the state of Connecticut, declared in an address at the testimonial dinner of the Fairfield bar to Homer S. Cummings, who recently retired after ten years as state's attorney here tonight. "Leaders of the bar must daily bear in mind that this public profession of the law demands that its leaders dedicate themselves to those public duties which the profession of the law is better able to fulfill than any other profession."

Contending that a strong, able and upright bar is a pre-requisite to a strong judiciary, Chief Justice Wheeler said: "My belief in the invaluable aid of advocacy in the determination of a cause makes me unable to concur in the wisdom of the proposal to have our supreme court advise the congress upon the constitutionality of a proposed act. We should not have had Marshall's opinions had we not had Webster and the other giants among the advocates of that day. The lawyer is an indispensable part of our administration of justice."

DECLARES TAX ON CATS WOULD CULTIVATE RATS

Hartford, Feb. 12.—Justice of the Peace William H. Fairchild of New Fairfield warned the finance committee of the legislature today that every pair of rats and their descendants that are permitted to live and multiply to the number of 359,709,842 in three years. He was speaking in opposition to a bill providing for a tax on cats which, he feared, would cause the extermination of most cats and result in the state being overrun by rats.

Mrs. Ellen T. Preston, representing the Meriden Humane society, which, she said, included in its membership three prominent clergymen, two physicians, three spinsters and many others, opposed the bill.

H. Clay Preston, general manager of the Connecticut Humane society, opposed the bill. He told the committee that many people who kept cats did not take the bill seriously enough to appear before the committee in opposition to it.

Cronin, with Governor Trumbull and Senator Butler.

The bill authorizes the governor to appoint three members of the legislature to serve on it, and they have the authority of court to subpoena witnesses and papers having a bearing on the question. An appropriation of $1,000 is allowed to cover the expense of the inquiry, a report concerning which must be in the hands of the governor by April 1.

An effort will be made to pass the bill immediately under a suspension of the rules.

HOPEFUL, BUT AMBIGUOUS, REPORTS FROM CAVE CITY

Rescuers Have Struck Cavern Which They Hope May Lead Down to Where Floyd Collins is Imprisoned—Passage Seemed to be of Sufficient Depth to Permit Rescue Party to Enter—Later Reported That Several Hours of Digging and Timbering May be Necessary Before Anyone Can be Permitted to Enter the Tunnel—Collins Has Been Imprisoned Two Weeks, Eight Days Without Food or Water.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 12—(By the A. P.)—A cavern which the Floyd Collins rescue party hopes may lead down to the imprisoned cave man, was uncovered at the bottom of the rescue shaft at 7.30 p. m. Some time was required to clear it out so it could be penetrated but the rescuers expect to reach Collins very soon.

Preparations to raise him to the surface on a stretcher platform and render all possible medical aid were checked over carefully and made ready for instant use.

The diamond point drill, boring into the bottom of the shaft, recorded about a foot and a half of soft sandy dirt and two feet of limestone, above the underground passage. The passage seemed to be of sufficient depth to permit a rescue party to enter.

Several hours of digging and timbering may be necessary before any one can be permitted to enter the tunnell or crevice located, officials said.

Shaft Down 49 1-2 Feet

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 12—(By the A. P.)—The depth of the Sand Cave rescue shaft was announced at 49 1-2 feet at 10 o'clock tonight. The official bulletin said that seven feet below the bottom of the shaft an underground chamber was located. Two feet of limestone formed the roof of this passage.

COLLINS HAS NOW BEEN IMPRISONED TWO WEEKS

Cave City, Feb. 12—(By the A. P.)—Officials in charge of the operations at Sand Cave, where Floyd Collins has been imprisoned for more than 13 days, late today began drilling a test hole within the shaft now being dug toward the passageway to Sand Cave.

At 10 o'clock tomorrow Collins will have been in the cave two weeks, and without food or water for eight days. The last time his voice was heard was more than a week ago, and whether he is dead or alive is a matter of conjecture.

H. T. Carmichael, in charge of the work at the shaft, late today made it known that it was his intention to undertake to go around, rather than through, the caprock of Sand Cave, unless a natural fissure was expectedly disclosed.

When the miners have put in another section or two of timbering, piling then will be driven in and the workers will begin tunneling in an attempt to reach the natural crevice, probably between Collins and the "squeeze" which closed the passage-way last week. The workers may have to dig straight down from the tunnel to accomplish this, it was said.

The test drill, which has sunk to a depth of 76 feet close to the shaft, was moved today and work started in a hole within the shaft. This test was expected to determine whether the workers were near a fissure or over the roof of the cave itself, while the first prospecting was done to ascertain what strata would be encountered.

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser of the University of Kentucky expressed the opinion that there would be no sudden finding of Collins. He said Collins' tomb would be unsealed and that someone would then determine whether the victim was dead or alive.

Official figures given out this afternoon gave the depth of the shaft at 47 feet on the lower side and 52 feet on the upper side of the steep incline at the mouth of the shaft.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE MILITARY BOARD OF INQUIRY

Cave City, Ky., Neb. (12—(By the A. P.)—The feeling between factions in the early rescue parties at Sand Cave was rivalry and not jealousy, witnesses testified today before the state military board of inquiry. Homer Collins, brother of Floyd Collins, said that no one was ever advised to stay out of the cave except for motives of safety.

Cave county people, Homer said, felt that outsiders, inexperienced in exploring caves might cause cave-ins from lack of knowledge of the sandstone formation of the caverns, but no one was ever prevented from going down until the state troops came.

Homer said he was asked by several persons if Floyd was really in the cave.

"Of course he is," he replied. "I was down there to see him several times. Such a question unnerved me."

E. L. Abernethy, Louisville correspondent of the Associated Press, testified that the rumors mentioned in an Associated Press story Sunday night were common knowledge in Cave City but the two sentences in the Associated Press story referring to the rumors were followed immediately by a third sentence which declared that those who had actually been in the cave knew they were untrue. Other newspapermen, he said, wrote the same thing in their stories. The Associated Press despatch had been attacked by Governor Fields.

The military board agreed that there was no malicious intent in the despatch. Dr. H. P. Honaker of Horse Cave, a nearby town, said in his testimony yesterday that he had heard the same rumors, but as he had been to the cave he knew they were unfounded.

DEFENSE TO OPEN IN ATLANTA PRISON CASE

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 12 (By the A. P.)—After listening since Monday to testimony relating to the alleged sale of "soft jobs" at the Atlanta federal penitentiary, attorneys for A. E. Sartain and L. J. Fletcher, formerly warde and deputy, respectively, of the penitentiary, and Laurence Riehl, Columbus, O., charged with conspiracy and bribery, tomorrow will call the first of their witnesses.

District Attorney Client Hager late today rested for the government. His announcement followed the second appearance on the stand of Father Thomas R. Hayden, former prison chaplain, who had admitted his participation in an alleged conspiracy to accept $10,500 for special privileges at the institution from seven men convicted in the Savannah "rum ring" exposure in 1923.

Hayden changed portions of his previous testimony regarding a visit which he said he and Riehl had made to Savannah early in 1924, when they collected the $10,500 from Willie Haar, one of the convicted men. In his first testimony Hayden declared he had been met at the station by Ernest Haar, brother of Willie. Today he said the meeting did not take place.

EXPLOSION WRECKED HOUSE IN BARRE, VT. FIVE PERSONS INJURED, ONE FATALLY

Barre, Vt., Feb. 12.—An explosion, believed to have been caused by gas wrecked a tenement house occupied by six families tonight and resulted in the death of one person and serious injuries to five others. Fire followed the explosion and it was some time before the firemen were able to subdue the flames sufficiently to permit of a thorough search of the ruins. The dead womanf is Mrs. Enrico Maroborabi, wife of a laborer. Her body was found in the ruins.

The explosion came without warning. Neighbors reported having heard a muffled sound and a moment later the wooden structure collapsed and then almost immediately took fire. The force of the blast hurled one of the occupants clear of the structure, and to this she probably owes her life. Miss Lea Galli, who was passing in the street outside the building, was crushed beneath a wall. She had both legs broken and was so badly hurt that physicians at the hospital to which all were taken held out little hope for her.

Reports reached the police that gas coming in contact with a lighted lamp was responsible for the explosion, but they had not been able to confirm this some time later.

Most of the occupants of the building were absent when the explosion occurred. Of six persons in the tenement at the time only one escaped serious injury. A check of the tenants tonight by the police revealed that all others were safe. According to meager details of the events immediately preceding the explosion, as obtained by the police, Mrs. Marborabi was seen to enter the cellar with a lighted lamp early in the evening. Immediately afterward a terrific explosion blew the tall walls of the wooden structure outward and sent the roof and three floors down in a heap level with the street. Fire then broke out.

Of those taken from the ruins by firemen, Miss Galli and Marborabi, husband of the dead woman, were the most seriously injured. One of Miss Galli's legs was so badly crushed that amputation was resorted to. Marborabi suffered severe burns about face and arms. His condition is serious.

F. Ottinelli was taken from the wreckage with his wife and his daughter Zora. Ottinelli had severe burns about the face and hands. His daughter suffered burns on the face and an injured shoulder. Mrs. Ottinelli's back was injured.

Mrs. Harold Bond, negro, was hurled from her tenement into an adjoining alley by the blast. She was picked up somewhat dazed, her face bruised, but otherwise she was not seriously hurt.

There seems to be opposition developing over the change in the city charter relative to the appointment of the prosecuting attorney. House Bill No. 278, introduced by Representative A. Linn Weatherhead had its hearing before the judiciary committee at the capitol Wednesday afternoon and a number of local people appeared for and against. The bill provides that the appointment of the prosecuting attorney by the judge of the police court need not necessarily be from the opposing political party, as it must be under the reading of the law as it stands at present. The bill was sponsored by Mr. Weatherhead; others to appear in its favor were Sheriff Charles A. Gates, Alderman William E. Jackson, Postmaster Walter R. King, Nelson A. Daniels and Nelson A. Gates. The bill was opposed by Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Kelley, Acting Mayor Hickey and former Selectman Frank M. Lincoln.

There was no opposition to the increase in in salaries for both the judge and the prosecuting attorney of the local police court from $800 to $1,000, with $240 additional for the services of clerk of the court by the judge.

Eddie M. John, 29, was placed under arrest, shortly before four o'clock Thursday afternoon, on a charge of breach of the peace. John was locked up to await a bondsman. He will be presented in court either this (Friday morning or Saturday morning. The arrest was made by Chief McArthur and Officer Coriarty who learned that it has been one of John's customs to call on his aged father for funds and to start a row if refused. Thursday afternoon John went to his brother-in-law's store on Milk street and finding his father there he insisted on financial assistance. The father refused and when John became boisterous a relative notified police headquarters. Eddie John has a long police record in this and other towns. He was arrested here on one occasion for assault and at other times for reckless driving. Last week he concluded one year of probation imposed when he was paroled from a thirty day sentence at Brooklyn jail which he served as the outcome of an automobile accident on Dark Lantern Hill, near Danielson. Among charges held against him at that time were, driving without an operator's license, reckless driving and evasion of responsibility.

The four day thaw and heavy rain have swelled rivers in this section so that some of them and various streams are overflowing their banks. Immense cakes of ice were finding their way over the six dams of the Willimantic River Thursday, between the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing plant and No. 4 mill of the American Thread Company. Turbulent waters swept over the big dam at the pumping station to a depth of twenty-six inches, according to Superintendent Willard N. Bowen. The ice on the pumping station pond has not broken but is expected to give way at any time and then it will come roaring and pounding over the dam.

Officials at the power station at the Scotland dam report that the waters of the Shetucket river have risen nearly three feet above normal and low fields along the banks are flooded. The Fenton river and tributaries through Ashford and the Ten Mile River, in the Atwoodville disuict, are overflowing their banks and in Chaplin several roads bordering streams have become impassable. Country roads in general are very poor and in many cases the deep mud, occasioned by snow and rain and the frost coming out can be traveled only by ox or horse-drawn vehicles. Lizzies operated by some rural carriers out of the local post office and from Columbia, Eagleville, Mansfield, Scotland and North Windham, refused to budge to any reasonable extent and the carriers were forced to enlist the services of horse drawn vehicles.

From the city proper, many flooded cellars were reported and many automobiles were stalled in driveways and back yards of private homes. On the city streets workmen were busy repairing washouts and were attacking the ice on Main street with picks and shovels. By evening the main thoroughfare was back to normal, although crosswalks in other sections remained a hazard to automobile springs.

Residents of Windham, South Windham, Franklin and Lebanon will attend the hearing in the town building here this (Friday) morning at 9.35 o'clock relative to the establishing of a bus line from Willimantic to these points, with the terminal in Lebanon Center. Members of the Hartford-Willimantic Blue Line Jitney Company are backing the movement.

MISS ANNA McCARTHY STRUCK BY LEGISLATIVE TRAIN

Willimantic, Feb. 12.—Miss Anna McCarthy, 35, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis McCarthy of 131 Bridge street, got a fractured left knee, possible fracture of the skull, cuts about the face and probable internal injuries, when she was struck a glancing blow by the legislative special train due here from Hartford at 5.17 o'clock Thursday afternoon, as the train was crossing the Bridge street crossing a quarter of a mile west of the railroad station of the New Haven railroad. A west bound train from Boston to Hartford, due in this city at 5.06, had left the station a few minutes behind schedule and had just passed Bridge street, when Miss McCarthy started across the track, coming toward Main street and was confronted by the special. The train was in charge of Conductor Dennis M. Corcoran and Engineer H. Hanson. The latter saw the woman coming toward his engine. It is believed that Miss McCarthy saw the approaching danger but was a fraction too late in jumping to safety. The train was halted within a distance of about 15 feet and Miss McCarthy was picked up by the engineer. She was fully conscious at the time. An automobile driver volunteered his services and she was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital, where Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer found that the blow she received on the head had broken nearly all her teeth. An X-ray is to be taken to determine the full extent of her injuries. J. H. Bulger, flagman at the crossing, had taken his post at the center of the street with his warning sign and he noticed Miss McCarthy as she stopped on the opposite side of the track to allow the west-bound train to pass. Freight Agent Harry Blanchette stated that it was an unusual occurrence for two trains to meet at the crossing. Miss McCarthy has crossed the Bridge street tracks several times daily for a number of years, on her way to and from her place of employment in the United Cigar Store conducted on Main street by her blind brother, John R. McCarthy.

Thirty-five plumbers and steam-fitters, members of Local No. 345 with several of the master plumbers as their guests, held their annual turkey supper, at Labor Union hall, Thursday evening. The seven shops of the city were represented. For entertainment, Louis Delude played several piano selections and Henry Moran entertained with vocal numbers. Group singing was also enjoyed. The committee in charge comprised John R. McCarthy, chairman, Floyd Willet, Robert Deck, William Kelley and Henry Moran.

Burns 94 per cent. air and 6 per cent. common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, O. N. Johnson, 642 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

OVER 60 YEARS OF SUCCESS

WESTERLY

Flag day, Lincoln's Birthday, was observed on Thursday in much similar manner as in previous years. The day was a legal holiday in Pawcatuck; but on the Rhode Island side of Westerly the most attention was paid to the day's observance by the public schools.

West Broad Street Grammar school in Pawcatuck had a short formal programme in the morning with a holiday in the afternoon. Public and private buildings in Westerly were opened the usual hours. Due to the severe rainstorm the usual display of American flags was lacking.

For the Westerly public schools there were formal programmes of recitations, patriotic songs and other exercises were held. The local patriotic organizations detailed speakers from their number to visit the schools. In the morning the White Rock and Pleasant Street schools were visited by Commander Amos P. Chapman of Budlong post, No. 18, G. A. R., and Past Commander Albert F. Lawton of Amos P. Chapman camp, Sons of Veterans. Visiting at the Dunn's Corner school was Walter F. Thorp, of Harold Merrill post, American Legion; at the Quarry Hill and Chestnut Street schools were Miss Emma Minchen and Miss Ida Mae Clark, both of Budlong Woman's Relief corps.

In the afternoon at the Westerly High school at the annual Flag Day exercises was present Richard J. Rooney, of the Sons of Veterans, while Rev. Arnt L. Schoning of the Broad Street Christian church, a World war veteran spoke to the students on "Abraham Lincoln." At the Elm Street Grammar school Harry T. Powers, of Robert Brucker camp, Spanish War Veterans, spoke and at the Bradford school in the afternoon was Walter F. Thorpe with Misses Minchen and Clark at the Park Avenue school.

"Tom Mix" Gibbons, of Clarkesville, who recently returned to his Westerly home from a trip to Florida, and who made the trip north and south on very limited capital, entertained New Haven commuters Thursday afternoon at the Westerly station. The young man with the checked shirt, leather boots and "gallon hat" showed his ability as a ropester, using an automobile tow rope.

To enjoy the winter sports, Mr. and Mrs. Wells R. Fowler and Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Simonson have left Westerly for Bethel inn, Bethel, Me.

For Franconia, N. H., to pass a week at Sugar Hill, there have left town Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Buffum, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Price, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Utter, Mrs. Lewis Stanton and Miss Kate Virginia Cottrell.

The Westerly Ministerial association held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon at the Westerly Memorial and Public library. Officers elected were: Rev. Lewis A. Walker, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, president; Rev. Myton U. Hatfield, pastor of First Baptist church, vice president; Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor Broad Street Christian church, secretary and Rev. Ernest E. Morrill, pastor of Pawcatuck Congregational church, treasurer.

The P. S. Barber Hose company is planning to hold its annual fair. The various fair nights will be preceded by a street parade in which the Stonington band and St. Michael's Boy Scout Drum corps will supply the music. Visiting companies will come from Stonington, the B. F. Hoxie Engine and Hose Co., of Mystic, the East Greenwich Fire company and a number of others. Music for dancing is to be furnished by the Warren Braley Royal Serenaders orchestra from Danielson, Conn.

The proposed new bonds of the enlarged Westerly Fire district as presented to the meeting Wednesday evening were:

Beginning at a point in Pawcatuck river on the boundary line between the state of Rhode Island and the state of Connecticut, said point being directly west of the north-westerly corner of land conveyed to the town of Westerly by the White Rock mill by deed dated Dec. 31, 1897, and recorded in the land evidence records of the town of Westerly in book No. 33, at page 283, thence in a generally southerly direction by and with said boundary line to a point opposite the first stone wall south-westerly of the dwelling house of George F. Champlin at Avondale; thence south-easterly to a culvert over a ditch crossing Champlin avenue, so-called; then southerly, by and with said Champlin avenue to the Watch Hill road; thence northeasterly, by and with said Watch Hill road, to a point opposite the first stone wall south-westerly of the dwelling house of Henry C. Lanphear; then south-easterly 560 feet; thence in a general north-easterly and northerly direction, parallel with and 500 feet south-easterly and easterly from said Watch Hill road, to a point opposite the junction of said Watch Hill road and East avenue; thence continuing northerly parallel with and 500 feet easterly from said East avenue, to a lane way running easterly along the northerly line of land of Frank C. Turano in the regular session of Third district court.

Trouble developed with the engine of the Everglades Limited express due to make a flag stop, westbound, soon after 9.30 o'clock at the Westerly station of the New Haven road. Before the locomotive could be replaced the train was placed on a siding and the Federal express was allowed to proceed. The Everglades express proceeded after a half hour holdup.

A twenty foot section of what was formerly the offset wall of the Vose property at the Canal street side of the corner lot at High and Canal streets, fell back into the excavation being made there by the present owner, Samuel Nardone, about 6 o'clock Thursday night. In the afternoon the rains and frost coming out of the ground caused a considerable section of the second offset wall near the rear of the house occupied by Dr. John Ruisi to fall into the same hole, on the opposite side.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Rheuma—The One Safe and Quick-Acting Remedy for Rheumatism—Money Back If it Fails

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and to be of use to themselves and their families.

Don't be sceptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous uric acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

Don't think because Rheuma is not expensive that it won't bring you back to health. There is no guess work about it. That's why Lee & Osgood Co., and good druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick and blessed relief almost at once.

The school children had a half holiday Thursday, the school closing at noon to honor Lincoln's Birthday.

The semi-monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in G. A. R. hall Thursday. After singing and devotional exercises, Mrs. W. H. Lamb, Mrs. C. E. Newbury and Mrs. Mary S. Brown gave reports of the W. C. T. U. institute held in New London Tuesday. The state president and other officers had charge of it. After a paper on Christian Citizenship was read by Mrs. Brown, Mrs. L. F. Park was appointed superintendent of that work for the local union.

The annual membership campaign of community house is being carried on. The committee, Mrs. Leonard J. Hermes, Joseph Tyler, John Rossi, Mrs. G. S. Leonard, James Galvin, Miss Edna Wheeler, Mrs. A. O. Music lovers greatly enjoyed Thursday evening, hearing the famous Suwanee River quartet in the Baptist church. There was a large and interested audience and insistent applause met with prompt encores. The program was varied including the always popular plantation songs and the melodies of the camp meeting, in addition to selections on the banjo, guitar and mandolin. John Gant is the director and a thorough musician.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Publicity given during the past fortnight to Floyd Collins, pinioned by a boulder in the depths of Sand Cave in Kentucky, has recalled to the minds of many men in Danielson, and with something of a thrill, their own experience in prowling through the caverns in Squaw Rocks, near the Alvah Pierce farm, three or four miles to the south of Danielson and to the east of the Green Hollow road.

The caverns are still there, but it is not common knowledge at least that anyone is given to exploring them in these later days. Certainly not the men who now look back to their late grammar and early high school days and recall how they thought it great sport to venture through some crevice in this amazing turmoil of ledge and boulders and by squirming or crawling through torturous passageways find their way long distances through the darkness to some exit that they had come to know. Or to prowl about feeling like great adventurers who knew not what they were going to encounter, but imbued with the spirit of exploration—and the chances taken not considered.

Squaw Rocks have been famous in this territory for years. Some great tumult of nature must have been the cause of the extraordinary arrangement of the great rocks that are piled about so haphazardly. Human hands would not be capable of the arrangement.

Romance, too, is woven about the locality and out of dim memories one recalls a tale of how Indian braves in time of tribal wars were accustomed to bring their squaws and children to this wild and awe-inspiring place and secret them away in the caverns and passageways that they might be safe until peace could be restored or the enemy driven off; hence the name Squaw Rocks. One finds there the Devil's pulpit, the Chief's cave and various other places of interest.

Boys of a generation back thought it great sport to explore in the darkness beneath that jumble of giant rocks. They view the exploit from a different angle these days. It is not one to be recommended. Dangers lurk there. One does not recall any serious result from the exploration of the underground passageways of Squaw Rocks, but the accident of Sand Cave might easily be repeated. And then one might think of the snakes to be encountered. That alone is enough to ruin the adventure for most folks, certainly for some who never gave it a thought in the old days.

It was announced Thursday, following a meeting of the Danielson Rod and Gun club, that the organization has voted to spend $250 of its funds on restocking of brooks, lakes and streams with fish, including bass, and in buying some game birds for distribution for miles around during the 1925 season.

This plan is in line with the work that has been done by the club since its organization and in keeping with a program thought out when the club was being formed. Co-operating with the state commissioner on fish and game, the club already has done splendid work in restocking trout brooks and in distributing game birds in Killingly and other towns hereabouts that are represented in the membership.

Distribution of bass will be a new undertaking for the club, which is now giving consideration to the problem of deciding which bodies of water hereabouts are best suited for such distribution.

There was something of a flood threat Thursday in the downpour of rain that had continued for nearly 24 hours out of the southeast. Water in greater quantities than has been noted in months was pouring into rivers here from brooks and other sources of supply and threatening to raise the streams so rapidly as to cause the heavy ice to break up, with all the menace to property such a happening would entail.

Up to sunset the ice in the Quinebaug river had not budged, but it is a well known fact that the Quinebaug, with its source many miles to the north of here, continues to rise for about 24 hours after a heavy rainfall, to high water following the heavy rain of Wednesday night and Thursday is not to be looked for until some time this afternoon. In addition to the rain, the storm released great quantities of water reconverted from snow and ice. It was regarded as possible that the ice in the rivers is sufficiently heavy to resist breaking up, but that is held by others to be problematical after a thaw that has endured for nearly a week. Relief from the threat of flood might come from a sharp drop in temperature. That did not appear probable late Thursday afternoon when the wind veered into the northeast, another storm quarter.

At the Congregational church in Wauregan Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock funeral services for Fred C. Leavens were conducted by Rev. William Fryling, the pastor, relatives and many friends attending. During the service John Downs of Wauregan sang Jesus, Lover of My Soul. The body was entombed at Westfield cemetery, Danielson. The bearers were Henry Loring, Henry Leach, Edward Farrell, Arthur Goren, Addison Tracy and Arthur Mott. There were beautiful floral pieces. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Thursday morning the funeral of Mrs. Louisa Dagenault was held at her home in Wauregan, with services at Sacred Heart church, Rev. J. C. Mathieu being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were David LaRose, David Dagneault, Arthur Dagneault and Henri Bernier. Louis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

Take My Advice, a comedy drama in three acts, well staged and well presented by a competent and pleasing cast, was given at the Orpheum theatre Thursday evening under the auspices of the Service Battery. The entertainment attracted a good attendance and was successful from every viewpoint.

The coming month will be marked by the holding of the adjourned annual town meeting at which the selectmen and the town school committee will present budgets for the current fiscal year and the tax rate will be fixed on the grand list recently completed, the taxes to be payable in April.

Carloads of pipe to be used by the Crystal Water company in putting in new mains through Judd avenue and a section of Mechanic street between Westfield avenue and Mechanic street are being unloaded in the freight yard and distributed along the route where they are to be used in the spring.

Members of the editorial staff of one of the big agricultural publications were visitors at the Shepard Hill farm of W. S. Brown near Wauregan this week.

The storm of Thursday must have dampened the patriotism of many who otherwise would have displayed flags in observance of Lincoln's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bassett were in New Bedford Thursday and were luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herman M. Coulter, formerly of Danielson.

Killingly grange has a valentine social planned in connection with its meeting of next Monday evening. The program for the evening includes vocal and instrumental solos, readings and recitations. An orchestra will play.

The conviction appeared to grow Thursday that the wildcat shot by Charles E. Pike of Elliott, about three and a half miles west of Brooklyn, is the strange animal so often reported in the Allen Hill section of Brooklyn.

Miss Margaret Sullivan of Academy street was a visitor in Providence Thursday.

Frederick Miller of Dayville has a position with a dairy company at Middletown, in which city Mr. and Mrs. Miller are to make their home.

The first of those who make a practice of getting maple sugar each spring are reported as tapping trees in various towns in Windham county. Recent mild weather has hurried this year's venture for syrup.

Renewed interest in the Wolf den—because of the fact that it is proposed that it be taken over as a state park—recalls that not 10 per cent. of the people resident within ten miles of the historic spot have ever seen it. Yet the register there shows visitors from more than a score of states every summer. Only a small percentage of the residents of Danielson have ever seen the Wolf den, though it is only about eight miles from this place.

Well, this is Friday, the 13th. The combination is specially favored by those who like something to worry about.

A considerably increased volume of water is now held in reserve in the ponds and reservoirs about East Killingly, where the water has been at the lowest levels all winter in a great many years.

A number of valentine socials are planned for Saturday evening in Danielson and vicinity.

Jerome C. Williamson of Attleboro was a visitor with friends in Danielson Thursday.

MR. & MRS. MARION C. HUTCHINS CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, Feb. 12.—With their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren about them, Mr. and Mrs. Marion C. Hutchins observed the golden anniversary of their wedding at their home on Mechanic street Thursday evening. Other relatives and numbers of friends came to add their congratulations on the attainment of such a happy event.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins were married here by Rev. George Fuller Feb. 12, 1875, and with the exception of ten years spent at Wauregan have lived here during all their married life.

Mr. Hutchins will reach his 68th birthday in April, Mrs. Hutchins her 69th birthday in May. Both are natives of Danielson.

Mr. Hutchins is known by thousands of people all through the towns in this section of the county. For 23 years up to July, 1921, Mr. Hutchins was the representative in this territory of the Standard Oil company and then retired to a well deserved rest as pensioned employe of the great corporation. Mr. Hutchins gave unfailing splendid service for the company he represented, traversing all the territory hereabouts with horse-drawn tank wagons in the days before the automobile came into such general use. Prior to his service with the Standard Oil company Mr. Hutchins was employed as a second hand on the big stock farm of the Wauregan company and was in the same capacity at Goodyear for the Williamsville Manufacturing company.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins and all are living with the exception of Mrs. Bertha Young. They are Mrs. Percy Hammond and Mrs. Louis Shonles, both of Danielson, Mrs. David Bothwell of Jewett City, Chester W. Hutchins, successor here to his father as representative of the Standard Oil company; Archie Hutchins, a representative of the Standard Oil company at New London; Mrs. Harry Young of Danielson and Harold D. Hutchins of Holyoke, Mass. There are 14 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins attend the Methodist church. Mrs. Hutchins is a member of McGregor W. R. C.

They received many beautiful gifts Thursday evening and also have the best wishes of all who know them for many more happy years together.

PUTNAM

The portrait of Miss Ruth Bartlett, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Bartlett, is being featured by a Boston newspaper in its beauty contest, which that she is the prettiest girl in the Union and far outranks the fair Kansas pronounced by President Coolidge to be entitled to that distinction. Miss Bartlett and her sister, Miss Dorcas Bartlett, as members of a quartette are starting their second season on the Swathmore Chautauqua circuit. A recent issue of the Boston paper had the following about Miss Bartlett:

"Miss Bartlett is just one more example of New England beauty presented to show that President Coolidge must have been dreaming when he said Kansas had the prettiest girl in the Union. There was a temporary lull in the activities of the beauty editor when along came a photograph of Miss Bartlett.

"Editors who heretofore had treated the Beauty Editor in the most coldly distant manner, sort of supercilious and superior, became gushingly friendly.

"Copy readers were unanimous in saying that Miss Bartlett is another New England beauty product who suffers nothing in comparison with Miss Vida Watson, of Kansas, named by President Coolidge as one of the most beautiful girls he had seen."

Edward Daigle, 71, died Wednesday at the home of Dr. A. E. Parent, his son-in-law, with whom he and Mrs. Daigle lived. He had been an invalid for six years and for the past month had been critically ill.

Mr. Daigle had lived in Putnam forty-five years, and until illness compelled his retirement he had been a textile mill worker, steady, industrious and capable. He was born in St. Ours, Canada, Nov. 19, 1853. In 1879 he married Mary Louise Desjardins, and a year later they came to Putnam to live. Besides Mrs. Daigle, one child survives him, Mrs. Leona Parent. His son, John B. Daigle, died a few weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Myers have received an announcement of the marriage of their niece, Miss Jessie May Hibbard and Louis Henry Lamb of South Hadley Falls, Mass., Wednesday, February 4. Miss Hibbard was born in Woodstock and is a graduate of Woodstock Academy. She is also a graduate of the Greenfield, Mass., hospital and has been district nurse in South Hadley for several years. She was a nurse at the Day Kimball hospital here for several years.

Dennis Allard of Gilbertville, Mass., and Louis Allard of North Grosvenordale, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vandale of Walnut street and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allard of Church street. They are on a month's vacation and will visit relatives in Attleboro, Fall River and New Bedford, Mass.

At the meeting of Elizabeth Porter chapter, D. A. R., Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of schools gave a very interesting address on education, tracing the stages by which that experience of the race which is the substance of education is passed on to each succeeding generation.

He pointed out how, in the animal world, instinct alone suffices. In the primitive races practically all education is direct, parent teaching child by word and example all he needs to know, except perhaps the ceremonies incident to initiation into the tribal life. In pioneer life again the home is the place for both physical and moral training, although the mental training is given over to the school. But in the complex industrial civilization of today with its division of labor and multiplicity of interests so disintergrating to the home, the school has had more and more to take over the three phases of education, physical and moral as well as mental, all being thus accomplished—if at all—indirectly.

Of the modern tendencies of education, Mr. Jenkins called attention to its increasing universitity, its vocational trend, and its greater scientific character based upon psychological testing and research. He closed by emphasizing the need of still keeping the spirit of the old time American home life and its influence, which nothing can replace.

Omer J. Milot, of the firm of Milot and Williams, has been in Boston attending the New England Retail Clothiers' convention held in the new Chamber of Commerce building on Federal street. He is a director of the association. Mr. Milot also attended a buyers' meeting of the Eastern Commission Co.

About thirty members of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., were in Danielson attending the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R.

The regular meeting of Putnam Hi-Y club was held at the Congregational church. After the business meeting each member gave a short talk on some great American, and this proved very interesting. The topic for the next meeting will be "The Other Fellow."

John Lynch is able to resume his business duties after a severe illness which left him greatly reduced in weight.

Water is rushing over Cargill Falls in the Quinebaug river and the Harris trench is bank full. This is the first time that this has occurred for many months. No one recollects a year when the river has been so low for such a long period. Owners of textile mills and other factories who depend upon water as the chief or auxiliary power for operating their machinery have been greatly hampered and handicapped during the fall and winter.

JEWETT CITY

Supt. A. A. Young is able to report one foot gain at the Jewett City reservoir during the 24 hours ending 3 p. m. Thursday. Since Monday the gauges show that there has been one and one-half inches of precipitation. The reservoir although gaining steadily is eight feet short of full pond.

At Lisbon bridge Thursday evening the Quinebaug was five feet above normal and this (Friday) morning it will be six feet. At low places the river will be out of its banks and low meadows will be flooded.

Supt. F. H. P. Clement of the Griswold schools was in Hartford Thursday to attend a convention relative to the schools of the state. Today (Friday) is visiting day for the schools of Griswold, when the teachers may benfi by inspecting instruction methods in other places.

The first installment of live chicks has passed through the local office. There are, judging from last year, close to 8,000 baby chicks due to arrive in this section during the next eight weeks. They will be of several sorts and breeds, with White Leghorns and R. I. Reds in the lead. There are always a few who try Black Minorcas, while some never swing from Barred Rocks. Not so long ago a parent hen hatched every chick in Griswold. Following her business-like methods, which she still keeps up in the same old way, came the incubator. People went for miles to see a 10-dozen egg incubator, and with wonder and amazement peered through the little hole to see the lamp burning. Happy was the farmer's boy who was allowed to turn the eggs over, all warm in their little boxes. Today Old Mrs. Hen and Old Boy, Inc., are relegated to the discard when it comes to stocking the local coops for the summer. Baby chicks by parcel post is the answer.

The third meeting in the series of Young People's week at the Baptist church took the form of a debate Wednesday evening in the vestry. Rev. E. E. Scates presided and the leaders were seated at tables each side of the room. The subject was: Resolved, That work for youths is more important than any other work in a church. John Harris, Jr., and Ellen Prior supported the affirmative side and Allen Sweet and Rose Crumb upheld the negative. Both sides presented good arguments in convincing words. There was an opportunity given for others present to give opinions, pro and con. Mrs. A. M. Brown spoke of the importance of missionary work, D. L. Phillips on community work, J. W. Payne on work for young people, J. E. Phillips on work for men and A. M. Brown spoke in a general way on the subject. Rev. A. H. Clement offered the closing prayer. Mrs. G. H. Prior was unable to be present but sent some thoughts on the work for women.

Thursday night the Christian Endeavor society held an Abraham Lincoln social at the home of Samuel Cathcart. Miss Marian Frink was in charge of the program. Songs popular during the Civil war were used. Arthur Gray read a paper on The Life of Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln's Humor was the subject of a paper read by Emma Dearnley. Doris Carpenter's paper was on Lincoln's Temperance Sentiments. Ruby Gray recited Lincoln's Gettsburg Address. Among the games played was Pinning the Chimney on a Log Cabin and the making of silhouettes. Sandwiches, cake and cocoa were served.

Thursday afternoon, following the clearing, after five days of channel fog and rain, the mrecury fell 15 degrees in two hours.

A clipping from The Bulletin of Feb. 12, 1899, reads: The Slater mills in Jewett City is to discontinue at once the manufacture of cotton cloth. The entire plant is to be remodeled and refitted for the manufacture of yarn. The Slater store, the largest in this section, will either close or be put upon a strictly cash basis.

Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. D., held its meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. H. Jennings, the regent, Mrs. Henry Olson presiding. It was voted to contribute toward several worthy objects, including the Philippine scholarship endowment fund, the manual of the United States for the information of immigrants and foreigners, and the Ocean to Ocean Old Trail road. Mrs. E. A. Faust was appointed delegate to the state meeting to be held in New Haven in March. As it was Ancestors' day, each member gave a history of her Revolutionary ancestors. It was a delightfully social afternoon. The dining room was gaily decorated with red valentines, and the favors were valentines. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Jennings and Mrs. Faust.

Twenty-five years ago today the Heavyweight Piscatorial association went down to Billings' pond to fish through the ice. The late P. B. Driscoll was there and made the chowder. The late George A. Haskell was high line; he caught a pickerel that weighed a few ounces over two pounds. The late R. M. Brown and Thomas E. Lee tried to find the party and got lost, finally getting their bearings at some jumping-off place down near Pendleton Hill. Lafe Kinney was in the party, and a record of the trip reads that riding in the bus with Lafe was a sort of hurdle jumping contest, because he wouldn't keep one of his pins under the seat. One aboriginal dweller, with an evident affinity for hard cider, visited the party. A small eminence was dimly visible off in the blue to the south. The visitor volunteered the information that it was Swantown mountain, and that from it one could see Lantern Hill and the rest of the created world.

During the late afternoon a young man, about 20, visited the fishermen on a pair of rude skates. He said that he never had seen but one train of cars, and that was in Jewett City seven years before! He had an old pair of turned-up skates, tied to his boots with strings. Just at dusk he started off up the pond toward a light he said his mother had put in the window when he was to come home. He said on leaving he would show the party how to skate. They agreed before he was out of sight, that he knew all about it.

Quadruplets were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cephas Bradford at their mountain home near Middlesboro near Knoxville, Ky. There are now twelve children in the family.

EXTENDING STATE PARKS.

What must be regarded as commendable action is that which places the Putnam wolf den property under the control of the state, as a part of the state park land, to be protected and cared for by the state park and forest commission.

This den, located in an isolated, wooded section in the town of Pomfret, has long been the object of visitation by thousands. It is off the main highway which fact probably prevents many more from knowing its location and getting a look at the point where Putnam rendered such a service to the countryside in despatching the devastating wolf.

Recognising the importance of preserving this historical spot, it is a most valuable service that has been rendered by the D. A. R. chapter at Putnam in getting possession of this property and maintaining it, with the den fittingly marked with a bronze plate explaining the circumstances under which the den was brought into prominence, and highly praiseworthy is the act of the chapter in turning the property over to the state for the purchase price a quarter of a century ago. It is a place that not only deserves to be maintained and kept open for public inspection but one of those localities which properly fits in at the same time with the object of the state park commission.

For the same reason there is merit in the proposal which has been submitted to the legislature at the present session for the establishment of a state park at Mohegan where there is so many points of particular historical value connected with the colonial days in this part of the state.

Furthermore in connection with the state park system there should not be overlooked the desirability of including therein that delightful and unusual peak known as Lantern hill, in North Stonington with its well wooden slopes and the attractive ponds nearby.

The desirability of insuring the preservation of the wolf den under the state's plan is sound. With a little consideration the same view ought to be taken regarding these other points of historical interest

GERMAN TRADE TREATY.

One of the measures which the present senate was asked to put through, and the one in fact which headed the list, was the trade treaty between this country and Germany. It has been negotiated with the object of restoring trade relations and agreements in keeping with such understandings between nations and in line with that which existed before the war. It was regarded as a meritorious treaty and one which seemed likely to become the basis of similar pacts with other nations.

The senate has heeded the plea for action, but in doing so it has attached a reservation to it so that after a year it would give authority to congress to establish discriminatory tariffs in the interest of American shipping, and of course it would permit Germany to do the same thing.

This is a feature of the merchant marine act which has been regarded with so much disapproval by three presidents that it has never been put into effect. It is not only considered unjust but it is recognized as the means of creating an endless amount of trouble and the upsetting of the present treaties with other countries.

If of course any such stand is going to be taken and the provisions put into effect it is going to require the remaking of all commercial treaties, even though the existing ones are regarded as satisfactory. It will likewise mean the opening up of an international tariff war, the beginning of which has no uncertainties but the end of which or the results of which it would be most unwise to predict. That it would be the instigator of trouble is good and sufficient reason enough for fighting shy of it, especially when the chances are that it would be as likely to react to our detriment as to our benefit.

The fact that three presidents have been unwilling to put such a provision in the merchant marine act into effect discloses the undesirability of it, and the insistence by the senate of doing it by shifting the authority from the president to congress doesn't make a favorable impression. The senate's action doesn't increase the chances of presidential approval.

PROVIDING PROTECTION.

"All too frequently there have been reports of messengers disappearing with funds which they were carrying from one banking house to another, or from one broker's office to another. There have also been those instances where they have been waylaid for the funds they have been known to carry. Sometimes this has been a real holdup and at others there has been collusion. The losses which have been sustained under such circumstances have long caused people to wonder why more care was not taken in the selection of individuals for this simple but responsible work, or in surrounding them with greater protection. And yet it is known that desperate gunmen have shown no fear of armed guards which were assigned to accompany and protect those carrying valuable securities.

From the announcement that bonded crews are to be provided for the transfer of securities from one point to another, and that they are to be locked into bullet-proof vests, it would appear that recognition had been given to the importance of closing up the loopholes which have existed in this particular direction. Care is observed to give full protection to stocks and bonds while in banks, offices and other points where they are retained, but when it comes to carrying them from one place of safety to another there has been a laxness which has long called for relief. The idea of placing irresponsible persons in possession of paper of much value, a fact which they are not long in becoming acquainted with, does not display the best of judgment. Perhaps the greatest wonder is that more losses during such transfers have not been sustained. The importance of reducing the temptation to the minimum should require no urging, and for that reason it must be regarded as the proper step in the right direction when endeavors are made to remove a situation which has long been open to criticism and abuse. Henceforth the transfer of funds and securities bids fair to get the serious attention that it deserves.

FORD'S FREIGHTERS.

Henry Ford has repeatedly launched out into new fields. His undertakings have always aroused much interest and as he continues to develop his business and branch out his undertakings are bound to command attention.

His latest scheme is to establish a line of ocean steamers for the purpose of carrying the products of his factories to Europe. His purpose is to provide adequate means of shipment so that it will not be dependent upon others. Already he operates large lake steamers for the carrying of raw material, so that the new venture will in a way be but the extension of steamship activities with the Atlantic added to the lakes.

There are numerous instances where corporations operate their own steamship lines for the purpose of getting the service they desire, so that Mr. Ford's venture is not exactly into unknown fields. Apparently he is convinced that his business in Europe will keep such a line busy, and with the success of the first effort established there is no telling to what extent the development will go.

Mr. Ford takes pride in the organization of his business so that he handles the material that goes into his automobiles from the raw material stage to the time it is ready to step on the gas. His transportation lines include a railroad system as well as steamships, and one of the underlying features in connection with them, aside from the management, is the fact that the volume of business which he controls in one form or another insures success from the start.

FIGHTING BACTERIA.

Science has encountered no difficulty in getting a disinfectant that would kill disease germs, but it has had its troubles in getting a germicide that could be used to exterminate the bacteria without picking off human beings along with them, especially when the germs are in the human system.

For that reason there must be much importance attached to the discovery which has been made of a germicide which it is claimed is 50 times as powerful as carbolic acid, and which can be used internally without causing death.

Hexyiresorcinol may or may not be an impressive name, but if it is what is claimed for it and will accomplish what is predicted, a most important discovery has been made.

That years of effort to this very end have been made is in keeping with the common fight against bacteria. It is easy for the layman to understand what it means to find a substance that will strike terror to the bacteria within the human system without injuring that system, and for that reason it is to be sincerely hoped that the substance with an unusual name will actually accomplish all that is claimed for it, unusual as it may be.

It is by continually keeping up the fight against disease that progress is made. Just such discoveries mark highly important advancements. If the dream of medical science has really been worked out it means just that much added relief and protection for suffering humanity. Fighting bacteria is not always the easiest kind of a fight.

IN AND OUT

"All fat brothers-in-law should be abolished," the Hyde Park man informed his friend from Woodlawn as he took the seat next the window when the other was not looking.

"I've got a real thin one I could spare," volunteered the Woodlawn man.

"Fat ones are worse," the Hyde Park man insisted. "Imogene's brother, Albert and I disapprove of one another very thoroughly and no doubt if we were not related we should hiss and growl and sniff whenever we passed one another on the street.

"Be that as it is Albert and his wife were down to tea Sunday night and we discussed politics just as though we had respect for each other's opinions. I gave Albert two of my best cigars and he reciprocated with a box of special cigarettes and all was merry until it came time for our guests to depart.

"I had hung their wraps in Imogene's large hall closet, which is really a small room with a window in it. It is there we hang fur coats and family silver. The room which has a special lock. Albert said no indeed, not to trouble, that he knew right where the things were and would get them himself. So he rushed on ahead of me into the closet and the door slammed shut after him because of a draft.

"'I am sure we shall miss our train now!' worried Albert's wife when he rattled the door and shouted that the catch was on and he could't get out.

"'Be calm, Albert,' I instructed him, taking command of the situation at once. 'It is a peculiar lock but perfectly simple. If I had the key out here it would be simpler, but Imogene says she keeps it on the top shelf, inside where you are. You can't reach it. That key was made to operate from this side—which no doubt is the logical reason why she thinks the inside of the closet is the best place for it. Just turn the handle to the left!'

"'I've done that!' Albert shouted indignantly. 'Not only to the left, but to the right! And otherwise! Why the mischief do you folks have a lock that doesn't work from the inside of the closet? I've an important appointment tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock!'

"'Hey, I have it!' I told him. 'There's the window! Raise the window and I'll go out and set the ladder up against the wall!' So I did!

"When Albert had pushed one-third from the window he stuck! I climbed the ladder and shoved him back.

"The higher air seemed to lend my mind extra brilliancy so I suggested that while I was handy he should try by hopping jumps, if you know what I mean, to grab the shelf where Imogene said she had put the key. Did you ever watch a fat man try a vertical jump? It is very interesting. Albert caught the shelf finally. It tipped and spilled down eleven boxes all packed with forks, knives, dessert spoons, extra glassware and such and he said goldarn it he couldn't find any key among all that mess! He knew what he was going to do! Take off the door hinges! This he did. He broke his fancy pocket knife and turned purple but he couldn't budge that door. In a frenzy he grabbed the knob again and rattled it.

"'Albert,' I said kindly, 'is that what you did before? You want to take hold of that itty bitty knob just above, too, and turn at the same time, dearie!'

"If Albert had not been so exhausted I think there would have been murder done. Grabbing both knobs he turned—and the door not only opened but fell in ker-spang and flattened him out on top of the knives and forks and things. Yes, Albert's wife was right—they did miss their train!"

"You lucky dog!" said the Woodlawn man. "He'll never come to see you again in thirteen months of Sundays after all that!"—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Professor Solon L. Bailey, who has just retired after 37 years at the Harvard Observatory, is an astronomer of international reputation. Professor Bailey is a native of New Hampshire and received his education at Boston University and at Harvard. He began his career at Harvard in 1893 as assistant professor of astronomy, and five years later was made associate professor. Since 1912, he has been Phillips professor of astronomy. It was Professor Bailey who first went to Peru in 1889 on behalf of the Harvard Observatory to establish a South American station for the observation of the southern sky. The Harvard astronomers were then, as now, engaged in what might be called a comprehensive survey of the millions of stars in the sky, with special reference to the magnitudes and spectra of the individual stars. The station was established at Arequipa and for long periods in recent years has been under the personal direction of Professor Bailey.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Complete Public Work Before Increasing Salaries.

Mr. Editor: Is it necessary to raise the city officials' pay while the roads are in bad shape and in need of repairs? The money that is to be given to the city officials for an increase in pay is needed elsewhere.

Well, the city only allowed the sewer on Pratt street $4,000, but that amount was not enough to complete it. I do not think it was right to start at the top of Pratt street, now uncompleted, and leave it in such a condition that it endangers the motorist driving on that street.

I should think that the city officials would have sense enough to finish the Pratt street road and leave the city officials' pay increase go until the sewer is completed.

I think that if anyone comes along Pratt street and something happens to their machines, they will have a chance to sue the city for damages or have to pay for the repairs.

I have heard that the Pratt street sewer fund is exhausted and the work will have to wait until the next meeting in June.

It is not necessary to leave it in such a condition until June. "Finish today what you started on and do a new thing tomorrow."

The reason why they had the traffic ordinance go into effect is to collect the fines from those who do not obey it and spend it on the officials.

I am an auto driver and reside on Pratt street. T. F. G.

Facts Wanted About Moses Cleveland Homestead.

Mr. Editor: We are very much interested in clearing up a number of facts, or, we may say, legends, concerning the distinguished soldier statesman, patriot, General Moses Cleveland, late of Canterbury, Conn.

We would like to secure a picture or print or description of the old Moses Cleveland homestead in Canterbury; both the original as well as the later additions.

We have searched through a number of old Windham county histories, as well as other publications on early Connecticut, and are unable to learn if an early governor of Connecticut, Chauncy Cleveland, was related to General Moses Cleveland, also whether General Moses Cleveland left any children other than a daughter who married the then Canterbury village doctor, Andrew Harris.

Who was the wife of General Moses Cleveland? What was her name?

We have learned about his attendance at Yale, about his being commissioned by Connecticut to establish the Western Reserve in Ohio, and considerable other interesting data, but are unable to learn, definitely, the facts concerning the old Moses Cleveland homestead, now in ruins, in the village of Canterbury. Who has a picture of the old home? Or who can accurately describe its original dimensions and its dates?

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES G. HAMMOND,
Sec'y New London Chamber of Commerce.

Puccini's Opera Failed to Win a Prize

Descendant of a long line of musicians, several of whom had won fame, Giacomo Puccini was tardy in his musical development and was nearly 40 before he gained any real reputation.

In Lucca, Italy, where he was born, the Puccinis were esteemed as musicians. Giacomo's father and mother were distinguished in musical circles, and his great grandfather, who was maestra di capella to the republic of Lucca, instructed the lad, who showed only a slight interest in music.

While attending the Conservatoire at Milan, Giacomo wrote the music for "LeVilli" at 16, and submitted this, his first opera, in a contest, but failed to win a prize. After hearing the prize winners, he took his score to Boito, composer of "Mefistele," who was so impressed with it that he started a subscription list to have the work produced. The amount raised fell short of what was desired and to save expenses friends of Puccini played in the orchestra.

On the day of the first presentation Puccini had only a few pennies and owned a restaurant proprietor 300 lire for six months' board. His landlord forbade cooking in his room, so Pucinni played fortissimo on the piano while his brother and cousin fixed an omelette.

So well was the opera received that the next day a publisher gave him 2,000 francs advance royalty and contracted for his next work. Then followed hardships in the five years during which he was composing "Edgar."

"Edgar" brought little success, and he was 35 when "Manon Lescaut" was presented. It won high praise, and gradually Puccini's name became known all over the world. "La Boheme," produced when he was 36, was indifferently received at first, but soon added to his reputation. "Madame Butterfly," was unsuccessful at its premier. Puccini revised it and presented it in London, where it was enthusiastically received.

Then came "The Girl of the Golden West," first presented at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and other works that became popular.

Puccini became interested in Italy's leading publishing house, and at 66, is a millionaire. He has been made a senator.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Payments of $1,000 or More

Under the "information at source" provision of the revenue act of 1924, all persons "in whatever capacity acting" are required to report to the Commissioner of internal revenue payment to others during the taxable year of $1,000 or more. Information returns are carefully checked with the individual return of the taxpayer to whom such payments are made. Thousands of delinquents, and additional taxes aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars have been discovered as the result of this audit.

The act requires report of payment of "interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income."

A separate return of information for each employee whose salary or wage for 1924 was $1,000 or more is required of employes. Payment for overtime, fees, commissions, bonuses and the fair value of food and lodging furnished as part payment for services should be included. Heads of branch offices and subcontractors employing labor, who have the only complete records of payments therefor should file the returns directly with the commissioner. When both main and branch offices have adequate records, the returns should be filed by the main office.

The requirement is not limited to periodical payments, but a single payment of $1,000 or more must be reported. Real estate agents are required to report payments to landlords. Fraternal organizations and associations are required to report payments to officers. Banks are required to report interest paid or credits to a depositor, if the total during the year equalled or exceeded $1,000.

Forms for filing information returns may be obtained at offices of collectors of internal revenue. The collectors receive these returns, which should be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Sorting Section, at Washington, D. C.

Stories That Recall Others

The Dogs Could Tell.

Noting the dog making a big fuss about the brush pile, Mrs. X. decided to investigate. Towser would rush the pile and bark, and the others would join in. As she approached the brush pile, thinking a cat might be hiding there, Mrs. X. considered it wise to take no chances, so got a club. A close examination revealed no cat but a large snake. There being no men about, and feeling the snake should be killed, Mrs. X. got a big stick and routed the snake, which stepped on the gas in an effort to get away. A well directed blow, however, soon ended his existence, much to the relief of Mrs. X. and the satisfaction of the dogs.

Phonograph records are being used by a German bird fancier to teach his young canaries how to sing like nightingales, says Popular Mechanics. Almost the minute the birds are hatched, their "lessons" begin, the records, repeatedly playing the nightingale's song, being kept going all day and sometimes far into the night. When the canaries are from six to eight weeks old, they are placed near the cages of real nightingales and are not permitted to hear the singing of any other birds. When they begin to sing, they naturally follow the notes they have always heard and bring a price about five times as high as that of the ordinary canary.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA AT HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM

Willimantic, Feb. 12.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra group made its first appearance in Willimantic, on Thursday evening, in the High school auditorium, under the auspices of the Community Entertainment association, before a splendid audience. The musicians were under the direction of Paul Shirley and are: Ferland Phillips, concert master; Ignazio Mariotti, violinist; Louis Arcieres, violinist; George Fourel, viola; Carl Stockbridge, cello; Louis Savard, bass; Gaston Bladet, flute; Emil Arcieri, clarinet; Kurt Schmeisser, trumpet; Arthur Fiedler, piano. Mr. Shirley in his introduction said he wished the audience to understand the feeling of the message the artists were to bring them through, the music. America, he said, is not a great musical nation, but there is no reason why it should not become a great musical nation. America is leading the world in so many ways because the American standards are the highest. In order to become a great musical nation the people must suffer one of the hardest things of life—a change of mind. Music is not a plaything, but the greatest of the arts. It is like religion which one needs every day to become a better man. Beethoven an old man stone deaf, wrote his immortal symphony, and Mozart one of the greatest of musical geniuses were not afraid to give their lives to music. Many artists today are trying hard to make America a musical nation. Jazz and street songs and the riff-raff are cheap things and are not going to last as soon as any normal person gets to understand that music is a language all its own, speaking what cannot be said otherwise.

The programme:

Coronation, from The Prophet . . . Meyerbeer

First suite from the opera Carmen, . . . Bizet

a. Prelude
b. Aragonaise
c. Intermezzo
d. Les Toradores

Allegro Congracia, from Symphony Pathetique . . . Pschaikowsky

Valse des Fleurs, from the Nutcracker. . . . Pschaikowsky

Reve Angelique, from Komenoi Ostrow. . . . Rubinstein

Cello Solo.

Devotion, . . . Popper

Caprice Hongroise, . . . Dunkler

Carl Stockbridge

Triumphal March from Sigurd Jorsalar . . . Greig

Ballet music To Rosamunde, . . . Schubert

Valse Triste, Sibelius; introduction to the third act from Lohengrin. . . . Wagner

Brunhild's Love Song, from Walkure . . . Wagner

Ride of the Valkyrs, from Thanhauser, . . . Wagner

In response to the encore demanded for the first number of Pschaikowski, Mr. Shirley said he preferred to tell something of the background of the music to playing another number. He said the Symphony Pathetique Pschaikowski wrote in 1893 and he thought it was the greatest piece of work he had ever written. It is supposed to contain some hidden thing musically that Pschaikowsky spoke of but never told. But the music is so deep, deep enough to hold everyone's sorrows and joys but no one has ever guessed how deep it is. A few days after its first performance Pschaikowsky contracted the plague and died.

The only two encores given were Dvorak's Humoresque and a selection from the Flying Dutchman.

OBITUARY

Mrs. James H. Perkins

Relatives in Norwich received notice Thursday of the death of Phoebe Estelle Sweet, widow of James H. Perkins, which occurred in Westbrook, Conn., Thursday, following an illness of several years duration, brought on by a shock. Mrs. Perkins formerly resided in Norwich, where she was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends.

She was the daughter of Dr. Stephen B. and Phoebe Heath Sweet and was born in Franklin, April 28, 1859. She remained in that town until her marriage in 1878 to James H. Perkins, late of Norwich. They were long residents of Pine street and following Mr. Perkins' death she continued to reside there until she suffered a shock. Since that time she made her home with her son, Clarence S. Perkins, also of Pine street and with her daughter, Mrs. Louis M. Stevens of Westbrook. While in Norwich Mrs. Perkins was a member of the old Second Congregational church.

News of her death will be received with sorrow by her many friends in this city and those left to mourn the loss of a loved one have their sympathy. She was a woman of fine traits of character, a kind neighbor and loyal friend. She inherited that bone-setting ability so characteristic in the Sweet family and gave timely aid to many of her acquaintances.

Mrs. Perkins is survived by a son, Clarence S. Perkins of Norwich, a daughter, Mrs. Louis M. Stevens of Westbrook and two grandchildren, Mary L. Stevens of Westbrook and James E. Perkins of Norwich.

He was married in Lawrence, Mass., in 1886 just previous to his coming to Norwich.

In politics Mr. McBurney was a republican and he was recognized as a party power in the Falls section, where he knew every republican voter in his district and took pleasure in getting out a large vote at every election. NORWICH STATE HOSPITAL NEEDS SHOWN TO LEGISLATURE COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

Hartford, Feb. 2.—The appropriations committee of the legislature held a hearing this afternoon on the estimates for the Norwich state hospital. The several requests that have been made were explained by Dr. F. S. Wilcox, the superintendent, and H. H. Gallup, president of the trustees of the institution. Appropriations for maintenance amounting to $1,400,000 have been requested and have been recommended by the state board of finance. This is $300,000 more than two years ago. Dr. Wilcox said that the per capita cost two years ago was estimated at $5.60 for 1900 patients. This estimate is $6.50 per capita 2200 patients. This cost would not be possible if they had not been able to furnish a large amount of farm produce raised on the farm, potatoes being one of the items produced at a cost of 40 cents per bushel. He said that salaries used up 45 per cent. of the total appropriation and food 24 per cent.

The following are the appropriations asked by the hospital trustees for 1925-1927, all of which have been approved by the board of finance:

Salaries, wages and labor	$620,000.00
Food	336,000.00

The board of finance recommended immediate action on the starred items. The necessity for the several amounts requested was shown by Supt. Wilcox, President Gallup and Senator Lee Roy Robbins.

Some of the committees were of the opinion that the road from the hospital to the inebriate farm for which the sum of $50,000 is requested should be included in the regular highway system. It was said Commissioner Macdonald had been over the ground and was of the opinion that if the road was built, the state would in the near future, finish the link between the inebriate farm to the Westerly highway. The committee were interested in who would maintain the road after it was built. A similar condition exists at Middletown when a road was built by the Middletown trustees and largely used as this one will be by the general public is maintained by the town. None of the other requests were questioned. In explaining the request for a new bake oven Superintendent Wilcox stated that they were purchasing 1,500 loaves of bread a day as they are not able to bake them with the present outfit.

The committee by their questioning evidenced a deep interest in the institution and will in the near future visit the institution for inspection.

Senator Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell admittedly got a jolt at the hearing when, in response to his question, Superintendent Wilcox informed him that fully 70 per cent. of the inmates of his institution are Connecticut citizens.

"That is hardly a credit to the state," observed the senator. "I had always believed that the majority of the inmates of our insane hospitals were foreigners." The superintendent said that many of them were foreign-born and of foreign extraction.

HAS MANY COMMITTEE REPORTS TO CONSIDER

The board of directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce will consider at a meeting at New Haven this (Friday) afternoon the reports of a number of its various committees concerning bills that have been introduced into the present general assembly. Many of the chamber's committees have just completed surveys of different kinds of proposed legislation and the directors will act on these reports.

Perhaps the most important committee report to be considered will be that of the chamber's recently-appointed legislative committee. One phase of the committee's work has been to survey the probable constitutionality and enforcibility of various bills in which members of the chamber are interested. This committee has been studying bills relative to commitments to the Connecticut State Farm for Women (House Bill 41) relative to bill board advertising (House Bill 30) relative to motor truck legislation (House Bill 852) and relative to itinerant vendors (Senate Bill 389 and 420). The legislative committee will make definite recommendations to the directors as to the advisibility of favoring or opposing these various bills, outlining at length its reason therefor.

Another matter that the directors will consider will be the advisability of abolishing county commissioners in Connecticut, as proposed under a bill before the legislature. One argument in favor of such abolition is that the work of the county commissioners can be done by existing machinery without great additional cost, and that the abolition of the county commissioners would make for lower taxes.

The directors will also consider several recommendations of its transportation committee—one of which concerns the restoration of the Connecticut company to the New Haven road, its original owner; another concerning the wisdom of increasing the state tax on gasoline and also on certain types of motor trucks.

The matter of establishing a system of small claims courts in Connecticut will be discussed. Legislation looking toward the establishment of such a system is embodied in Senate Bill 197, House Bill 229 and House Bill 840.

Whether or not municipalities and the state should be included in the pollution of streams bill drawn by Attorney George E. Beers of New Haven and sponsored by the Chamber (House Bill 874) will be discussed. The directors will consider the advisability of submitting a referendum to the 1,200 members of the chamber on these two vital points.

The directors will be informed of the result to date of the chamber's referendum on the proposed child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States. Thus far the sentiment of the members has expressed itself in the ratio of about 32 to 1 as opposed to Connecticut's ratifying this amendment.

Consideration will be given to the wisdom of revising Chapter 195 of the Public Accounts of 1919 so as to further restrict the night employment of children under 16 years of age in Connecticut.

Because of the substantial sentiment in Connecticut favoring the restriction of billboard advertising, the directors will discuss the five bills introduced into the house on this subject from the standpoint of probable constitutionality and enforcibility. They will consider the procedure followed by Massachusetts at the last session of its legislature whereby its state constitution was amended so as to restrict billboard advertising.

The results of the studies of the chamber's committee on standardization of municipal accounting will be given to the directors and legislation relating to this subject as applied to Connecticut will be discussed.

Eight recommendations of the chamber's committee on forestry will be discussed. These recommendations call for the endorsement of certain bills that have been introduced into the present legislature and which call for a continuation and an expansion of reforestation work throughout Connecticut.

A report will be read by the chamber's trade and commerce committee relative to proposed legislation to regulate the activities of itinerant vendors in Connecticut. This legislation comprises two senate bills and two house bills. This committee will also report to the directors the action recently taken in regard to endorsing the efforts of the Connecticut Association of Real Estate Boards to obtain from the present legislature a law requiring a license for real estate brokers (Senate Bill 426).

A detailed account will be given of the results thus far obtained by the chamber's committee which is surveying the purposes, functions and needs of Storrs College, and which has up to the present time held four meetings, one of which was at the college and another of which was a joint meeting with the trustees of the college.

Other matters the directors will consider will be Referendum No. 44 of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in regard to recommendations for the improvement of the postal service, the survey recently completed by the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut with regard to inheritance taxes in Connecticut, the report of the chamber's committee on agriculture regarding the wisdom of increasing the appropriations for marketing bureaus and facilities in Connecticut, the report of the chamber's committee on the financial responsibility of automobile owners, and the advisability of appointing three delegates to attend the meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce at Brussels, Belgium, next June.

Action will also be taken on the advisability of a bill now before congress to regulate rentals in the District of Columbia, the advisability of the passage of the Wadsworth-Garrett amendment to the constitution of the United States, the proposed suspension of the increased allotment of funds in the Department of Commerce of the United States, and a communication from the Boston Chamber of Commerce in regard to supporting two bills before Congress relating to the air mail service.

AGGIES ROMP THROUGH ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE FIVE IN ONE-SIDED GAME

(Special to the Bulletin)

Storrs, Feb. 12.—Working with clocklike regularity, the Connecticut Aggies ran up 43 points on St. Michael's basketball team here tonight, at the same time keeping the visitors' score down to 21. The Storrs team showed great form and after the first few minutes of play there was no doubt as to the final outcome of the game. It was merely a question as to how high Balock and company would run up the score. Starting with the first whistle, Capt. Balock, Makofski and Schofield set off the fireworks for the Aggies and throughout the game their sharp shooting ability and all around play kept the Aggie team well in front. Makofski was a team in himself tonight, gathering seven baskets from the floor and three from the foul line. In all he made 17 points for the Nutmeg five.

Capt. Balock was in top form tonight also and although playing little more than the first half he made five field goals from the floor. His accurate passing and clever floor work fooled the St. Michael's defense time and again.

Dole's men drew away from the Vermonters early in the game and at the end of a speedy attack in the first half were leading, 23 to 12. Connecticut's offense gained momentum in the second half with Makofski bearing the brunt of the attack. In this session he cut through the St. Michael's defense for five baskets, and his clever passwork aided in the shooting of several more. Once the Aggies were well out in front, Dole sent in his reserves and before the game was over every man of the Aggies squad had been in the battle. Dole used 12 men in all. St. Michael's, although outplayed in all departments of the game, were not outfought. They staged a hard battle in the entire distance and the score failed to indicate the fight which they put up. In Boiselle the visitors presented a clever forward who was almost the entire St. Michael's offense, making six baskets from the floor and three from the foul line. Jerry Allard of Putnam and Paul Bitgood of Danielson, both saw action in the back court where they put up their usual strong game. The score:

BULKELEY TO TACKLE STONINGTON THIS AFTERNOON

New London, Feb. 12.—Bulkeley will face her second rival in three days, meeting Stonington High, a member of the Eastern Connecticut interscholastic league, in a basketball contest on this (Friday) afternoon at Avion hall, Stonington. On Saturday evening the team will wind up the week's activities, engaging Bacon Academy at the town hall in Colchester.

In registering a victory over Deep River High last night, the Bulkeley five accomplished what several stronger quintets have failed to do—and that was a victory. With the Orange and Black changing her tactics and assuming an aggressive attitude throughout the entire game, the victory came after fine team effort. It was only the second defeat handed Deep River this season, the Valley boys being defeated by Commercial High of New Haven on Friday by almost the same margin in which Bulkeley was returned the victor.

Contrary to expectations, the squad under the direction of Coach William R. Canty, held practice this afternoon at the state armory, completing the preparations which have been made in anticipation of the two games over the week end. Nothing new was shown the players by the Orange and Black mentor, although the same baffling defense which seemed impregnable to the Deep River five last night was given a mere thorough workout, with the explanation of the position which the players are to take when the ball falls into the hands of the enemy. The offense on Wednesday functioned well and this particular phase of the game had not to be emphasized upon during the workout.

TILDEN WINS FIRST AND SECOND ROUND MATCHES

New York, Feb. 12.—Playing under wraps and, in his own words, putting himself into condition for a year on the tennis courts, William T. Tilden, 2nd, national singles champion, today won his first and second round matches in the Brooklyn Heights casino annual tournament with ease.

Tilden defeated J. S. McCloy of Brooklyn in the second round, 6-2, 7-5, after his opponent had surprised the spectators by conquering Kenzo Shimizu, member of the Japanese Davis cup team, 6-3, 6-1. Watson M. Washburn also was victorious in both rounds, defeating R. T. Herndon of Brooklyn, 7-5, 6-0, and Louis D. Dailey, Jr., of Brooklyn, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Horace S. Orser of George Washington High school, New York, national junior indoor champion, was eliminated with difficulty in the first round by the veteran Dean Mathey, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, and Francis T. Hunter had trouble with Fred Anderson, but won, 2-6, 10-8, 6-1.

Other first round results follow:

S. Howard Voshell defeated Percy Kynaston, 6-3, 6-3; Charles S. Garland defaulted to H. C. Brunie; L. E. Dailey, Jr., defeated Neil Sullivan, 6-3, 12-10.

NATIONAL GREEN SECTION TOURNAMENT FOR WOMEN

New York, Feb. 12.—Women members of every golf club in the United States and Canada are [illegible] a special national Green section tournament, under the auspices of the United States Golf association, to be held some time in June, it was announced today. It is probable that an entire week will be set aside for the competition, the same rules to govern as in a similar event for the men. The proceeds will go into the Green Section Endowment fund.

The competition will consist of an 18-hole match play round against the women's par of the course, the next handicap being based on seven-eighths of the regular stated handicap, the best score against par being declared the women's national winner. A woman player may compete in this tournament on another course, but she must use her home club handicap against the women's par of the course played upon, and the score returned must be entered up on the records of the course she visits.

A handsome silver cup will be awarded the player winning this national tournament, shortly after receipt of final returns. In case of a tie, additional cups will be awarded.

BIG MUNN GETS $5,000 AS HIS SHARE OF GATE

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 12.—About $5,000, proceeds of his first match as titleholder with Stanislaus Zybszko last night, will be very welcome to Wayne (Big) Munn, champion heavyweight wrestler, his manager, Gabriel Kaufman, said today.

Munn, he said, had been able to realize little from his skill as a wrestler until he recently defeated Ed. (Strangler) Lewis for the title. He had, his manager explained, eked out "a hand to mouth" existence for nine months in Kansas City, awaiting an opportunity and hoping that wrestling would sometime pay him in proportion to the merit he believed he possessed.

Munn, Kaufman said, would receive about 25 per cent. of the $20,000 gate receipts of last night's match. He and six other wrestlers, who appeared in preliminary matches, will obtain 60 per cent., the manager stated. Munn obtained but a small part of the "gate" in the Lewis match.

Offers had begun to come in for other matches today and the former Nebraska football player has announced that he will meet all challengers as "fast as I can get to them."

He is scheduled to meet Mike Romano Feb. 18 in Chicago and to wrestle the winner of a tournament which will begin in Cleveland at about that time, his manager said.

AGGIE FRESHMEN PLAY YALE YEARLINGS TONIGHT

(Special to the Bulletin)

Storrs, Feb. 12.—The Connecticut Aggie freshmen tackle strong opposition tomorrow night, when they go to New Haven to play the Yale yearlings. It is a game that shapes up as a hard battle for the Aggies, and the team will have to be in top form if they are to continue with the clean slate that they have held to date.

Captain Hadley and Eddy will occupy the forward berths; Williams, former Killingly High star, will jump center; Heller of Willimantic, with Donahue, will play the guard berths. This is the combination that has kept the Aggie slate clean through six straight games, and they can be counted upon to give the Yale cubs a battle all the way.

In Captain Hadley, former Wilby High (Waterbury) athlete, the Aggies have one of the best court prospects seen at Storrs in some time. Hadley's work has been of high order throughout the season, and he has been a big factor in the success of the Connecticut team to date. It is expected that he will give the Yale guards plenty to worry about tomorrow.

MILSTEAD, MARRIED, MAY BE FORCED TO QUIT COLLEGE

New Haven, Feb. 12.—Whether or not Century Milstead, a junior at Yale and football star on the 1923 team, will be permitted to continue in his studies as a married man, will be decided by the faculty committee on college rules, it was announced tonight by Dean F. S. Jones. Pending the decision of the committee Milstead is not attending his classes, the dean said.

No action was taken at the general faculty meeting this afternoon except to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the committee. Milstead appeared before the committee for a few minutes before the faculty meeting.

Milstead admits that he is married but will not divulge the date or place of the ceremony. He is now living with his wife in an apartment here, he attending college while she is employed in the offices of the university. At present he is in his junior year and hopes to complete his course, providing the action of the faculty committee is favorable.

BASE TEAM TO PLAY AT NEW YORK SATURDAY

New London, Feb. 12.—The Submarine Base basketball squad, ten strong, leaves on the U. S. S. Chewink for Brooklyn, N. Y., on Friday morning where the base team will meet the strong Central Y. M. C. A. five at Brooklyn on Saturday night. The trip by the U. S. S. Chewink will be in the nature of a furlough for the gobs as they will not reach this city until late Monday night.

Practice was held regularly during the past week with the site of the workouts shifting from the Base gym to the State armory. These practice sessions have in every way been satisfactory to the Base mentor.

On Friday, Feb. 27, the series with the Coast Guard Cadets will be resumed for the city championship. Already the Cadets lead with one victory in the first game played, this game will decide whether the series will be prolonged, for a victory for the tars will require another game to be played in the championship is decided.

W. M. I. GIRLS LOSE TO STONINGTON HIGH MAIDS

Stonington, Feb. 12.—The string of victories which has been hung up by the Williams Memorial Institute girls team which reached four straight was shattered by Stonington High girls team at Avion Hall. The final score was 34 to 28 for the local High school lassies, the visitors being unable to cope with the playing of the local girls' team. The defeat was unexpected, for two weeks ago at New London, the W. M. I. team easily defeated Stonington by at least 17 points to spare.

The game with Plainfield High, which was to take place on the (Friday) afternoon at Plainfield has been cancelled until some later date.

SQUAD OF YANKEE STARS ARE OFF FOR HOT SPRINGS

New York, Feb. 12.—The New York American League club announced today that Pitchers Samuel Jones and Urban Shocker, Catchers Walter Schang and Steve O'Neill, and Shortstop Everett Scott had left their homes for Hot Springs, Ark., where they will join Babe Ruth in preliminary training.

Signed contracts were received from Pitcher Jones, Third Baseman Joe Dugan, Infielder Lew Malone and Ben Bedford, a new outfielder for the Austin, Tex., club.

The club also announced it had added two young pitchers to its roster—Alton B. Blodgett, a lefthander from the Oneonta team of the New York-Pennsylvania league, and John Gates, a young right-hander, recently of the U. S. army.

SCHOLZ TO CONTINUE HIS TRACK ACTIVITIES

New York, Feb. 12.—Jackson V. Scholz, Olympic 200-meter champion, expects to continue his track activities for several years, friends of the former University of Missouri sprinter said today.

Scholz came out of retirement at the age of 26 and returned to leadership among outdoor dash men last year in time to be chosen for the American Olympic team. His indoor work this winter has been disappointing, as on many occasions he has followed Loren Murchison and Harold (Boot) Lever across the tape in events ranging from 40 to 80 yards.

At the Wilco A. A. meet in Brooklyn Saturday, he accomplished 125 yards on a straightway in 12 2-5 seconds to win the event. This was two-fifths of a second slower than Charley Paddock's outdoor time at Des Moines in 1924.

New London, Feb. 12.—Westerly High has been substituted to take the place of the Naugatuck High school in the game with Chapman Tech, scheduled for Saturday. However, the Red and Black team will leave for Westerly on this (Friday) evening and there oppose the Rhode Island outfit on Friday instead of Saturday, the date originally set for the contest with Naugatuck High. The game between Westerly and Chapman Tech will be a regularly scheduled game of the Eastern Connecticut Interscholastic league of which the Whalers are at present the leaders with one victory and no defeats. The only Tech victory in the league to date is with Stonington High which the Red and Black defeated in New London.

Eager America forced the Chrysler Six to achieve by far the greatest sales success ever recorded by a motor car company in its first year. The public demand has forced the production and shipment of 32,000 Chryslers—all that the great Chrysler factories could produce in their first year, building to Chrysler's rigid requirements of precision and inspection. Over fifty million dollars is the sum the public enthusiastically paid last year for Chrysler cars, and the demand was never satisfied.

RITOLA RUNS FASTEST 2-MILE RACE IN HISTORY OF TRACK ATHLETICS

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 12 (By the A. P.).—Finland's whirlwind of the track handed time another jolt tonight when Paavo Nurmi shattered three of his own world's indoor marks, bringing his amazing total of record performances up to 22, while Willie Ritola slashed his countryman's two-mile standard to pieces in the greatest race ever run at this distance, indoors or outdoors.

The phantom Finn, flashing a brilliant race, erased his own indoor standards for 2,000 yards, 2,000 meters and a mile and a quarter and led his only dangerous rival, Jimmy Connolly, former Georgetown star, to the tape by 75 yards.

Ritola, conceding handicaps up to 125 yards to four opponents, ran one of the greatest races of his career, finishing the last lap with a terrific spurt that blotted out Nurmi's old mark of 9.08. The world's indoor record of 9.09 3-5, made by Alfred Shrubb of England in 1904, now has been bettered indoors by three men, Joie Ray, Nurmi and Ritola.

The Finnish-American star broke the tape 150 yards ahead of William Cox, Rochester schoolboy star, who had a 75 yard handicap and lapped the two other finishers, Frank Wendling of Buffalo, a member of the American Olympic Marathon team last year, and F. J. O'Connor of Buffalo. The fifth starter, E. G. Gressel, also of Buffalo, dropped out. All of these men had 125 yards allowance.

Willie Plant of New York, premier American walker, stepped to an easy victory in a two-mile handicap event but his time of 14.34 1-5 was nearly a minute behind the world's record of 13.37, held by George Goulding. Plant led his nearest rival, J. I. Graham, who had a 150-yard handicap, by about 1500 yards at the finish.

Alan Helfrich, Penn State flier, kept up his brilliant middle distance running when he conquered Minnie Lochnicht of Buffalo and Ray Watson, Illinois A. C., in a three-cornered duel at 500 meters.

JOSS ELECTED CAPTAIN OF YALE FOOTBALL

Indianapolis, Feb. 12.—John H. Joss, elected captain of the 1925 Yale football team today, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Joss of this city. He is credited with winning the Princeton game last year when he received a forward pass back of the goal line. Several eastern sport writers picked Joss on their All-American team. He has played tackle and end.

INDIRECTION

Fair are the flowers and the children, but their subtle suggestion is fairer;
Rare is the roseburst of dawn, but the secret that clasps it is rarer;
Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter;
And never was poem yet writ, but the meaning outmastered the meter.

Never a daisy that grows, but a mystery guideth the growing;
Never a river that flows, but a majesty scepters the flowing;
Never a Shakespeare that soared, but a stronger than he did enfold him,
Nor ever a prophet foretells, but a mightier seer hath foretold him.

Back of the canvas that throbs the painter is hinted and hidden;
Into the statue that breathes the soul of the sculptor is hidden;
Under the joy that is felt lie the infinite issues of feeling;
Crowning the glory revealed is the glory that crowns the revealing.

Great are the symbols of being, but that which is symboled is greater;
Vast the create and beheld, but vaster the inward creator;
Back of the sound broods the silence, back of the gift stands the giving;

Space is as nothing to spirit, the dead is outdone by the doing;
The heart of the wood is warm, but warmer the heart of the wooing;
And up from the pits where these shiver, and up from the hights where those shine,
Twin voices and shadows swim starward, and the essence of life is divine.

THE NEED OF FARM CO-OPERATION

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.)

King Solomon was regarded as the very wisest man that ever lived. Yet you may recall that he once remarked: "There are three things which are too wonderful for me; yea, four which I know not."

Now, if there were as many as four things which stumped Solomon, we, who are less wise, need not be ashamed if there are several which we can't understand.

Of course, Neighbor Know-it-all is an exception. He has an explanation or an answer to every mystery, to every paradox, to every insoluble conundrum. But we common critters are as bad if not worse off than Solomon. There are a good many things we can't understand.

One that is especially puzzling to me is the inability or unwillingness of the average American farmer to co-operate with his neighbors. Even when he is shown conclusively that such co-operation would mean extra dollars in his pockets and a better living. Even when it is shown that it would mean less work and worry for him.

We Americans are not and never have been short of self-satisfaction. We have and always have had extremely high opinions of ourselves. Not to hesitate too long over saying it, we consider ourselves the salt of the earth. Also the depositories of the world's keenest brains and most driving energy and most dominant common-sense. We're usually agreed that we're the latest thing in progress, the leaders in governmental and social betterment, the direct heirs of all the ages and "in the foremost files of Time."

Yet, as a nation, we're today suffering from many and grievous burdens of diverse sorts because we haven't got enough gumption to lessen them.

Perhaps there was once a time when our common-schools were the wonder of the world for their economy of management and their splendor of achievement. Now they are—or ought to be—the laughing-stock of the world by reason of their enormous cost and their ideally bad management and their abandonment of true education for a following of fads and crotchets.

Perhaps there once was a time when our courts were temples of justice and stern protectors of righteousness. Now they are simple arenas for the playing of a complicated and technical game in which the skill of the players is more regarded and more successful than the defense of right or the punishment of wrong.

Perhaps there was once a time when the public service was committed to the hands of the men best fitted in their various communities to perform it economically and wisely. Now it is mainly in the hands of self-seeking climbers who usually consider public office not as a public trust but as a "private snap."

Even I, who am not yet a Methuselah, can remember when the farmers of my particular Happy Valley used to have a neighborhood system of mutual help, shown in a succession of "bees" for raising barns or patching bed-quilts, or in a "swapping" of surplus products, or in a bunching of community effort for common good, or even in the buying together of common necessities. For an example, in those days shad "ran" in huge schools in the river 20 miles away. Every shad season, one of the dozen or twenty farmers composing the colony took his "turn" in driving out to "The Landing" and hauling back a two-horse load of fish. These were bought at the ruling price of five cents a shad, from the nets. When the load arrived at its destination all the other farmers were there waiting for it. The fish were promptly divided prorata, each man paid his share of the cost of the fish, and took them home, to eat a few while still fresh and "corn" the remainder quite like pork or beef or mackerel. They paid nothing for the haulage to the neighbor who made the trip because, next year, he would have his fish hauled free for him by some one else, and so on, turn and turn about.

There are few shad in that sewage-polluted river, now-a-days. What few there are are held at 50 cents or a dollar apiece by the seiners. But what odds? There aren't three men left in this valley who would go into any combine for getting their fish, even if it were possible at the old price.

When I meet my fellow farmers, individually, they practically all seem pretty good fellows. They're genial in their way, they actually look and act as if they would be glad to help me or any one else out in an emergency. But when it comes to getting them to combine to act and work together for the common good—which presupposes and includes the individual good, too—they're like a lot of tumble-weeds skyhootin' across a stubble field before an October gale. You can't rake 'em together; you can't make 'em stay bunched for two minutes, even if you do manage to collect a dozen or two into a temporary heap. The first little breeze that comes along and Poof! they're all over the lot again, every blamed one rolling in a different direction.

That's one of the things I can't understand. Solomon itemized only four that got his goat. There are more than four which beat me.

In a few cases and in specialized forms of farming this country offers occasional examples of successful co-operation. The orange-growers of California owe not only their prosperity but their continued existence to co-operative marketing. There are several co-operative dairy organizations in the northwest which are making their incorporators good profits. Some of the berry-raisers along the lower Hudson river have made good by the simple substitution of joining hands for cutting throats.

But, take him "by and large," the Great American Farmer seems to be utterly unable to see or take advantage of the savings made possible by co-operative buying or the gains made possible by co-operative selling. He kicks like a Missouri mule about the high prices he has to pay for his supplies and tools; he grows like a sore-headed bear about the low prices he can obtain for his products. But the one visible and practicable method by which he could sell at higher prices and buy at lower prices he will have nothing to do with.

Can you explain it? I can't.

We think we're extraordinarily sharp fellows, and boast ourselves as being "up to snuff" in matters of trade and barter. Yet the farmers of poor little thin-soiled, sour-climated Denmark are today selling butter and bacon—about the only things they can produce—at higher prices than our farmers can get, and are buying cow and hog feed at lower prices than we have to pay. Most of it right from this country, too.

Why?

Simply because they've bunched their buying and selling and thus secured to themselves the power to say what they will pay and what they will sell for. Instead of their asking, appealingly, what someone will please give them for their goods, they let him come to them and ask what they'll take. Instead of cringingly inquiring what somebody will charge them for feed-stuffs, they let the feed-seller come to them and ask them what they'll give.

It makes all the difference in the world whether you pay the other fellow anything he sees fit to ask for your supplies and sell him your products for anything he feels like giving, or whether you fix the prices, both ways, yourself. It's the difference between holding the poker by its cool end or its red-hot one. Its the difference between having "the whip-hand" or taking the sting of the whip-lash. It's the difference between living on East street or in Poverty Hollow.

As a matter of fact, observant travellers tell us that nowhere on earth are farmers so well housed, so well kept, so well read, and living on so high a plane of comfort and prosperity as the farmers of Denmark. Two generations ago they were a horde of hungry, ragged, hovel dwelling peasants, hardly above the rank of Russian serfs. The change has been effected almost solely by the beneficent work of cooperation—a work so staringly apparent to those nearest it that hardly a tenth of the Danish farmers still remain outside its fold.

Why can't American farmers do what Danish peasants have done and are doing? You tell me, please.

Is there anything so inherently different between the production of butter and bacon in Denmark and in America that what's sauce for the goose won't dress the gander? You know as well as I do that there is no such difference.

Is there any inherent reason why Danish farmers, across four thousand miles of ocean, should be able to buy cow and hog feed—from America, most of it—cheaper than Connecticut farmers can buy the same stuff? You know as well as I do that there's no adequate reason.

Is there such an unlikeness between raising oranges and potatoes that the same procedure which has brought prosperity to citrus lands wouldn't also unload it on spud diggings? You know as well as I do that there isn't.

Last week, I called such attention as I could to the reported statistics which showed that the prices of most Connecticut farm crops were "off" in 1924, while the costs of most farm supplies were up. I also noted how President's Coolidge's farm commission had felt impelled to send in a preliminary report urging the adoption of some form of farm co-operation as the immediately insistent need of the farm situation.

If you think I'm a bit theoretical or even, perhaps, cranky, will you heed the implication of this official report? Better yet, will you dig out the facts for yourselves and try to ascertain what on earth it is which makes a majority of American farmers shut their eyes to the dawn, and persist in a self-blinded following of discredited and time-worn precedents?

Never Let a Cold Get a Start

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold but only one DIRECT way — with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like "a vapor lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poltice or plaster.

The Cleverness of Blacky the Crow.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The clever always find a way
To get what's needed day by day.
—Blacky the Crow.

Blacky the Crow was one of those who were having a hard time. Many a time he wished that he had gone south instead of spending the winter up there where there was so much snow and ice. He had been able to get along after a fashion until that hard, icy crust formed over every-

H. CADY

He knew that Farmer Brown's chickens had plenty to eat

Now, Blacky is a most suspicious person. Especially does he suspect the two-legged creatures called men. Of course he had learned long since that Farmer Brown's Boy was a friend of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. He wasn't afraid of Farmer Brown's Boy. Still he never was able to bring himself to be friendly as some of the other feathered folk were. He always kept at a safe distance.

But now things were different. Yes, indeed, things were very different. He simply must have something to eat or he would starve. He knew that Farmer Brown's chickens had plenty to eat, and he wondered if he might get a share of that food. If only they were fed outside the henhouse he might have a chance. But he knew that they were being fed inside the henhouse this bad weather.

Blacky flew over from the top of a tree in the Old Orchard he could watch all that went on around Farmer Brown's house. He saw his cousin, Sammy Jay, stuffing himself with good things from a shelf on the window sill of Farmer Brown's house. He saw Tommy Tit the Chickadee, Yank Yank the Nuthatch and Drummer the Woodpecker stuffing themselves. But he couldn't quite get up courage enough to go so close to Farmer Brown's house. Hungry as he was he couldn't quite do it.

Then Blacky noticed that Farmer Brown's Boy had left the door of the henhouse open. He could see the hens inside busily picking up corn. Blacky looked sharply all around. He had seen Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy go into the house. He flew over to a post in the yard and cocked his head on one side as he peered hungrily into the henhouse.

"I'm not afraid of those hens," said he to himself. "Probably they will be afraid of me. If I work fast I can pick up a lot of that corn and get away before any one can possibly get over here. Those hens probably will make a great fuss, but if I can get just a few grains of corn that will be enough to give me a little strength. Well, here goes."

He spread his black wings and sailed down to the doorstep of the henhouse. Then he boldly walked right in. You should have seen those hens run! They ran and huddled together at the back of the henhouse. Perhaps they thought Blacky was a member of the Hawk family. And such a racket as they made! Blacky paid no attention to them. He began to pick up corn just as fast as he could. But all the time he kept one eye out toward Farmer Brown's house. He knew that the racket those hens were making would bring some one out to see what all the fuss was about.

Sure enough, in a few minutes the door of Farmer Brown's house opened, and Farmer Brown's Boy came hurrying toward the henhouse. Blacky picked up one more grain of corn and then took to his wings. "Caw! Caw! Caw!" he shouted as he flew over toward the Green Forest. He was feeling in high spirits again. He felt that he had been very clever.

THE IDEAL WIFE AND MOTHER

She is the one who radiates health and happiness, ever ready for work or play, and what woman does not want to fill this role? When women are besieged by aches, pains, irregularities, and mental depression they not only suffer themselves but create a gloomy atmosphere in the home. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one dependable remedy to overcome such conditions. For three generations it has been restoring the women of America to health and strength.

Admitting that he felt "fine, despite his wife's insistence that he slept six hours a day instead of his customary four," Thomas A. Edison celebrated his 78th birthday at his winter home in Fort Myers, Fla.

BEACH CLUB PROPERTY, NEW LONDON, IS BOUGHT FOR SUMMER HOTEL

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 12—Abraham Rakowzky today acquired the Bath and Beach Club property, Ocean Beach and plans the conversion of the property into a summer hotel. The property was formerly owned by the Hebrew Sick Benefit society and although the deeds of the transfer have not been passed, they are being prepared and will be filed for record in the office of the city clerk within a few days. The property has a frontage of 50 feet and is on the boardwalk, being located at the westerly end of the beach and with a splendid view of Long Island sound. The new owner contemplates having the place altered so that a large dining hall and about 30 sleeping rooms will be available for summer visitors.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Ronald L. Tarbox, Westport, Mass., to Miss Thea L. Hamlin, the latter a teacher of latin at Williams Memorial Institute. Miss Hamlin, who is a native of Milan, N. H., has resided in New London for several years. Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Carr have returned to their home in Portland, Me., having visited several days at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Carr on Fishers Island.

Frank McGarrah, who has been confined to his home on Robinson street, several days by illness, has recovered and is able to resume work.

Lieut. Leslie Arnold, this city, who gained national prominence as a 'round the world flyer, was a visitor in New London for a brief time today. Lieut. Arnold delivered an address in Providence last night and upon the arrival of the train that was conveying the aviator to Pittsburgh, Lieut. Arnold alighted and was cordially greeted by Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Ganey, who entertained Lieut. Arnold during his recent visit to New London.

A brick chimney, formerly used on connection with a bakeshop on Potter street, collapsed late yesterday, the large quantity of brick falling upon property of the W. R. Perry Ice Co., North Bank street, and adjoining the police station.

Late last night a defective wire of the Connecticut Power company caused a cross-arm of a big pole on North Bank street to be ignited, the sputtering wire emitting sparks that fell to the highway and sidewalk. As soon as the danger was discovered the police maintained a guard about the danger spot and it was nearly an hour later that the wire was repaired.

The weekly meeting of New London lodge of Elks took place this evening and with a large number of members in attendance.

Capt. Frank B. Smith, who has been the master of the yachts of the late Julius Fleischmann, a summer resident at Eastern Point, has been bequeathed $5,000 by Mr. Fleischman. Capt. Smith was much esteemed by Mr. Fleischmann and ran the "Say When" and other fliers over the sound between New London and New York.

The winter wear on some of the streets indicates that in the spring a considerable sum must be expended on the highways to put them into even passable condition. Montauk avenue is especially bad and Bank street in the section brick-paved is so uneven that it is most unsatisfactory to autoists. The question must come up soon as to whether a permanent cement highway would not be the most serviceable in a term of years and whether it would not be the most economical in that period. Methodist street was laid with cement some eight or ten years ago and since then not a cent has been laid out on it for repairs. A section of the streets that are now so badly worn could be laid each year with cement and in the succeeding years other sections might receive the same sort of treatment, and all with an expense little greater than the repairs now cost each year.

New London lodge of Elks met this evening when the matter of the recent loss of $350 by theft was again under consideration. It is said the investigation that has gone on has been quite thorough, but the crime has not been fastened upon any one. There are those who might possibly have been placed in a position of semi-compromise, but these even have not been given an absolutely honorable discharge from suspicion.

The report of the committee tonight was one of progress.

The police officers declare that they have rarely experienced a season when things were more quiet for them than at present. There has been some petty thieving, but the clue obtainable have not led anywhere for the officers.

Several members of the country bar will go to Norwich Friday to attend the funeral of the late Judge Gardner Greene.

The funeral of D. Lynsted Gates, a prominent Niantic resident, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal church, Niantic. The services were conducted by Rev. George W. Potter, the pastor. Members of Niantic lodge of Odd Fellows, of which organization Mr. Gates had been a member many years, acted as bearers and conducted the committal service in Union cemetery, Niantic.

Mrs. Anselmo Lombardozzi and infant son of Shaw street; Mrs. Wilfred Scott, Niantic, and Theodore Dupre, Saybrook Point, patients at Lawrence hospital, were able to return to their respective homes today.

Thieves who steal from parked automobiles on Meridian and Church streets, operated in that location again last night. William S. Cooper, 190 Broad street, reported to the police late at night that while his car was parked on Church street a spare tire was stolen from the rear of the car.

A woman residing on Lewis street reported to the police this afternoon that yesterday and today she had been humiliated while passing through Riverside park by a loiterer there exposing his person. The woman declared that the first incident of indecency took place yesterday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock, but the woman did not make a report of the alleged act until this afternoon and three hours following the fellow alleging to have exposed himself a second time. This afternoon Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Edward Daniels questioned the woman and made a search of the grove without success in their endeavor to locate the alleged annoyer.

Night Watchman Samuel Barnes, in visiting the tailoring establishment of Samuel Goodman, 49 Church street, at 4 o'clock this morning, discovered a rear window broken and partially open, indicating a break at the place. Barnes telephoned his suspicion to the police and Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman George Laboue were assigned to the case. The officers visited the store and found the upper section of a rear window closed but with the glass smashed near the lock and the lower part of the window partially open. Goodman was notified and visiting the store declared that about 35 yards of suitings had been taken from certain shelves. These shelves were bare when the investigation was started, and dust-covered, but this afternoon and while a further investigation was in progress, it was disclosed that the shelves from which the clothing was alleged to have been taken were free of dust and that a considerable quantity of suitings had been placed there since the report of the alleged burglary was made.

In the police court this morning, Judge Prince figuratively applied the legal stick to three sailors in the coast guard service who were arrested yesterday afternoon late, when found in the rear of the Whaling bank, intoxicated and making things lively in that section. They were well supplied with alcohol which tested 99 per cent and was of 180 proof—strong enough to set the brain of man afire if indeed it did not kill him. The men are all recruits in the coast guard service in which they enlist for a single year. They said they had been transferred to a destroyer which was to chase rum-runners, but they evidently found the rum before they began their duties for Uncle Sam's enforcement department. They were fined $5 each and paid, after which they were turned over to the coast guard for any discipline the head of that department may elect to impose upon them. The men are Raymond Davis, Walter C. Wolfe and Robert J. Tuohey. Davis is not a stranger in the court, he having been arrested three years ago when he was 18.

Colds and what is called intestinal grip are more prevalent now than at any time this winter and the doctors are kept busy in the treatment of these ailments.

The Diocesan mission gave a whist last evening at which there were 42 tables in play. Prizes were awarded.

It is claimed that Bank street rents are advancing in the face of the fact that there are several idle store locations on that street.

CITY COUNCIL DECIDES ON NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 13—This city is to have another school building—one with cost not to exceed $150,000 complete, including the fees of the architect, the furnishings, plumbing, electric fixtures, etc. That was determined at a special meeting of the city council this evening when the contract to draw the plans and the specifications was awarded A. Graham Creighton after the contract had been fully considered and objections made to it on the part of Mr. Creighton in some particulars and on the part of the council members in other respects. Finally an agreement was reached that was satisfactory, after the director of law had rewritten a section of the contract and both councillors, as the owners of the building, and Mr. Creighton, as the architect, had become satisfied. The city manager was authorized to sign the contract for the city and the contract was completed.

It is provided in the agreement that the architect shall receive one-fifth of his fee of $15,000 when the plans are accepted by the city representative, two-fifths more when the plans are submitted to contractors and a bid to erect the structure for $140,000 is received from a competent contractor. The balance, or two-fifths, is to be paid to the architect when the building is completed and delivered to the city. In the event that the project is abandoned after the plans are submitted for any reason, the architect is to receive but one-fifth of his fee. The architect takes a gamble that the structure can be erected at a cost of $140,000 and that it can be completed and furnished for the price of $150,000 complete. Changes in the plans are permitted, but it is stipulated that the building shall not be reduced in size. This is one of the points in question which the city insists upon. The experience New London has had with its school buildings has made the members of the council very cautious as to making a contract. Other school buildings cost a great deal more than was anticipated when the plans were drawn and the architects declared that the structures could be completed at a specified amount. The city council is determined that it shall not be caught in the trap any more. Every confidence was expressed in the architect, but the experience with builders has been such that the city has had to take more expensive school buildings than it had calculated upon when the erection of the buildings were undertaken.

Recently this same city council asked for plans for a school on the lot where the proposed one is to go and received them with the avowed estimate that the building could be erected for $500,000. When the contractors came to bid on the work it was found that a million dollars would be necessary to produce the structure. It was never erected nor was an attempt to produce it ever made. The plans cost the city $31,000, which was an experience that taught the members a lesson they evidently have not forgotten.

SLOOP'S MASTER AND CREW SUCCEED IN GETTING BONDS

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 12—Capt. Olof Stenfield, master of the sloop K-10438, seized off Greenport yesterday afternoon with a cargo of 400 cases of rye and scotch whiskey, with his crew of two, Albert and Samuel Johnson, was before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson of Norwich, at the customs house here this forenoon. The cases were continued until next Thursday. A bond of $1,500 was ordered for Stenfield's appearance and a bond of $500 was ordered for the other two members of the crew. All three furnished a surety company bond. It is understood that when the trial of the men comes up one of them will be charged with bribery, it being alleged that a sum of money was offered an officer of the raiding patrol craft to release the boat and crew.

The auxiliary schooner Hattie T., Capt. E. Rider, and his crew consisting of George Phillips, Al Kirt and Bob Rider, all of Greenport, which was captured late yesterday off Greenport with a cargo of approximately 500 cases of liquor and brought into port during the night, were also held for trial. Rider's bond was fixed at $1,500 and the remaining members of the crew were ordered to provide a bond of $500 each. Like the crew of the K-10348, a surety company bond was provided.

United States coast guard cutter Red Wing, which figured in the capture of the steamer Homestead, owned and piloted by Capt. Mark Gilbert, formerly of Mystic, after three days' chase in the Sound and the Atlantic ocean, last Friday, and which was towed by the cutter to New York, where the vessel's cargo of wines and liquors was placed in storage, arrived at her berth at the state pier late last night.

The recently found opera La Finta [illegible] ("The Pretended Simple") composed by Mozart in 1768 when he was 12 years old, was performed in Vienna and was given an enthusiastic reception.

SURGEONS, PHYSICIANS, DENTISTS USE WONDERFUL NEW ANTISEPTIC

We are calling the attention of the good people of Norwich and vicintiy to Kojene, the most powerful, non-poisonous, non-alcoholic, non-irritating Antiseptic known.

In this newspaper we will continue to tell the people, and especially the ailing people, to whom Kojene will prove a blessing, just exactly what physical ills it will help, and in spite of our enthusiasm for this wonderful antiseptic will stick to the truth in every statement we make.

We will not exaggerate—although some of the things we write may seem exaggerated.

Nothing equals Kojene for irrigation of the antrum; for Pyorrhea and Gingivitus; for Stomatitis, Trench Mouth, pus pockets and all cases of infection.

Kojene, so we will tell more people who need it, is four times as powerful as an antiseptic than Carbolic Acid. It is much more powerful than poisonous bichoride of mercury, and will not burn or even irritate the tenderest membrane.

We will tell the readers of this paper of its wonderful and quickly effective action in Tonsilitis and sore throat; of how completely it drives out the offensive mucus of catarrh bottle.

We will tell them of its remarkable success in the treatment of cankers in the mouth and how quickly it succeeds when used for Eczema, itching skin, ulcers, boils and skin eruptions.

And last but by no means least, we will tell them that as a germ destroying mouth wash it is as far ahead of the highly flavored and bubbling kind as daylight is to candlelight and has no nasty, disagreeable taste.

It is seventy-five times as powerful as the weak kinds whose popularity seems to lie in their weakness and the ignorance of those who use them.

A sixty cent bottle (6 ounces) of Kojene, will make one-half gallon of a stronger, better and more efficient mouth wash than the high priced doubtful ones you buy ready made.

Medical men like to join in any effort to drive menacing poisons from the home and give their support to any great and worthy preparation that destroys pernicious germs and helps humanity—that is just what Kojene does.

In six ounce bottles at Lee & Osgood's and every progressive druggest in American. 60c with the understanding that money will be returned if any purchases is dissatisfied. Complete and simple directions for treating various ailments with each bottle.

DOOR MAT STOLEN AT JOHNSON HOME

The matron and other members of the staff at the Johnson Home, Norwich Town, are at a loss to even suspect who would be so unkind as to trespass on private property and deliberately remove anything that belonged thereon.

Such was the case, however, at this institution Saturday evening when a practically new door mat, about 3 ft. by 2 ft., was stolen. The mat was noticed in place by the caretaker early that evening.

WHIST AND MUSIC IN EVENING OF ENTERTAINMENT

Tuesday evening, Miss Marjory Kingsley entertained several of her relatives and friends at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kingsbury Kingsley on Schoolhouse Hill, Yantic. Three tables of whist were played resulting in high scores for Miss Adeline Coughlin and John Curry with consolation awards going to Miss Beulah Whitely and John Weiler.

Dainty refreshments consisting of coffee, doughnuts, fancy cakes and assorted candies were served by the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. F. K. Kingsley. Piano selections were pleasingly rendered by the Misses Beulah Whitely and Mary Weiler, while John Curry and Richard Herbert delightfully favored "I hear You Calling Me" and "June Night" respectively. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Kingsley, Mr. and Mrs. Jason H. Kingsley, the Misses Beulah Whitely, Adeline Coughlin, Mary Weiler, Marjory Kingsley and Norman Thomas, John Curry, Richard Herbert, John Weiler and Frederick W. Kingsley.

LEGISLATURE OBSERVES LINCOLN DAY WITH ADDRESS BY REP. SISSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

Hartford, Feb. 12.—The general assembly was of the mind that the best way to observe "Lincoln Day" was to stay on the job and do business. The matters that have had the attention of the committees the past few days came to the front today with reports from the incorporations, judiciary and cities and boroughs committees.

That this was an anniversary and legal holiday was not allowed to pass unnoticed by Representative Sisson of New London, who just before adjournment spoke as follows:

A century and 16 marks the years since that mid-winter's day dawned in the dreary wilds of Kentucky when a marvel in manhood first saw the light of day. His name, his fame and his contribution to the uplift of humanity long ago reached the apex of his countrymen's acclaim. No other name holds so secure a place in the hearts of all mankind as that of Abraham Lincoln. Today the anniversary of his birth will be observed wherever patriotic Americans are to be found. It is fitting that we join with the disciples of freedom and liberty in paying homage to the greatest American on his natal day. We are reminded of his leadership, achievements, virtues and sacrifices every day by reason of the battle scarred and tattered banners which grace the alcoves of the floor below and by the thousands of grassy mounds which enrich the laurel landscapes of our commonwealth from the Atlantic's restless tide to the everlasting Litchfield hill. It is for us here to rededicate our lives in useful emulation of him, and to renew our efforts in confidence on the righteous pathway of the most beloved servant the nation has ever know. May we have ever increasing reverence for honor, justice and mercy to the end that our humble stewardship may be an inspiration and a guide to the generations which are to follow. Let us here resolve to hold the fabric of brotherhood intact, that the glory of the great Liberator's example may be an exalted legacy through the ages.

Let us revere his memory by an unselfish devotion to the public weal, today, tomorrow and forever.

His remarks were loudly applauded and on motion of Mr. Sullivan of Montville it was voted that they be printed in the journal.

The House

The House was called to order at 11.30 by Speaker Barbie and prayer was offered by Abraham Lewis. He referred to this being Lincoln day and prayed that we might emulate the virtues of the martyred president and profit by the example of his life. The incorporations committee reported a long list of bills, some favorably, some unfavorably and other recommended for hearing before other committees. Most of these were of interest only to other parts of the state. H. B. 603 introduced by Miss Manning of Stonington was sent to the committee on cities and boroughs.

The committee on the judiciary presented a large number of reports among them were favorable reports on the Willimantic bills heard yesterday. The reports of the committee on H. B. 578 that permits the judge of the city court the power to appoint the prosecutor as his judgment approves and H. B. 859 concerning salaries of the same court were accepted and they were ordered to be placed on the calender for action.

The bill that would abolish certain legislative committees was unfavorably reported.

The number of bills reported was 32 of which 22 were favorable, 5 unfavorable and 5 were sent to some other committee.

The only matter on the calendar ready for action was H. B. 22 and reads as follows was passed.

Section 1. No person shall take, assist in taking or attempt to take any fish through the ice with any tip-up, hole or other device from any Willimantic reservoir situated in the towns of Bolton and Vernon from February 1, 1925 to April 30, 1928.

The remarks of Mr. Sisson of New London were ordered printed in the journal and at 11.59 in respect for the day, adjournment was taken to 11.30 Friday.

The Senate

In concurrence with the house George H. Bradford was appointed, under suspension of rules, a member of the board of commissioners for New London county.

The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on senate bill No. 20 in relation to the interfering with radio broadcasting between 6 o'clock in the evening and mid-night. In explaining the report of the committee Senator Cronin said the committee was reluctant to report unfavorably on the bill and the committee recognized that the purpose of the bill was worthy. But the committee believed the bill unconstitutional. He moved the acceptance of the committee's report and the rejection of the bill. Senator Shaw asked Senator Cronin to withdraw his motion until Senator Gregory, who introduced it, was in his place. Senator Cronin acceded to the request of Senator Shaw and had the report tabled. A moment afterwards Senator Gregory took his seat and Senator Cronin called the bill from the table. Senator Gregory, when the unfavorable report was explained to him, said he would not oppose its acceptance. The report was then accepted and the bill rejected.

Senator Golden presented a petition from 200 citizens of Meriden in opposition to the house bill for the licensing of cats. The petition says: "It is a case of rats or cats." It was referred to the committee on finance.

G. and E. Bill Rejected

The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on the bill to allow municipalities owning gas and electric plants to sell gas and electric fixtures. The bill was introduced by Senator Robbins and Senator Cronin, in explaining the report, said the bill had particular reference to Norwich. The report was accepted and the bill rejected.

Senator Ford made a brief address to the senate on the necessity of carrying out the suggestions of Governor Trumbull in regard to the pursuing of a policy of economy and pointed out that the legislature might find a way of reducing expenses by abolishing a number of committees and rearranging others. He said there was no more business for the committees on excise and woman's suffrage. The general assembly costs the state $100,000 at each session. He hoped the matter would be generally discussed.

There was no response to the senator's invitation for a discussion. The senate, on the motion of Senator Cronin, adjourned to Friday at 11.15.

BINGHAM POINTS OUT SOME POLITICAL TENDENCIES

Speaking in New York Thursday evening before the national republican club at its annual Lincoln Day dinner, Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut discussed some of the tendencies seen in modern political conditions in the United States as affecting the national and state governments.

There are three things to which I would like to call your attention and on which I believe it is very important for all citizens to take a stand These are—(1) The Principle of Division of Powers in the Federal Government; (2) The Principle of Paternalism vs. Self-Reliance; and (3) The Principle of State Sovereignty as expressed in the phrase 'An Indestructible Union of Indestructible States."

When we Americans were nearer to the tyranny from which our ancestors fled we wrote into our Constitution the Principle of the Division of Powers. Our ancestors had learned that whenever one branch of the government, be it executive, legislative, or judicial, got too much power into its own hands the result was tyranny, despotism and interference with the inalienable rights of man. It is not necessary for me to review the history of the Star Chamber proceedings in London or the tyranny of certain English judges. It is not necessary for me to remind you of the long struggle made by parliament to secure the right to make laws and take it away from the royal executive authority. We gave to our executive certain powers, but we did not include in them the power of making laws nor of judging whether they had been broken. We gave to our legislatures the power of making laws, but not the duty of executing them.

Now having enjoyed the liberty and the freedom from despotism which resulted from this very wise provision in the Federal Constitution, we have been during the past generation getting away from it more and more. It has been said that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." I fear we have not been very vigilant about the precious rights preserved to us in the Federal Constitution.

With the best will in the world and the most earnest desire to secure a square deal we have been impatient with the somewhat slow movement of the wheels of justice and the somewhat cumbersome action of the machine set up by our constitution. For the sake of efficiency and speed, and to satisfy popular demand, we have been willing to break down this old doctrine of division of powers. During the past year there have been a great many investigations authorized by the congress of the United States or by one of its branches which are not legislative in character, but are executive. Notwithstanding our confidence in the president of the United States and in the heads of the departments whom he has chosen, we are continually tempted to direct him to investigate this or that, where by law it is his duty to do it. Because the senate of the United States believed that certain officials of the federal government were guilty of misconduct, the senate decided to adopt grand jury proceedings to investigate their conduct. With all due respect to opinions no doubt wiser than mine, it seems to me that the constitutional course would have been for the house of representatives to bring an impeachment against the federal officials and for the senate to act as a judicial body rather than as a grand jury.

Many of the commissions and bureaus which have been set up in Washington appear to me to be exercising triple powers: Legislative power, the power of making regulations; executive power, the power of enforcing these regulations; and judicial power, the power of acting as a court to determine whether the regulations had been broken. This has been done with good intentions and with the desire to secure justice, but it appears to me to be a movement in the wrong direction. It appears to me to give certain men too great power. Believing as I do in a government by laws rather than a government by man, believing as I have been led to do by a study of history that it is unwise to put too much power in the hands of any one group of human beings or in any single human being, I desire to call your attention to this tendency and to ask you to think about it. I hope you will give careful consideration to the matter and decide whether after all you are willing deliberately to abandon the doctrine of the division of powers. For my own part I am of the opinion that the safety of our institutions depends upon the securing for our citizens those precious rights to "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness" which by the Declaration of Independence were declared to be the "Inalienable Rights." Furthermore I am of the opinion that every time the executive branch of the government attempts to make laws, every time the legislative branch of the government takes the time which should be given to the making of laws and gives it to executive or judicial work, every time the judicial branch of the government attempts to initiate or create legislation we are approaching dangerous ground.

The second general principle to which I desire to refer this evening is the doctrine of paternalism versus self-reliance. There is nothing new about this doctrine. During those years when I was devoting my efforts to exploring South America and in studying the Latin American Republics I had occasion to become familiar with quite a number of governments who thoroughly believed in the paternalistic system. There are undoubtedly thousands of people in our own country who believe in a paternalistic form of government. They would like to see the federal government build all the roads and run all the schools and pay for all the improvements. Their argument is that we must have good roads, we must have good schools and some of the states cannot afford to build good roads and some of the states do not have as good schools as other states. Therefore, we must spend the nation's money in looking after these needs. There are many people who feel that the government ought to look after the citizens and protect them against their own ignorance, against their own folly; against their own laziness and against their own extravagance. They point out the ways in which the people suffer from ignorance and folly and extravagance and they desire to have the government make laws and regulations and establish bureaus and inspectors, and build up an enormous paternalism. Their attitude is that we are all the young nieces and nephews of good old Uncle Sam and it is his duty to look out for us just as we look our for little children.

To my way of thinking this tendency leads to a weakening of the moral fibre of our people. When our ancestors came over here they came at their own risk. No beneficient government protected them against cold or hunger or wild animals or savage Indians or famine or pestilence. They had to rely on themselves and that sturdy self-reliance which they developed enabled them and their children to conquer this vast continent and make it into the greatest country in the world. I believe it is important for the future of America to encourage self-reliance in the individual citizen.

The third general principle is state sovereignty as expressed in the phrase "an indestructible union of indestructible states." This principle is jeopardized by the tendency toward paternalism of which I have just spoken There are many excellent citizens who are so zealous for good works and the promotion of virtue that they allow their zeal to affect their wisdom. There are many citizens who are so anxious to have America become perfect that they forget the way in which it became America. They find certain parts of the country which are not as advanced as might be wished and because these are parts of America they wish them to be standardized with those parts which they believe to be more advanced. They talk about developing this great nation. They forget that this nation was developed as a union of sovereign states. They forget that our growth has depended upon the exercise of a considerable amount of self-government. They forget that our freedom was not conferred upon us from

"Power" a Non-Technical Motion Picture

The stage is all set and the curtain hung to receive the wonder picture of the age called "Power" produced by Stone and Webster at a cost of $15,000 and loaned to The West End Community association through the courtesy of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co.

This picture will be shown in its entirety at the Elizabeth Street schoolhouse at 7.30 tonight. It is advisable for people to come early as the auditorium of the school accomodates but 600 people.

Three weeks ago in London, Eng., iron and steel were being melted in a furnace in which there was no fire, but thirty miles away was a wireless station which was sending the heat elements into the iron and steel which started the atoms working against each other and the iron and steel melted themselves.

Wonderful? Yes, but what will you think when instead of ice in your ice box you turn a dial similar to the dial on your radio set, which instead of bringing a concert in will bring in cold from your central lighting station which will have an electrical wireless refrigerating plant.

Remember no admission. Everything free.

Much Interest in Trial of Mr. Parent

The trial of Mr. Average Parent is arousing more than usual attention. Youth is the complainant and the indictment charges Mr. Parent with lack of sympathy appreciation and companionship—nagging—narrow mindedness and suspicion. The trial will take place in the court of Public Opinion at the Elizabeth St. School next on Tuesday evening under the auspices of West End Community Association.

Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court will preside. It is quite probable that State's Attorney Arthur Brown will handle the prosecution and Judge A. F. Libby will defend Mr. Parent. The jury will consist of young people.

The young folks will have a splendid chance to present their problems.

After the trial the balance of the evening will be in charge of the boy scouts. The scouts will have an exhibit and Scout Executive Benton will give a talk explaining the scout work.

Connecticut College

In the Connecticut college on Wednesday evening Senora Isabel de Palencia lectured on "Costumes of Spain," the lecture being given under the auspices of the Spanish club of the college. It included a discussion and comparison of the costumes of the various regions of Spain; authentic models of shawls, mantillas and difference ensembles of the sections of Spain were displayed by Senora Isabel de Palencia herself and a number of able student models from the college. Those who acted as models were, Misses Helen Farnsworth, Montclair, N. J.; Katherine King, New York city; Orpha Brown, Torrington, Conn.; and Grace Bennett, Evanstown, Ill.

Senora Isabel stated that the origin of some of the models may be traced back to the fourth century. The lecturer told, furthermore, the Hebrew, Arabic and Oriental influence on the Spanish clothes. She illustrated by means of slides the garments of Galicia, Andalusia, Salamanca, Toledo, Sagobia and Valentia. The senora herself demonstrated the various ways of wearing shawls among the different classes of Spanish women, and also the ways of wearing the mantilla, telling its origin and history.

One of the customes of marriage was very interestingly told and enjoyed by the listeners. When a young man wanted to proposed to a girl, he asked two of his friends to visit the home of the girl with him and pass the evening there. The three men spoke of trivial things, but the girl well knew that the one who had crossed the threshold first desired to marry her. Upon leaving, he purposely forgot his cane. If the girl cared to accept his offer of marriage she kept the cane but if she didn't the suitor found it early in the morning on the doorstep and knew that he was formally rejected.

GARDNER LAKE CONTROVERSY OVER PENDING BILL

Discussing the attempt by non-resident property owners at Gardner Lake to get a part of the town of Salem set over and joined to the town of Montville, a Norwich man said Thursday that some of the Norwich property owners at Gardner's Lake have been rather amused lately at the responsibility which one or two men in Salem take upon themselves as though they were the whole town of Salem, especially one of the men, of whom it is generally said he does not own any property at all in Salem and who has made himself the most noisy in the discussion. The Norwich property owners feel that they know values as well as anybody from Salem, and they say that huckleberry brush land should not be assessed at values equivalent to city property lots.

The Norwich man declared that if he is any judge of the attitude of the Norwich property owners at Gardner Lake it looks as if there would be several hearings on this matter in Hartford this year, and if the matter is not amicably adjusted this year, it looks as if it would be taken to the next legislature where there will also have to be a number of hearings before the matter is disposed of.

It has been claimed that the town of Montville does not want this property but it is believed anybody from Montville would have to be insane to refuse property which means a revenue to them, and the claim is made that the taxpayers of Montville would not look with much favor upon anybody who would oppose the addition of this piece of property to their own.

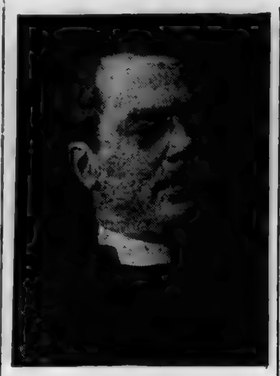
NEW CHRIST CHURCH RECTOR WILL HOLD FIRST SERVICES ASH WEDNESDAY



REV. C. M. BUDLONG

Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong, who has been rector of St. James' church, Fall River, Mass., but has accepted the call to the rectorship of Christ Episcopal church in this city, will hold his first services there on Ash Wednesday, Feb. 25. The rector and his wife will make their residence in the parish rectory at 118 Washington street.

Rev. Mr. Budlong was born in New York state and lived for a number of years near New York city. After finishing his high school course he attended Shattuck Military Academy in Faribault, Minnesota, then entered Columbia college and later took the course at the General Theological Seminary in New York city.

While carrying on his studies the Rev. Mr. Budlong did a large and extensive work along social service lines and especially in young men's and boys' club work.

After his ordination, he went west, in the mission field, and spent three years there. Returning east to visit his father's parish in Boston, he was asked to take charge of a parish in central New York state, where he started it going with a new spirit and life.

The parish in Fall River has increased under his rectorship and there have been several new and successful organizations started while he was there.

The entertainment of the evening was furnished by S. Hussey Reed who gave a most entertaining and descriptive talk on a Trip from Kittery to Fort Kent. During his talk Mr. Reed recited much Maine history and brought out many interesting facts about the home state of the club members.

The next meeting of the club is to be held in April at the same meeting room and entertainment will be provided.

The dedication of the hospital will not come until well into the spring.

LIONS IN PURE MILK AND SCOUT CAMPAIGN

With the usual large attendance the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with President C. Edward Carpenter presiding. The meeting opened with the singing of America and Lion Kopeland Markoff was appointed song leader. The usual stunt and group songs were rendered President Carpenter spoke of last week's meeting which inaugurated a start in the campaign for pure milk and the following were appointed a committee to carry on the campaign: Charles Frink, Doc Thompson, Max Hanover, B. C. Pullen and William O'Neil. This committee will act in conjunction with like committees from the Rotary club and the Norwich chamber of commerce.

Announcement was made that one of the teams in the coming Boy Scout campaign for $5,000 will be made up of members of the Lions club with Earl Taggart, as captain. The team members are Frank Rinella, Edward Rich, Louis Fontaine, Bert Caron, Charles Frink, John Barry, Jean Kiefer, Walter Block and B. C. Pullen. A letter from the Rock Nook home was read, accepting preferred aid by the club at such a time as necessity appeared.

Abner Schwartz spoke of the endeavor of local merchants to secure adequate parking facilities in the central part of the city for automobile drivers. This matter was referred to the civic committee.

President Carpenter introduced George Keppler who commemorated Abraham Lincoln's birthday by giving the Gettysburg Address. The local scout executive, Frederick A. Benton, gave a talk on scout activities and brought out the fact that the movement has grown to a total of nearly 70,000 scouts and executives in the world movement and that Norwich has locally 22 troops with about 350 members. He stressed the point that educators of note have praised their work as an ideal combination for boys as it comprises study, work and play in correct proportion. Mr. Benton also cited instances of local work done which included extinguishing fires, demonstrations of flag use, assistance in civic tableaux, etc. Details of the boy's camp life were also given showing that they were under military discipline and gained practical knowledge of woodcraft, cooking and swimming.

Jean Kiefer and Max Hanover spoke of the value of the scout work and urged the assistance of all in raising the $5,000 fund. The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

a sovereign government, but was declared to be inherent and one of the "inalienable rights of man." They forget that our ancestors gave up a certain amount of liberty in order to enable the government to function. They forgot that the states which were sovereign states gave up a certain amount of their sovereignty in order to funcmit the federal government to function. Our system has been so successful, and America is such a great nation today, that these worthy citizens try to tell us that the boundaries between the separate states are purely imaginary. They try to tell us that whenever a state refuses to do right according to whatever standards are set up by certain disinterested and expert reformers, the state must be made to behave by the federal government.

In other words, they believe in an indestructible union but not composed of indestructible states. As a matter of fact they are facing the destruction of their own rights.

Lord Bryce, the author of that celebrated work entitled "The American Commonwealth" and of another great work on "Modern Democracies," made a life-long study of the workings of popular government. He was thoroughly imbued with a desire for the success for the government "of the people, by the people, and for the people." His last great work gave the result of studies covering nearly two generations. He had observed patiently and thoroughly the workings of many of the greatest republics and democracies in the world. The conclusion of his study led him to believe that the success of popular government depends on the proper functioning of the local self-government. He believed that it was necessary for citizens to practice the art of government if they were to remain as citizens. A study of his book led me to the belief that a citizen without responsibilities ceases to be a citizen and becomes a subject.

He also pointed out that among the very few responsibilities which could be left to the citizens in the smaller communities were schools and roads. Every citizen is capable of knowing whether the schools function properly and whether the roads are good or bad. If you take roads and schools away, from the local communities and turn them over to the central government you deprive the citizen of two of the most important things about which it is possible for him to form an intelligent opinion. You deprive him of the opportunity of exercising his duties as a citizen. He thus loses that which teaches him citizenship better than all the books and lecturers in the world.

For the sake of efficiency, for the sake of getting things done, for the sake of better roads and better schools we are inclined to give the federal government powers for which it was never intended and which will relieve the citizens of responsibilities which are vital to the healthy exercise of their citizenship.

In view of these tendencies I most earnestly ask you to consider what stand the republican party shall take on these fundamental principles.

ROSE CITY MINSTRELS APPEAR IN UNCASVILLE

The Rose City Minstrels, composed in part of members of St. Mary's Players of this city, presented a minstrel entertainment in the assembly hall of the Uncasville school in Montville, Thursday evening to a large and appreciative audience. The affair was under the auspices of the Montville Holy Name society and was given in aid of the church building fund that is being raised under the direction of Rev. James A. O'Meara of St. John's church.

Each number on the programme was creditably rendered, the local hits being especially productive of laughter. In the minstrel first part the ends were taken care of by Messrs. Connelly, Bowen, Keroack and Miss Mollie Driscoll; interlocutor, Mr. Murphy; pianist, Miss Mary Brennan.

The musical numbers were as follows: Opening chorus, The Music Master's Nightmare., All Alone, Walter LaFontaine; Sally (a parody), Napoleon Keroack; Little Town in the Old County Down, Eleanor Donovan; The Garden of Tomorrow, Warran Kane; If I Was What I Ain't Instead of What I Is, William Bowen; Follow the Swallow, trio consisting of H. LaFontaine, W. LaFontaine, Warren Kane; Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline? Edward T. Connelly. Humerous recitation, James E. Murphy.

Others in the circle were the Misses Catherine Lee, Loretta Gadle, Eleanor Donovan, Margaret Purdon, Messrs. Walter LaFontaine, John Donahue, Henry LaFontaine, Warren Kane.

In the olio, Miss Lucille Bowen was enthusiastically received in two dances, The American Clog Dance, and The Highland Fling, followed by selections by the trio.

The concluding number was the military travesty, "The Battle of Too Soon," in which the character of the irascible General Mulberry was excellently portrayed by James E. Murphy while that of the uproariously funny Captain Casey was played by Edward T. Connelly in his inimitable manner.

PRETTY PARTY GIVEN FOR DANCING CLASSES

One of the prettiest parties of the season was given Thursday afternoon at the Wauregan Hotel by Mrs. Edward Andrews for her Norwich and Willimantic classes. Social dancing was enjoyed from 4 to 6 o'clock. Music was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Miss Gertrude Platt. Eveline Burbeck and Florence Smith in costumes of the hoop skirt period danced with dainty charm the beautiful minuet waltz. Myrtle Fuller danced Soaring by Delibes. Dainty refreshments of ice cream and wafers were served by the Wauregan House. Ansel Arnold and Miss Elizabeth Hodge led the Russian Polonaise which was the closing number of the program. The hostesses were Mrs. E. Allen Bidwell, Mrs. Albert H. Chose, Mrs. William Lyman and Mrs. Charles L. Stewart.

HEARD COLLINS BREATHING AT 9.45 A. M. YESTERDAY

Official Announcement Made by Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt—Announcement Was Based on Testimony of Miners Brenner and Blevens—Brenner Avers That He Heard "Collins Give One Long, Deep Gasp Like a Groan"—Miners Estimated That They Were Within Ten Feet of the Cave Imprisoned Man—Estimate It Might Take Until Tuesday to Reach Collins.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 3.—(By the A. P.)—Floyd Collins has survived his ...ee weeks' imprisonment in a natural ...ap in Sand Cave, Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt, in supreme command of the situation at the Sand cave, announced after an executive session of the military court of inquiry this afternoon.

The announcement was based upon statements made by witnesses before the court this afternoon that they had heard the entombed man breathing when they entered the main passage to the cave at 9.45 this morning.

It was the first indication in two days that Collins is alive and came on top of a discouraging report from those in charge of digging a rescue shaft toward the cave that a natural tunnel, found at the 55 foot level of the shaft, which was expected to lead to the early extrication of Collins, was ...ginal passage."

Edd Loerner, a miner of Cincinnati, and A. Hibbard of Louisville, testified that they went into the natural passage of the cave this morning. Their statements were put into the records.

Brenner and Blevens had gone into the cavern five hours previously with Andy Bisig and John Shickle of Louisville, who had reported hearing Collins cough twice.

At the conclusion of the executive session at the cave, General Benhardt called newspapermen together and had the court stenographer read a transcript of the miners' testimony. He announced that on the basis of their testimony, he thinks Collins is alive.

Brenner and Blevens reported that they had penetrated the natural passage to the slide which last week blocked the way just ahead of the trapped cave explorer.

"I heard Collins give one long, deep gasp like a groan," Brenner said. "It was not like a moan given in a hospital, not loud."

"Floyd! Floyd! Floyd, I yelled, but got no answer."

"I said aint, we're coming," he said he yelled, and then proceeded with soundings according to pre-arranged signals.

He estimated he was within ten feet of Collins at the time he heard the sound. The soundings for the shaft itself indicated as near as he could guess, that the workings were between ten and fifteen feet from where he was stationed. He could not say whether the shaft was in direct line with the cave passage or to one side.

Ever since work on the shaft was begun a week ago today on the side of the hill overhanging Sand cave, those in charge had hoped to find some crevice, some fissure, through which they could penetrate to the main passage-way and thus speed up the work.

Early this morning such a tunnel was found. A strong down draft was felt, indicating that it possibly was an opening to the cave and a period of frantic digging began.

Shortly before noon, H. T. Carmichael, ... of the operations, and several others, went down the shaft. As a precaution, spectators were driven away from the vicinity of the shaft by national guardsmen. The military court of inquiry sitting at Cave City, some six miles away, adjourned and the members, including General Denhardt, went to the cave. The Red Cross unit there was advised to be prepared for any emergency. Dr. William Hazlett of Chicago was called from his room at a Cave City hotel. The report that a recovery was imminent spread to Cave City and caused a general exodus.

Every move of the officials at the mouth of the cave was watched with straining eyes. The minutes grew into hours. Then the officials came out, bringing with them a discouraging story of postponing until tomorrow at the earliest, and probably as late as next Tuesday, the time they now expect it to take them to extricate Collins.

The hole which proved a blind passage, was found near the 55 level, measuring from the higher side of the shaft, away from the mouth of the cave.

Its discovery was held a closely guarded secret, the miners refusing to talk about it. According to later descriptions of the new find, it was easily large enough to accommodate a good sized man, and, as far as could be seen, ran straight away from the northeast corner of the shaft, diagonally to the left toward the mouth of the cave.

In a conference with newspapermen, immediately after he came out of the shaft, Mr. Carmichael told of the failure and explained the plans for the immediate future.

The test drill sunk in one corner of the shaft had reached a total depth of 71 feet this afternoon, Mr. Carmichael said. The next ten feet would be the hardest kind of going he said, even feet of that distance being limestone and the remaining three feet a rocky formation. Progress will be retarded as much as 5 per cent., he said. Up to this time, the shaft had been going at a rate of about ten feet a day. The hard rock will reduce this to five feet daily. When the present sixty-foot level or below is reached, lateral tunnels will be dug in the most likely direction in an effort to tap the cave ...

Meanwhile the workers, discouraged but undismayed at the outcome of their venture into a natural fissure, continue to hope and to search for any other crevice that may hasten their work.

Below the limestone layer the drill struck a "void" or soft spot. Mr. Carmichael said the void also had been encountered in the first test hole, a few feet to one side of the present shaft. The void under the shaft and the void to one side were not at the same level, Mr. Carmichael added, but ... [illegible] significance attached to the difference in the two levels of the void.

Noon tomorrow was the time estimated it would take to go through the limestone. To reach the imprisoned man might take until Tuesday, provided no unexpected fissure leads to a recovery sooner.

This statement was made prior to the announcement that Collins was believed to be alive. Whether this would necessitate a change in the plans had not been made known early tonight.

CHAPMAN PLEADED NOT GUILTY OF MURDER

Hartford, Feb. 13.—While more than a score of officers stood guard at every possible avenue of escape in the county building today, Gerald Chapman was arraigned before Judge Nywell Jennings and, after a plea of not guilty had been ordered on his behalf, was ordered to stand trial for the murder of James Skelly in New Britain on Tuesday, March 24.

His attire, neat and dapper, and his air one of extreme composure, he stood unruffled between County Detective Edward J. Hickey and Deputy Sheriff John F. Sheridan, while State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn moved the proceedings through habeas corpus by which Chapman was removed from the federal jurisdiction to state jurisdiction with the consent of U. S. Attorney John Buckley, as representative of the attorney general at Washington.

When Chapman entered the county building shackled with handcuffs to a prison official, and stepped into the basement, he came face to face with Walter E. Shean, of Springfield, Mass. In view of the fact that the two men are charged with the same crime, though Chapman alone has been indicted for it, they were watched eagerly to see what reaction the one would have upon the other.

Chapman, as he stood two or three feet away from the man who had given his name to the authorities as the one who had killed Skelly, never cast one glance of recognition at the figure cringing in the chair near him. But with Shean it was a different story. He turned his head slowly toward the notorious bandit, and took one long sidelong look at him. As the officers watched, they were sure to see Shean weep.

Chapman paid the closest attention while the indictment was being read by the clerk. He spoke but twice during the proceeding, and both times in a voice of extreme cultivation.

HOW IZZY AND MOE GOT 500 CASES OF WHISKEY

New York, Feb. 13.—Izzy Einstein and Moe Smith, indefatigable sleuths of the prohibition department, today confiscated 500 cases of Scotch whiskey away from two A-La-Mode delicatessen stores in Madison avenue.

The gilded neck of a bottle, protruding from a beribboned basket of fruit in the arms of a young lady was the clue for the agents.

Izzy and Moe, whose successful disguises have included those of gravediggers, jazz musicians, negro, man-about-town, and even that of prohibition agent, donned bibbed white aprons put pencils over their left ears, and posed themselves in front of the Vanderbilt Fruit and Grocery Company.

"Alright to bring this stuff in?" queried Murphy as he backed his truck to the curb.

"Sure," said Izzy.

"Thought I'd be careful," explained Murphy. "Heard there was some prohibition agents around."

"There were," spoke up Moe, "but they's gone."

As Murphy was carrying the second case into the shop, Izzy and Moe broke the news. Murphy's arrest was followed by investigations which, according to prohibition agents, disclosed rear rooms of both delicatessens piled high with spirituous bottled goods.

NO REAL DISTRESS IN THE WEST OF IRELAND

Dublin, Feb. 13—(By the A. P.)—In the Dail Eireann today Tom Johnson, opposition leader, raised the question of distress in the west of Ireland, declaring that special correspondents by international propaganda were spreading exaggerated and unjustified reports of conditions. He assured the government of support in its measures and of a special vote if one were needed.

Patrick Hogan, minister of agriculture, said there was no abnormal distress this year. There was always distress in those districts, and this year conditions in some areas were worse than last, and in some were better. There was no failure of potatoes except in limited areas.

HIGH LIMIT STUD POKER AT ATLANTA PENITENTIARY

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 13.—(By The A. P.)—Description of stud poker games with a fifty dollar limit, with wealthy bootleggers serving sentences in the Atlanta federal penitentiary as participants, and statements of the defense that it intended to show that a chaplain at the institution was the "ringleader" in a plot to sell "soft jobs" to prisoners, were the principal developments today in the trial of A. E. Sartain, and L. J. Fletcher, formerly officials of the prison and Laurence Riehl, Columbus, Ohio.

Strain who was warden of the prison, Fletcher his deputy, and Riehl, a visitor last year in the warden's home, presented the first witnesses in their defense today, the government having rested yesterday. Father Thomas P. Hayden, former prison chaplain, had testified, as a government witness, that he participated in a conspiracy to received $10,500 in bribe money from several Savannah men, convicted in the "rum ring" exposure in that city in 1922, for which they were to be given "easy" assignments in the prison. Fletcher, Sartain and Riehl were the other conspirators, the prosecution charges.

In outlining the case to the jury, the defense stated it intended to show that Hayden alone received bribe money, and through two witnesses it attempted to develop testimony of deals the chaplain was alleged to have made, but the court ruled it could not be admitted.

Clem Herbes, Cincinnati, Ohio, referred to as a member of the "George Remus gang" who served a sentence at the prison, for conspiracy and attempted bribery, stated he had been assigned to Father Hayden's quarters after the latter had asked him if he wanted the place. Sartain and Fletcher were never paid any bribes by him, he said.

On cross examination Herbes declared he had not been guilty of any attempted bribery charge—involving an alleged offer of $5000,000 to a director of prohibition agents.

MORE CRIME IN THIS COUNTRY THAN EVER

New Haven, Feb. 13—William J. Burns, former chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, speaking at a chamber of commerce meeting here today, said that "there never has been a time when there was so much crime in this country" declaring that "an avalanche of lawlessness is weeping over the nation and crime is rampant everywhere."

He said that in his judgment an effective remedy for this situation is a more strict enforcement of the criminal laws of the country. He called upon his auditors, as citizens, to give their support to fearless officers of the law and to those charged with the administration of the law "so that the criminal, no matter what his station in life, may removed from society which he harms by his presence."

Declaring that hundreds of millions of dollars annually are taken from honest people and put into the pockets of stock swindlers, he said that some agency such as a chamber of commerce or other civic body in every city should be placed in a position to know when frauds are undertaken and be ready to warn the people of the community against them.

The speaker referred to the inability of the bureau of investigation to arrest these swindlers unless they used the mails in their efforts to defraud.

COOLIDGE REQUESTS $50,000 TO REPAIR WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Feb. 13.—Request was sent to the house today by President Coolidge for an appropriation of $50,000 for repair work on the White House roof and upper story.

Warning was issued two years ago by the superintendent of federal buildings and grounds in Washington that the upper story or attic section of the White House had developed into a fire trap and had made the mansion unsafe because of setting of the ancient timbers with an accompanying strain on electric wiring and plumbing. The work will be done during the coming summer if the appropriation is granted and will not interfere with the use of the mansion.

ATTEMPTED TO ESCAPE FROM N. H. COUNTY JAIL

New Haven, Feb. 13. — Carleton Sarles, awaiting trial in the criminal superior court charged with the theft of automobiles, made an attempt to escape from the county jail yesterday, it became known today. He picked the cement about the lock of his cell door and was able to slip the catch. While awaiting a chance to get out of the corridor, however, he was discovered by a guard and then placed in solitary confinement.

Highway in Vermont 7 Feet Under Water

Springfield, Vt., Feb. 13.—Arteries of travel leading from Springfield to the outside world were cut off as the waters of the Black river, swollen by the recent thaw and rains, covered highways and railroad tracks many feet deep. No mail has been received here since early Thursday night. Motor traffic is at a standstill.

On the road to Charlestown, N. H., the nearest rail point, and connected with Springfield by trolley, the water was seven feet over the highway and the tracks of the Terminal Railway company, and late today was still rising.

An ice jam in the Connecticut river below Charlestown was damming up water which is threatening several isolated farm houses. Occupants of the farms will be forced to vacate, it is believed, unless efforts to dynamite the jam prove successful.

The thaw, which began here last Saturday afternoon, was said to have broken all records for fifty years for duration.

ICE JAM IN MERRIMACK RIVER NEAR CONCORD

Concord, N. H., Feb. 13.—Rising waters in this region, swelled by the thaw and rain of the past few days, took a toll of one life when Peter Silver, Boston and Maine railroad bridge worker, assisting in operations to strengthen the West Canaan bridge, fell into the Indian river tonight. A bad ice jam in the Merrimack, four miles north of Concord, below Sewall's Falls, caused serious concern tonight. Below the jam are the twin bridges at Pennacook and a long railroad bridge.

Railroad traffic was suspended on the Bristol division of the Boston & Maine through the Pemigewassett valley and it was said that no trains would be run tomorrow. On the southern division of the B. & M. which is still in operation, watchers guarded every railroad bridge threatened by the breaking of ice jams and the downward rush of the outgoing ice.

Street car traffic ceased in Concerod at 5 o'clock this afternoon when the rise of the water at Franklin near the source of the Merrimack, put the power house there out of commission. Foundations of numerous high tension wire poles have been weakened by the floods, it was said.

Near Franklin the water from the Merrimack was said to have risen above the tops of fences at one point along the highway.

Silver, the bridge worker drowned in Indian river, was a resident of St. Johnsbury, Vt. His body was not recovered. A force of men had been rushed to the bridge today. A railroad bridge at this point was washed away in a similar flood in 1896.

A factory near the junction of the Contoocook and the Merrimack was forced to close down today as a result of the flood water

Had Recently Been Appointed Bulgarian Minister to the United States.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 13.—(By The A. P.)—Professor Nicola Mileff, who recently was appointed Bulgarian minister to the United States, was assassinated here this evening.

A dispatch from Sofia last Saturday said the Bulgarian foreign office had been notified from Washington that Professor Mileff would be acceptable as Bulgarian minister to the United States. He was to have succeeded Stephan Panaretoff.

$1,000,000 SUIT CHARGES THE MISAPPROPRIATION OF PLOT

New York, Feb. 13—Suit for $1,000,000 was brought by Abraham P. Waxman today against Channing Pollock, playwright, and Arch and Edgar Selwyn, producers, on allegations that Pollock, in writing "The Fool," misappropriated the plot of a play written by Waxman.

Citing that "The Fool," has made more than $1,000,000 on the stage and $150,000 more in movies, Waxman asks the federal court to enjoin further presentation of the play and to order an accounting of its financial career.

Waxman, now a publicity man, alleges that he wrote the plot of "The Fool," in 1910 and copyrighted it under the title "Soldiers of the Common Good, or the Second Coming," between 1912 and 1922, he says the Selwyns contracted with Pollock to produce this play under the title, "The Fool."

As evidence that his play was the basis of the one successfully produced, Waxman cites that Pollock issued a booklet in which he said his inspiration for "The Fool," came to him 10 years earlier, or, according to Waxman, at about the time Pollock first saw Waxman's piece.

ADVERTISING CUTS COSTS

Speaking before a Boston organization recently the head of an advertising agency was able to send home the argument in behalf of advertising. He said:

"The problem of advertising is modern selling, and this mission is accomplished through the medium of the printed word and the work of salesmen. The result of both is distribution and with proper distribution the sales to the customer, which is the ultimate object sought, is achieved. The manufacturer might eliminate printed salesmanship, but he could not eliminate its cost because he would have to multiply his sales force many times over in order to accomplish the same results in the same time. The use of printed salesmanship, properly applied reduces selling cost and does not increase it. It is reasonable to assume that goods made in large quantities can be made cheaper than those made in small quantities. Advertising enables manufacturers to reach and talk to millions of people in one day."

It is a statement of the old story in a new way, a reiteration of established facts. Advertising is a business stimulant and in Norwich and vicinity The Bulletin thoroughly covers the field.

GIRLS SHOULD BE TRAINED TO CARE FOR THEMSELVES

New York, Feb. 13.—Women cannot take the places of men in the business world, Mrs. William Laimbeer, society matron, who is to become head of a women's department of the National City Bank after 12 years' experience said today.

"Men are all right," she added. "I worry little about women's rights, never vote and am not interested in politics. Women get what they are worth in business."

She was reminded that men have been saying woman's place was in the home.

"For most women, it probably is," she answered. "But there are places for those who are compelled to make their own way and for those with an aptitude for special work. Besides, no girl's future is secure and every girl should be trained to care for herself if necessary.

"I think it gives women self-respect to earn their own living. It makes them better wives, happier mothers."

Mrs. Laimbeer entered business after her husband's death. At her desk she still appears more as the hostess than the business executive. She wears a string of pearls, parts her wavy auburn hair in the middle and knots it behind. Her new job will be mainly to advise women about their financial problems.

BODY OF J. KNIGHT BACON RECOVERED FROM RIVER

Stratford, Feb. 13.—The body of J. Knight Bacon, of Bridgeport was recovered from the Housatonic river by Patrolman Fred Donaldson of the Stratford police at 6.30 o'clock tonight. He had been missing since November 12, 1924.

A visiting card and club papers from the Elks established the identity of Bacon, who was an engineer and a lieutenant commander in the navy during the war. Breaking of the ice during the recent rains was responsible for bringing to the surface of Bacon's body. It was found floating face downward in the river near the railroad bridge which spans the Housatonic between Stratford and Devon.

PANEGYRIC BY SEC'Y HUGHES ON THE LIFE OF ELIHU ROOT

Delivered at a Dinner to Mr. Root on the Occasion of the 80th Anniversary of His Birth—Speaker Recounted Events in the Career of Mr. Root and Bestowed Upon Him a Place "In Our Hall of Illustrious Men"—Summarizing the Achievements of Mr. Root, Sec'y Hughes Declared That They Reflected a Life of "Extraordinary Opportunity Asdequately Met."

New York, Feb. 13.—Secretary of State Hughes tonight elevated Elihu Root to "the American nobility" placing him "in our hall of illustrious men, who hold the only patent of nobility in this republic, that of worth of character, distinction of attainment and pre-eminence in service. "This," said Mr. Hughes, "is the nearest approach that we can make in this country to the gift of an earldom."

Secretary Hughes delivered his tribute as the principal speaker at a dinner to Mr. Root at the historic Union League Club, of which the former cabinet member twice was president. The occasion was the 80th anniversary of Mr. Root's birth, which falls on Sunday, and men high in the public life of the state and nation gathered to acclaim his services "to his country, to international justice, to the republican party and the Union League Club."

In addition to Mr. Hughes those who spoke were: Solicitor General Beck, United States Senator Wadsworth, former New York state Governors Odell, Miller and Whitman and former Senator William M. Calder, president of the Union League club.

Mr. Hughes explained that he paid tribute to Mr. Root not only as an admirer of the achievements, but as a friend of 42 years' standing. From the time Mr. Root was United States district attorney for the southern district of New York to the present day, said the secretary, he had "displayed a genius for statecraft as distinct as that of the most eminent painter, sculptor or poet, for his art."

Referring to the statement of Socrates that "It is pleasant to grow old with good health and a good friend," Mr. Hughes said of Mr. Root:

"But it is best to grow old, not only with health and friends, but with memories of the worthiest actions. We greet one tonight who has all the blessings that age can win and hold."

Then he sketched briefly the high lights of Mr. Root's career, speaking first of his services to his native state, New York, characterising him as "great citizen of the commonwealth." Mr. Root's work as a member of the state's constitutional convention of 1894, in which he reconstructed New York's judicial organization.

He also commented on Mr. Root's service with the 1915 state constitutional convention which, he said, made it known that "his is the unquenchable zeal of the reformer held in control by a supreme practical judgment."

"In his service to this country," continued the secretary, "he has been true to the highest ideal of his profession and there could be no higher praise than that. * * * He had the work of applying to some ten millions of people in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines the principles of American liberty. You will find in his instructions to the military governor of Cuba in February, 1901, the formulation of our relations to Cuba which were afterwards embodies in what is called the Platt amendment. You will find in his reports the explication of the principles to be applied in Porto Rico and the Philippines and the foundations of whatever successful administration we have in these islands.

"Mr. Root has one of those rare equipments which would make him pre-eminent in any office, executive legislative or judicial. He would have made a great president, a chief justice of highest distinction, as he was a conspicuously able administrator In the senate, by the dignity, worth and eloquence of his utterances, he recalled its most illustrious days.

"It is, however, in the international sphere that he has rendered the most notable service. He became secretary of state under President Roosevelt. It is no disparagement of that dynamic personality to say that Roosevelt needed Root. Roosevelt admired and trusted Root, and Root admired and admonished Roosevelt."

Mr. Hughes cited Mr. Root's visit to South America, where he enunciated the principles "which must ever guide us in our relations with the Latin-American republics, his adjustment of the school controversy with Japan and the "gentlemen's agreement" on Japanese immigration; he told of Mr. Root's instructions to American delegates to the second peace conference at The Hague, and of reform in the American consular service. He continued:

"But Mr. Root has rendered even greater service in the international field since his retirement from office. * * * If you ask me what I considered to be the crown of his endeavor, I should say it was his skill in cutting through the entanglements which stood in the way of the establishment of a permanent court of international justice. His suggestion as to the method of selecting judges made that court possible, and this successful endeavor in the interest of international peace through promoting the reign of law will ever enshrine his memory."

ACTRES LILLIAN GISH FIGURES IN LEGAL CASE

New York, Feb. 13.—Counsel for Lillian Gish, motion picture star, asserted in court today that the actress will never take part in another picture if she can continue her career is to complete an alleged contract with Charles H. Duell, Inc.

Federal Judge Goddard reserved decision in the proceedings brought by the Duell company to restrain Miss Gish from breaking the agreement and to prevent her making any other pictures until the terms of the agreement have been fulfilled. Briefs were ordered filed by both sides before Feb. 24.

Max D. Steuer, Miss Gish's lawyer, characterized Duell as a "double scoundrel" on the ground that he said the contract bound the actress for 28 pictures, wheheas it left the producer free to terminate the agreement at any time and obligated him to the production of only one picture. He said that Miss Gish had lost at least $120,000 by the contract.

Duell says in his affidavit he was engaged to marry Miss Gish at the time the contract was made, Mr. Steuer said. "This is manifestly absurd since Duell was married at the time. Should Miss Gish continue to work for a man who has shattered the record of this court with a foul slander?"

TEN ARRESTS OF TAXICAB DRIVERS IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 13.—In a prearranged city-wide drive to round up criminals believed to be operating as taxicab chauffeurs, 5,000 policemen or extra duty halted every cab within sight at 5 o'clock this afternoon and inspected the driver's credentials.

In the first few minutes of the campaign, 10 arrests were made and the police expected that the number would be greatly increased as the special forces thrown against the bogus taxi men continued their advance.

In order that gunmen and robbers believed to be "doubling" as honest taxi drivers might not be informed of the campaign the greatest secrecy was maintained by police requests were sent to all newspapers not to use anything on the story until the campaign was well under way, and were everywhere complied with.

The extra police were cautioned not to tie up traffic with their whole sale inspections and at congested corners such as Fifth avenue and 42nd street cars with passengers were not halted. At other places, however, both empty and occupied cabs were ordered to the curb while police inspected drivers credentials.

Inspection of each car occupied about five minutes. In each instance where licenses were regular a ticker to that effect was pasted on the cab windshield to notify other policemen that the vehicle had been inspected and passed.

It was said at police headquarters that preparations for the campaign have been under way since the fatal shooting of Dennis J. Kenny, son of a wealthy contractor and nephew of Honorary Chief Edward K. Kenney, who was shot by John Leventino, a taxicab driver who was a former criminal.

Kenny died last night.

Miss Anna McCarthy, who was struck by the eastern Connecticut legislative special train, at the Bridge street railroad crossing at 5.17 o'clock Thursday afternoon, was placed on the dangerous list at St. Joseph's hospital following an examination of her injuries. Her left knee was fractured, five ribs are also fractured and the lacerations on her face were termed severe. Several teeth are broken. It was feared Thursday night that her skull was fractured, but X-ray pictures disclosed Friday afternoon that such a condition did not exist, and it paved the way for new hopes that care and time will bring about her complete recovery.

HEARING ON JITNEY LINE TO LEBANON CENTER

Willimantic, Feb. 13.—Four women and about thirty men, residents of Windham Center, Hyde's Corners and Lebanon, attended the hearing of the public utilities commission held in the town building here Friday forenoon to act on the petition of Charles P. Cahill of Hartford to run a jitney line between this city and Lebanon Center via Windham Center, South Windham, Hyde's Corners and Franklin.

It was stated that the name of Frank M. Lynch of this city, which had previously appeared as one of the petitioners, had been withdrawn.

At the hearing C. C. Elwell of the commission presided. Louis Isakson, superintendent of the jitney department of the commission, also attended.

Attorney Thomas J. Kelley appeared in the interests of Mr. Cahill and emphasized the fact that the proposed line would not in any way offer competition with the railroad or trolley lines running in that direction. Among those who spoke in favor of the line were Acting Mayor George W. Hickey, First Selectman Russell A. Andrews, Second Selectman Charles Larrabee, the latter a resident of Windham Center, Rev. W. C. Norris, representing the Willimantic Chamber of Commerce, Rev. E. P. Nye and Arthur C. Williams of Lebanon.

Mr. Nye said that his town was on a dry deck and had but very few facilities of travel other than privately automobiles. He believed that a jitney line giving good service would be a great boon to Lebanon, and would also have a telling effect on mercantile business in Willimantic.

The opposition came from Samuel Anderson, representative of the Norwich and New London division of the Connecticut company, which operates a trolley line to this city and on through to South Coventry; from E. J. Guthrie, superintendent of the southern division of the Central Vermont railway, and Harry Moseley of Scotland.

Mr. Moseley operates the star route mail car between Scotland and Willimantic via Windham Center and he stated that the passengers which he accommodated on his two daily round trips in the forenoon and afternoon were a material help to his income. He charges 25c per passenger from Windham to this city. A standing vote was taken and the last three men mentioned were the only ones to vote against the proposition. The count in favor showed: Willimantic 15, Windham Center 8, and Lebanon 6, inclusive of the remainder of the audience.

Mr. Anderson, for the trolley company, stated that he foresaw competition, especially from South Windham. The argument against this was twofold, namely, that the jitney price would be 25c as against an 8 1-4c trolley fare, and that the jitney would take considerably longer time to reach here, having to go through Windham Center. Supt. E. J. Guthrie made it known that he was appearing in opposition to any form of passenger competition along the line of the Central Vermont railway and, basing his statements on figures, he showed how the encroachment of automobiles had brought about the downward trend of the railroads. He believed that a jitney line to Lebanon would tend to further hamper the passenger business over the line.

He explained how the service in that direction had been curtailed to one train and one unit car at the present time, when four trains were running a few years ago. Asked by Commissioner Elwell why the railroads stuck so faithfully to a dying proposition, and did not themselves establish bus lines, Mr. Guthrie stated that that question was now under consideration and that he believed within a few years trucks and automobile busses would be operated over the highways by railroads. He was further asked if he believed that when the railroad companies did finally decide to adopt that plan it would be fair to legislate the present jitney concerns out of business.

Mr. Cahill was then questioned concerning his supply of cars which he intended to operate over the route. He stated that he had at his command one 18-passenger Packard, a 12-passenger Buick and six other public service cars. The route is approximately 10 miles and would be covered in 35 minutes. The total fare over the route would be 50 cents, and to intermediate points the charge would be at the rate of 5 cents a mile. To Windham Center, three miles distant from Willimantic, the charge would be 15 cents; to South Windham, four miles, 25 cents; to Hyde's Corner, seven miles, 35 cents; to Lebanon, 10 miles, 50 cents. Returning, the mileage would be: Hyde's Corner, 15 cents; South Windham, six miles, 30 cents; Windham Center, seven miles, 35 cents; Willimantic, 10 miles, 50 cents. The schedule would include six round trips daily, with special trips late at night on Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Leaving time from Willimantic would be 7.15 and 9.15 a. m., 12 m., 3, 6 and 9 p. m. Leaving Lebanon, 8.10 a. m., 1, 4, 7 and 10 p. m.

JEWETT CITY

Miss Grace Olin, Miss Mabel Wilcox and Mrs. J. H. Tracy arranged one of the pleasantest Valentine parties for Dorcas circle of the King's Daughters, held on the evening of Lincoln's birthday at the home of Miss S. E. Adams. The living room walls were covered with "I Love You" hearts of various designs and sizes, a very large one being suspended from the chandelier. A picture of Lincoln and an American flag were upon the mantel. Before the fireplace hung a large red heart which later the leader, Miss M. A. Burdick, opened and carried to each one present, who found inside a flower valentine favor which each one read aloud and then wore as an ornament. Mrs. A. H. Anthony read A Tribute of Lincoln for the opening number on the program. Mrs. J. H. Tracy read An Old Sweetheart of Mine an Poppin' Corn. Mrs. Ella Geer read Adventures of an Old Maid and She Goes to the Dentist. Mrs. E. H. Hiscox read Her Valentine and My Sweetheart. Interspersed between the readings were Victrola selections appropriate for Valentine day. A Broken Heart contest resulted in a prize for Mrs. Anna Cummings. In the contest of hidden words, each one of which began with the letter Mrs. Norman Parkhurst took the prize as she also did in the crossword puzzle. The bow and arrow shooting contest was won by Mrs. A. C. Burdick. This latter game was the cause of much laughter and several narrow escapes. The refreshments were very dainty. Valentine aprons were worn by the committee and Valentine napkins were passed with candy hearts on lace-decorated plates. Frosted cupcakes adorned with hearts, heart-shaped sandwiches and cookies, with punch, were served. The committee spared no time or work to make the evening one of enjoyment for the twenty-six present.

It was Amateur night Thursday evening at Finn's opera house for the entertainment of a large and appreciative audience. The first number was a singing act by Misses Segal and Mondor. The next act was a series of acrobatic stunts by Theodore Raill. This preceded a patriotic recitation by Ernest Loranger, which was followed by Messrs. Takmon and Golas, impersonating the famous Gallagher and Shean burlesque. A comedy sketch was presented by Kasper and Lamarine. The next number, and the one which carried off first honors, was harmonica selections by George Howes. A burlesque boxing bout was put on by Messrs. Mondor and Kumon. The last act, also the one which took second honors, was by Misses Segal and Mondor, a little sketch entitled "A Scene from Life." The management plans to run another Amateur night at an early date.

Twelve years ago Thursday night Officer Patrick B. Driscoll was fatally wounded when shot while endeavoring to frustrate the attempts of yeggmes to rob the Jewett City postoffice. His death occurred a few days later at the Backus hospital, Norwich. No definite clue was ever obtained during the attempts to round up his murderers. Widespread search was made, with a $1,000 reward offered, but without avail.

Many went to the Quinebaug bridge Friday morning to see the high water. From six to seven feet above normal all day, there was a remarkable difference as compared with a few weeks ago, when there was no moving stream, until the discharge from the Aspinook wheels liberated the draft from the pond above the mill. It is worth while for the present generation to visit Shipman's grove, there to see the scarred trunks of the trees, 100 feet from the present high water line. In the days before the big Aspinook dam, millions of tons of ice, often 18 inches thick, were brought down the Quinebaug on the high water of the spring freshets. Narrow places backed up the river, and the grove was a rushing torrent. Sturdy must then be the tree to withstand the battering of the heavy cakes of ice hurled against them by the flood at racehorse speed.

A whist and dance under the auspices of Very Rev. Michael McCabe council, K. of C., was held in Rioux hall Wednesday evening. There were twenty-five tables of whist. The first women's prize went to Teresa Foley, the second to Doris Burr, and the consolation award to Josephine Ambot. The first men's prize was taken by Frank Ford, the second by Louis Morey and the consolation award was given Louis Cyr. Morey's orchestra furnished music for dancing.

Undaunted lodge, No. 34, K. of P., officers were installed by D. D. G. C. Joshua Grenstein and his staff from Norwich Thursday evening. The officers are: Jacob Wechsler, C. C.; Wesley Webster, V. C.; James Legros, P.; S. A. Thompson, M. of W.; William McCluggage, K. R. S.; Bernard Wechsler, M. A.; L. D. Howe, M. F.; Solomon Wechsler, M. E.; Albert Franklin, I. G.; Benjamin Schliefer, O. G. A program followed the work during which Herbert Phillips of Plainfield played a violin solo and Curtis Phillips of Plainfield played a piano solo. William MacFarland also gave a piano solo. There were several speeches. Sandwiches, ice cream and coffee were served.

F. H. Gilbert, a youthful gentleman of 21 years, or more, was surprised to find at the tea table in his home Thursday night a party of friends who had come to help him celebrate his birthday. They were Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Cheney, Mrs. H. T. Jeffers, Gladys, Marian and Grace Jeffers, Mrs. Grace Webster, Augustus Greenwood and Tyler Gilbert. They presented the young man a smoking jacket and a box of cigars. Whist was played and radio concerts were heard during the evening. In the whist, Mrs. Webster received a bud vase as first prize and Mrs. Jeffers a hyacinth bulb as the consolation. Mr. Cheney received an ash try for first honors and Mr. Greenwood a package of chocolate cigarettes as the consolation award. A birthday cake with 21 candles betrayed Mr. Gilbert's age, which has been a profound secret up to this.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Congregational church met at the home of Mrs. Abraham Zegeer Thursday afternoon, the vice president, Miss S. K. Adams, presiding. Mrs. C. D. Wolfe read a chapter from the study book and an article was read from The American Missionary. It was voted to accept the invitation of the Baptist society to meet with them on the 27th for the annual day of prayer. It was planned to sell candy at a supper to be held in the church later.

But one case was tried Friday morning in the Third District court before Judge Michael J. Turano, that of state, Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown of Westerly, compl't vs. Edwin S. Burdick charged with operation of an automobile without proper registration. The defendant, aged 58, was placed on the stand and Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., was allowed by Judge Turano to amend the complaint to read the operation of an automobile without first receiving an operator's license. The defendant stated that he was born and brought up in Rhode Island although he worked in Connecticut and that he had never had a R. I. license. The fact that he was without license became known Feb. 10th when he parked a car in the wrong place on High street.

Joseph Pickering, 35, was presented on the complaint that Feb. 1st he kept open a victualing house without a license. The defendant told the court that he thought an extension of time should be allowed him, as he had an application ready for signature. A plea of not guilty was entered and the case was continued until next Friday. Warned by Town Solicitor Ferguson that if he continued to run a restaurant he would be arrested, Mr. Pickering said the place was run as a jitney office and he would not operate the restaurant. The case was set down for trial Feb. 20 with bail $200 and the accused was released on his own recognizance.

Judgment for $85.75 was rendered the plaintiff in the book account case, Alvin Byers vs. Clifton D. Hall.

A special session of Stonington town court was held in the town court room in borough hall Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, before Judge William A. Wilcox, when a number of Pawcatuck juvenile cases were acted upon, also that a person of unsound mind.

Westerly High school students of the late 90's are interested in the favorable report of the Connecticut lecislative bill, introduced by Representative Thomas E. Troland of New London, for a teachers' retirement pension for a former Bulkeley instructor in German, Mrs. Adelheid Moll, who as Frau Moll was at one time a well known member of the faculty of the Westerly High school, when she resided in Westerly.

Stonington Selectman Arthur F. Babcock of Pawcatuck, Westely Red Cross Executive Secretary Lucy M. Crowley of Wequetequock and Miss Irma Hutzler, a representative of the Connecticut Bureau of Child Welfare of the Department of Public Welfare of Connecticut acting under Chapter 307 of the Public Acts of 1921, were in Stonington borough on Friday afternoon, attending a session of the Stonington Town court.

Possibly with the thought that the P. S. Barber Hose company, of Pawcatuck, began its fair Friday night and wishing the department to keep in training, a passerby saw the blaze from a paper fire in the kitchen stove of Robert Keegan in the house of James P. Cunniff on Farley avenue, off Liberty street, and whistle fire alarm was sounded from Box 62, corner Liberty street and Stillman avenue, Friday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock. When the members of the department arrived an indignant woman was found who failed to see the necessity of the alarm, although there was considerable smoke, usually supposed to indicate the presence of fire. The recall was sounded before 4 o'clock.

A special meeting of the officers of the post was held Wednesday evening and many interesting items were discussed. District Deputy Powers announced that Department Commander Callahan of Waterbury has been chosen vice chairman of the national council of administration of the organization.

The members of the local post are also interested in an article that appeared in the latest issue of the V. F. W. magazine relative to the rumored merger of the organization with the American Legion. Due to a misunderstanding it was reported that a merger of the two organizations was imminent, because of a statement made by Gen. John H. Dunn, commander-in-chief, at a recent installation of Legion officers in Boston.

This statement was misconstrued by newspaper reporters, who gave the impression that Gen. Dunn was in favor of the merger. Gen. Dunn corrects this impression with the following statements:

"Such a merger would be impossible. The eligibility requirements of our organization necessitating service on foreign soil before admission as a member would prevent such consolidation.

"I do and have always advocated the utmost co-operation between the organizations in all efforts or activities that can aid ex-service men."

The weather of Wednesday and Thursday with fog and rain made short work of what snow and ice remained but on Thursday afternoon the wind changed and the weather grew steadily colder, with the result that the muddy ground was soon frozen.

Charles Roberts, of New York, was a guest of his sister, Mrs. H. M. Barber, in Pawcatuck, Thursday.

The heavy rain of the week has caused the waters of the Pawcatuck river to rise rapidly. At flood tide a high water mark was reached at the Pawcatuck rived bridge at Broad St. A large oak with spreading branches which came floating down on the high water became caught on the up-stream side of the Pawcatuck end of the bridge and against the Lyric theatre entrance to the Barrows block.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sunday at Y. M. C. A. Special Moving Picture on Abraham Lincoln.

The management of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. has been fortunate in securing for the coming Sunday afternoon unusually fine moving pictures of the great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, which will doubtless attract a large audience. The meeting will be held at 4 o'clock.

Among other things the pictures will portray in strong sentiment, the log cabin birth of the "Son of Democracy," the gentle influence of Lincoln's mother developing the boy who finally became president; there are some rollicking scenes of boy life and homely humor in the pitiful efforts of Abe's father to learn to read and write. The reels will also picture the war story, teaming with suspense and heart action, showing Dave Elkins, son of the preacher, who conducted the service over the grave of Lincoln's mother. He was persuaded to enlist in the confederate army, and is captured, and kills a brutal guard and is sentenced to death; the family of the boy appeals to the president, and in the pathetic scenes that follow, Lincoln gives his answer, which is the typical Lincoln answer that saves the boy. The pictures are such as to make a most lasting impression. These episodes are taken from the Chapin series of the life of Lincoln. Rev. A. N. Foster has kindly consented to make a brief address on Lincoln which will be well worth hearing. Men and women are invited. Boys and girls under 14 are not expected unless accompanied by their parents. Children alone not admitted.

Breed Theater

Janice Meredith, Marion Davies's newest picture, which comes to the Breed theater Sunday for a run of five days, is the most pretentious picture ever made by the Cosmopolitan Corporation, combining a charming love story and a series of dramatic thrills with the most important events in the founding of the American Republic. It is being distributed by Metro-Goldwyn.

For magnitude, for dramatic sweep, for sheer splendor and magnificence of settings and costumes, it surpasses anything heretofore accomplished by Miss Davies. And it is American to the core. Historical authorities on the period of the American Revolution have pronounced it the most authentic picture of its kind ever produced. It is from the famous novel by Paul Leicester Ford.

Janice Meredith, can be called a screen epic of the American Revolution. It embraces the entire Revolutionary era from 1775 to 1783. Such important events as the Boston Tea Party, the Ride of Paul Revere, the Battle of Lexington, Patrick Henry's speech, the Crossing of the Delaware, the Battle of Trenton, the Battle of Yorktown, and surrender of the British; as well as many other incidents in the making of this nation, are all faithfully depicted in this picture.

George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Lafayette, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, Paul Revere and other characters famous in the founding of the nation live again on the screen, together with Lord Cornwallis, Sir William Howe, Colonel Rahl, Major Pitcairn, King Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

More than 7,500 actors, including one of the most notable casts ever assembled on the screen appear in Janice Meredith.

The Pathe news a Van Bibber comedy Hope Hampton in McCall's Colour Fashion news and a cartoon make up the remainder of the bill.

Today's bill consists of Harry Carey in Roaring Rails, Days of 49, the Pathe news and a Sunshine comedy continuous show from 1:30 to 10:30.

Strand Theatre.

"Those Who Judge," a picturization of the famous novel played by an all star cast with Lou Tellegren and Patsy Ruth Miller in the principal roles will be on the screen of the Strand, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The picture will find instant favor with the audience from the first reel to the last as it will prove to be entertainment of the highest quality, with plenty of thrills and suspense in the development of the story.

"Those Who Judge" deals with the consequences that are apt to occur, when one judges too hastily the action of others, and tells the experiences of a fascinating young woman (Patsy Ruth Miller) who comes to a fashionable suburban town to escape a possible scandal in which she has been innocently involved. This picture is bound to attract.

For those who are interested in the manly art "The Fighter's Paradise" will live up to all expectations. The remainder of the Strand programme will consist of "The Riddle Rider" (Sunday night only) and Charley Chaplin "In the Park." Today for the last time, "Lefty Flynn" in "The No Gun-Man," and Helen Chadwick and Lowell Sherman in the Masked Dancer, will be shown continuous from two until ten thirty.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Broadway Theater

For the opening of the Paramount picture, North of 36, at the Broadway theater on Sunday, the management announces that there will be no advance in the usual admission price even though the picture is a big super-special.

The story is an adoption of the novel by Emerson Hough, who wrote Covered Wagon. Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery head the cast in featured roles. Irvin Willat directed.

North of 36 is a gripping pioneer tale of the greatest cattle drive ever made out of Texas in the days that followed the Civil war, 1867, to be exact.

Critics speak of it in the same breath as The Covered Wagon—and you'll agree with them that it's just as fine and entertaining a production.

American: Irvin Willat has achieved the seemingly impossible. He has made a follow-up that is as good as the original and in some respects better. Both Mr. Willat and the Famous Players-Lasky profited by The Covered Wagon by making North of 36 a finer piece of work as to production and detail.

Telegraph: "North of 36 Famous Players own rival to The Covered Wagon opened yesterday at the Rivoli. It is a splendid picture; one I wouldn't hesitate to recommend to any one. There are many scenes of exceeding beauty; the acting throughout is superb; the direction about the best of its kind; at times it moved me deeply."

Mirror: "What the perfect 36 is to the beauty chorus, North of 36 is to the western thriller. This Irwin Willat production written by Emerson Hough

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The Cloud Digger abandoned his publicity campaign against fur-bearing animals smoking cigarettes for the edification of flappers who are more interested in hobbling old gentlemen who have lost a leg through the bursting of a gun while they were out hunting for chickens, to predict Friday that there is a whale of a storm in the offing.

Perhaps the Cloud Digger didn't say that fur-bearing animals smoke cigarettes and that it is reprehensible practice, we can't be sure of that, such a volume of matter comes out of Oneco, but he said something about cigarettes and animals that have fur and about old gentlemen that have lost legs while hunting them with a gun—and that smokers are a nuisance, anyway.

But to get back to the weather prediction. This February storm that is due about the middle of the month is going to be the storm sensation of the winter. The Cloud Digger is not certain as to whether it will be a southerly storm that will bring a deluge of rain, or a northerly storm that will shriek and howl on the wings of the gale as it buries eastern Connecticut beneath a blanket of snow. But it is to be a sockdologer of a storm—one possibly of the heptahexahedral variety—and then some. We shall see what we shall see. The middle of the month is at hand. As the thing stands now, however, one hardly knows whether to wear rubber boots or carry a snow shovel. And it is a bit bothersome to do both.

What might be considered a complex of the modern American mind had an illustration here Friday, and the basis of it was the making of a joke out of the tragedy of Sand Cave out in Kentucky. The excited calling of a man who pointed to a big hole in the Main street paving near the Armington store quickly drew a crowd—to hear him relate to them that someone had started to dig a tunnel there to release Floyd Collins. It wasn't true, of course, for there isn't anyone around here that cares much for the exercise of digging through pavements, anyway. But it makes a somewhat interesting yarn that may be printed as a means of telling the people that fix the state roads that a start for a cave actually has been made in the very center of a trunk line highway and that when it isn't full of water people who drive cars can see it and do not drive into it with a crash and a bang that threatens destruction to them and theirs.

A work train was busy hereabouts Friday distributing new and heavy rails that are to be used in replacements on the main line of the N. Y., N. H., and H., R. R. company through this territory when the coming of spring permits of the work to be undertaken. The rails are to be distributed along the line from a point near Quinebaug lake, about two miles south of Danielson, to a point on the line near Tadpole pond, just north of Jewett City, a distance of about 12 to 14 miles.

Last year the New Haven road put in new and heavier rails from Putnam southward to a point two miles below Danielson. The work will be continued this year, and, it is understood, will be extended from year to year until the high iron is run all the way between New London and Worcester. The new rails weigh about 112 pounds to the yard and replace rails that weigh about 76 pounds to the yard.

In his annual report to the warden and court of burgesses, Chief A. P. Woodward of the borough fire department will include a recommendation that some action be taken that will check the reckless and hindering practice of some automobile drivers in racing their machines to fires ahead of fire apparatus. This nuisance has been complained about from time to time, but with little effect. There are those, in fact, who run their cars over to the central fire station and then dash off as pacemakers ahead of the fire trucks. This helps a lot. Helps to delay the firemen and to increase the danger of accidents. Chief Woodward hopes that the borough officials may find some means, either through the enactment of an ordinance or through appeal to some measure that may have state-wide influence to stop what is nothing more or less than a foolish practice. You have seen Bowser chase a car, haven't you? Well, enough said.

Tonight another splendid basketball team comes to play the Service Battery five. The visitors are none other than Alphi Chi Rho fraternity team of Wesleyan university, Middletown. This team last year won the college fraternity championship and is in the lead again this season for the same honors. It is of interest that Lieut. Gordon J. Gale of the Service Battery team is an alumnus of Wesleyan, so it is likely he will take particular delight, with the aid of his fellow players, in "showing up" the active visitors from the mid-state city. This game should be of the same high class that has characterized the games at the armory all winter.

Danielson women are tendering their services today (Saturday) to make the annual Valentine tea, at Putnam, in the interest fo the Oay Kimball hospital, a success. Various gifts that will be placed on sale by members of the committee were donated by Danielson people desirous of doing something to further the work of an institution that is invaluable to the towns of eastern Windham county.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich will be at the health station in the town hall building from 10 to 12 noon Tuesday next to hold a tuberculosis clinic under the auspices of the Civic federation.

Recently Edward S. Carpenter, an outstanding citizen of Danielson, observed his 87th birthday. Mr. Carpenter is a marvelous example of how to stay young and active and to be able to be hustling about when men many years his junior are sitting retired and twirling their thumbs.

Eggs, on the downward trend, in price for weeks past, have touched sixty cents a dozen, after touching a high level to 85 cents during the late fall season.

Friday the board of relief finished its sessions for the week, but will be in session again three days during the coming week.

A vaudeville bill, added to the picture program, pleased the audiences at the Orpheum theatre Friday afternoon and evening.

Of interest is the fact that Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., possesses two gavels, each of historic interest. One, made of wood taken from the Jonathan Trumbull house at Lebanon, was presented to the chapter by the late Congressman Charles A. Russell. The other, of wood taken from the Danielson homestead, corner of Main and Maple streets, was presented to the chapter by the late Kate Danielson, a descendant of Sarah Williams Danielson, for whom the chapter is named.

Miss Margaret Sullivan will leave this (Saturday) afternoon to spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Ashley P. Mills at Montello, Mass., near Brockton.

The countryside is alive with the spirit that inspires the poultrymen in late winter days. Their talk has to do with baby chicks, incubators, brooders, etc., etc., and promises well for the egg and poultry supply of this town in 1925.

William A. (Bill) Reddy is playing great basketball for the team of which he is a member at Canton; S. C. Mr. Reddy, now in the employ of a construction company that has a southern contract, is one of the fastest basketball players ever turned out by Killingly High school.

Ordinarily it is not good advice to tell one to get into a rut and stay there, but it was the very best of advice for motorists who venture on muddy country roads after the thaw of this week and have visions of getting to their destinations.

Along with reports of those who have seen bluebirds and robins within the past fortnight are stories of a flock of wild geese seen in northward flight and of a skunk ambling around for his first trip out of doors this season.

Miss Elizabeth R. Woodworth will have the members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., at her home for a meeting next Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Mary Medbury Bishop, state registrar, will address the meeting. Mrs. Bishop is a resident of Putnam.

This is St. Valentine's day. It is worthy of comment that pretty valentines as remembrances have come to replace almost altogether the comic and abusive ones in favor years ago, another evidence that people are growing better in some ways, if not in all.

Mildred Nystrom, the little girl who was struck by an automobile while she was crossing Main street two weeks ago, is well on the road to recovery and it is indicated she is not likely to suffer any permanent consequences from her experience.

The Quinebaug river had overflowed the old baseball grounds on the bank of the stream in the rear of the Quinebaug store Friday, but the ice in the stream was holding firm and the danger from its premature breaking up seemed to be past for the time being at least.

THE LATE GEORGE E. PRENTICE NORWICH BANK DIRECTOR

(Special to the Bulletin)

Danielson, Feb. 13—In the death of George E. Prentice at his home, 106 South Main street, suddenly, Friday morning at 4.15, Danielson lost a citizen who had spent practically all of his life here, and in that lifetime had achieved countless enduring friendships. Mr. Prentice had been ill for about a year and a half, having suffered a shock in 1923, but he had been able to be about more or less and within the past two weeks was out for a motor trip through the surrounding country and had regularly received visitors up to within a few days. Announcement of his death came as a decided surprise to all who knew him.

George Ephriham Prentice was born in Wauregan, June 14, 1860, a son of Ephriam and Rachel Wilson Prentice. Following the completion of his education he engaged in the roller covering business and established for himself a reputation as a manufacturer rating with the best in his occupation in the mill territory of New England. For many years Mr. Prentice maintained manufacturing plants in Danielson and in Norwich. Mr. Prentice was particular about the quality and workmanship of his products and never allowed them to be other than of the highest standard. He was an expert in his line and a machinist of unusual ability. About ten years ago Mr. Prentice disposed of his manufacturing interests and retired. He has continued to live at the splendidly situated Prentice home on the West Side and has devoted himself to his family and their interests.

As a citizen Mr. Prentice had through the years and because of his many attractive characteristics built up a host of friendships. Some of his close friends recalled Friday his interest in the development of the Riverside Driving Park here and of an inherent love of thoroughbred horses and the pleasure that he derived from owning and driving fine teams. His love of horses was in a measure an indication of his love of all fine things. Generous toward all worthy projects, possessed of a keen sense of humor, devoid of the petty faults of men, he was a man whose friendship grew in value as the years went on. His passing will bring sorrow to many hearts.

At Norwich September 29, 1908, Mr. Prentice was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Russ, who survives him, with three children, George Russ Prentice, Elizabeth Beach Prentice and John Wheeler Prentice, all of Danielson. Mr. Prentice also leaves a sister, Miss Ellen M. Prentice, who has made her home with her brother for many years.

Mr. Prentice, who was identified with various business interests aside from his roller covering business prior to his retirement, was a director of the Uncas National bank of Norwich, an incorporator of the Brooklyn Savings bank of Danielson and a member of the Bohemian club of this place.

PUTNAM

George E. Dresser has presented the Gary school a steel engraving of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Dresser secured this excellent picture some years ago and gave it to G. Harold Gilpatric. It was hung on the walls of the First National bank until the bank was closed last fall. Since then Mr. Dresser purchased the picture from Mr. Coffin, receiver of the bank. In his younger days Mr. Dresser attended the Gary school and the many letters he has received from the pupils expressing appreciation of the gift are a great satisfaction to him.

George A. Pettis, who lives on the River road, and was 90 last December, has the distinction of being one of the few who have lived in Putnam continuously for nearly 90 years. Mr. Pettis is able to come to town nearly every day. He is a property owner in the town of Putnam. He is now contemplating a trip to California.

Frank E. Davenport of Harrisburg, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Davenport, formerly of Pomfret, has again been chosen chairman of the Harrisburg chamber of commerce cruise. This is the annual trip that the members of the Harrisburg chamber of commerce make. It has not yet been invited by the officials of the Canadian National Exposition or across the Great Lakes, as has been suggested by many of the members. President Dean of the chamber said that the chamber wanted Mr. Davenport because he is considered the most competent man for the job. Davenport was chairman for the last year's New England trip and was chairman of the planning committee in 1923, when the cruise went south. President Dean considers that his experience will be valuable for the 1925 trip.

The lot owned by John T. and Mary Brayton, situated just west of Hoyle's crossing, in the southern part of the town has been sold to Maran Bush of this city. Mr. Bush is employed at the Country club and expects in the near future to build on his newly acquired land.

Mrs. Edward L. Boomer has returned from a visit with relatives and friends at Winsted, Mass.

Word has been received from Mrs. Mary L. Young, formerly of Putnam, telling of her safe arrival in San Jose, Cal., after an enjoyable trip. Mrs. Young is pleased with the climate, reports that there is plenty of green grass and that flowers are in bloom.

The W. C. T. U. is to meet at the home of Mrs. George Law, at Brandy Hill, East Thompson, Thursday afternoon, February 19th at 2 o'clock. The topic for the afternoon will be Frances Willard. The hostesses are Mrs. Myrtice Law, Mrs. Mary Peterson and Mrs. Mary Frawly.

The Happy Hour club met with Mrs. Charles A. Thayer at her home on Fremont street Friday afternoon. Mrs. Adfer Towne and Mrs. Thayer were the hostesses.

Before the judiciary committee of the generayl assembly at Hartford Thursday there was a hearing on the proposed legislation affecting the water supplies of cities of the state. Putnam, which controls its own water supply with Roseland lake as the source, was represented by Charles L. Torrey, corporation counsel, and C. D. Sharpe, superintendent of the water department. The right of the state health authorities to prohibit bathing in Roseland lake, to which the owners of summer camps on the lake, have filed protests, was brought up John Buckley of Union and Charles Phelpjs of Rockville appeared for them.

Herbert W. Bownen of Woodstock, counsel for the trustees of Roseland park, submitted the form of a bill accompanied by a brief designed to safeguard the owners of natural bdies of water in the riparian rights, is well as the rights of the state and of water companies.

It is a matter in which Putnam, of course, is vitally interested. In a statement to the committee, Mr. Torrey said that it would be a financial impossibility for the city of Putnam to own the land which contains its water supply. Senator Child introduced Mr. Bowen's bill accompanied by his brief as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Judiciary Committee:

The bill that is before you, owing to the courtesy of his excellency, Governor Trumbull, regarding bathing, boating and fishing in natural lakes and ponds provides for the exercise of all legal and legitimate rights by riparian owners, by water companies, and by the state.

To deny the riparian owners their rights, or the water companies their rights, or the state its rights, would not be to the interest of the people; for to do so would be grossly inconsistent with the principles on which free government is founded.

The Constitution of the United States and the constitutions of all the states in the Union are primarily concerned with the protection of rights and with the powers and duties of all executive, administrative and judicial officials in relation thereto and in connection therewith.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding as what are the rights of our people and the duties and powers of our officials, the national and state constitutions lay down certain general definitions and precepts, and mandates, leaving to the congress of the United States, and to the legislatures of the various states, the authority to make specific laws in conformity therewith, but wisely providing that in case of conflict of authority the United States Constitution shall be supreme over any state constitution or state law.

Of all the provisions of the United States Constitution that are mandatory, none is more empnatic than the one that ordains that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation.

Naturally, we should expect that some clear and concise laws should have been embodied in our state laws regarding the rights of riparian owners, consistent with that mandatory clause of the United States Constitution; but that is not exactly the case: for the provisions of our state laws regarding riparian rights are so obscure that they permit interpretations of them by our officials, water companies and riparian owners. At all events, their expressed views have been, and are, conflicting. To remedy this defect I have ventured to frame a bill and I now respectfully urge you to favor it. It seems to me to protect, keep, those general principles of law in mind, and always should support the rights of all persons concerned, and to give the public clearly to understand just how far the state authorities may go in their laudable efforts to preserve our waters from pollution. Once the public believes that their rights to natural lakes and ponds will not be taken away from them, they will be more willing to co-operate with the state officials in doing everything that is proper to aid the state officials, and they will not be fearful, as they are now, that state interference may result in state encroachment on their rights. What tends to augment the spirit of opposition on the part of the people to state encroachment is the feeling that the water companies want to get everything, or even something for nothing, and that they use all their influence to incite state officials to curtail the rights of the public and thereby, practically, hand over to the water companies the rights thus curtailed without requiring the water companies to pay just compensation.

By a very few acts of encroachment of that kind natural lakes and ponds could be converted into reservoirs of great value to the water companies, and at no cost to them. A successful operation of that kind would be, of course, a clear case of confiscation, and confiscation is unbridled lawlessness.

If I have refrained from mentioning specific interests—such as for instance as those of Roseland park of Woodstock, of which I am a trustee—I have done so in order to lay greater stress on the general principles of law on which not only our property rights but also our form of government, and our very civilization, are based, and there can be no doubt that our people in their daily pursuits, our water companies in all their purposes and aims, and our legislators in framing all our laws, should keep, and are bound to those general principles at any cost.

Mr. Bowen's Bill—No health official or other of the state, and no water company, shall attempt to prevent bathing, boating and fishing in any natural lake or pond before condemnation proceedings have been instituted, and duly completed by giving proper compensation to the riparian owners; but fishing shall be continued to be regulated by the state as heretofore; and proper steps shall continue to be taken by state officials to prevent the pollution of all lakes and ponds so long as those steps do not include prohibiting bathing, boating and fishing in natural lakes and ponds where the right to bathe, boat and fish has been exercised from time immemorial.

FAKE DOCTORS ARE SCORED N ADDRESS BY H. CHENEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Putnam, Feb. 13.—At the weekly meeting and luncheon of Putnam Rotary club, Howell Cheney of Manchester, nationally known silk manufacturer, gave an interesting talk on the proposed legislation to regulate the issuing of certificates to physicians.

Mr. Cheney related the series of events leading up to the grand jury investigation of last year, when licenses of over 300 physicians were ordered revoked. He said that the state had been repeatedly warned that only in establishing a single medical examining board could fake doctors be kept out; but affairs had drifted along for ten or twelve years with no betterment until the discoveries of last year.

Publication of accounts of malpractice in Unionville, Willimantic and Ansonia, came at about the same time as the unearthing of a St. Louis fake doctor mill. From this school doctors without the rudiments of professional training were unloaded upon Connecticut citizens, and because they had been previously coached on how to answer the questions in the examination of this state were able to become practitiononers. From the Middlesex Medical school at Boston came many doctors, who, thought refused licenses in Massachuzetts, had gotten into this state. Also from the school of one Blumitaky, in Hartford, were fake doctors loosed, according to Mr. Cheney.

The grand jury investigation resulted in a recommendation that the licenses of 179 Connecticut practitioners be revoked. All appealed to the superior court. There ex-Governor Holcomb, appointed a superior court referee, denounced the quacks.

Mr. Cheney believed that the matter should be taken out of the hads nof physicians, since they could not work without embarrassment for the exclusion of unskilled imposters, since the howl would go up they were trying to better their own practice, rather than working for the good of the citizenry.

He supported the proposal of creating a medical board of five laymen, to have supervision over examinations in the future, with papers written by experts on various phases of the practice of medicine as their authority.

That a test on basic ability and the essential skill to practice medicine, rather than on a finish and gloss, should be passed by the would-be Connecticut doctor of the future was his contention. The present aim in the science of medicine is toward prevention of disease, rather than cure of ailments. To perpetuate this aim and to keep the citizenry of Connecticut in good heath, physicians of the highest type are necessary.

When a man finds it necessary to boast of the greatness of his ancestors he has reached the limit of his descent.

THE INAUGURATION DECISION.

President Coolidge some time ago let it be known that it was his desire that there should be a simple inauguration ceremony, that there should be an abandonment of the preparations for anything else, that a long parade, great pomp and extravagance were not approved and that the aim should be to practice economy instead of unrestricted outlay.

It means disappointment to some. It is always so when an effort is made to save money. It displeases those who hoped to benefit from the huge crowd which an elaborate inauguration always attracts. It displeases those who had expected to attend the ceremony in the hopes of landing some political appointment. It disconcerts the hawkers, the peddlers and those who had an eye on the public's pocket book as well as those who had an eye on the government expenditures. It does disappoint a certain few, but to the rest of the country it gives thorough satisfaction to know that it has a president who has a keen and consistent regard for their welfare, that he is not disposed to urge economy on some occasions only to disregard such views when personal matters are concerned. It is one more demonstration of his determination to practice what he preaches and to let it be known that when he urges the saving of government funds in the conduct of the nation's affairs he intends that to be all inclusive. He finds no excuse for the wild spending of the people's money for the opening of a new presidential term, and this in particular when there is so widespread a demand for the utilization of government money in such a manner as to permit the reduction of taxation.

Splendor is all right in its place, but it is not accorded a place in the Coolidge list of necessaries, and as the result there will be an outlay of but a few thousand dollars for the inauguration instead of plunging in to the extent of hundreds of thousands, which are needed and can be so well applied in other direction. The country applauds the simple inauguration.

CROSSING ELIMINATION.

When that commission made up of members of both branches of the New York legislature starts on its work of investigating the grade crossing situation in that state, as provided for by the legislature now in session, it will be dealing with no new subject. Grade crossings and their removal are the central figures of an old story. There are many such danger points in the Empire state quite the same as there are in Connecticut. There are some which are much worse than others, and it will undoubtedly be the finding of the commission that while persistent endeavors must be made to overcome the worst of them it will be a long time and involve huge expenditures before the day is reached when there are none.

The present day use of the highways makes the crossing problem a much greater one than a quarter of a century ago. Likewise speed and the laxness concerning personal safety as well as that of others add their emphasis to the situation.

While some plan for the removal of a certain number of crossings each year may be worked out, dependent of course upon the cost of such operations, it seems inevitable that the commission must find that there are at the present time many points which ought to be better protected with signals or lights, and that such warnings, properly heeded, would be of immense benefit in the reduction of the death toll at such points. It cannot be overlooked in connection with such efforts in behalf of greater safety that there are great possibilities of providing it resting in the hands of the very ones for whom crossing elimination is intended.

In too many instances the frightful crossing accidents are entirely unnecessary. Prevention lies not only in more adequate warnings but in a proper regard for self preservation. Whether the commission will touch upon this point there is no way of telling, and the unfortunate part of it is that even if it did there is no certainty that it would get the response that it deserves. The knowledge of crossing dangers is already sufficiently understood by crossing users to get due respect whenever encountered.

EXPLORING SARGASSO SEA.

Out in the Atlantic there is an area, varying in extent and location, according to the wind and currents, covered with floating seaweed and known as the Sargasso sea. As might be expected the condition is such as to cause mariners to avoid it. No doubt Columbus would have tried to skirt it, had he been informed in advance of its location and extent, instead of floundering about in it for a fortnight on his first voyage.

The Sargasso sea is for obvious reasons a No man's sea, and as is usually the case there is much attached to it which is not so, or about which little is known either in support or to the contrary. For that reason there is ground for anticipating an interesting revelation as the result of the expedition which has set out on the ship Arcturus, with special construction and equipment to make a thorough investigation and study of the conditions found, the fish that inhabit it and the effect which it has upon navigation.

The Sargasso sea is to a certain extent the gathering place of much of the floatsam of the ocean. The seaweed is supposed to come from the Carribean and the Gulf of Mexico. While it has been commonly reported to be the place where lost vessels invariably drift, or have been trapped, such seems to have been dispelled by the expedition of 1910 which discovered nothing of the kind.

While explorations are being made in unknown regions, it is to be realized that the Sargasso sea deserves such classification, and that it is possible for Dr. William Beebe, who is in command of the Arcturus to obtain a fund of valuable information. He isn't setting out with the expectation of finding any Captain Kidd treasures or of salvaging lost vessels. He is in search of scientific data and there is no doubt but what he will have plenty of interesting experiences. After his return there should be more definite knowledge concerning that section of the Atlantic.

NEW ENGLAND RESPONDS.

The announcement which comes from Boston to the effect that there will be an oversubscription to the plan for financing the New Haven road's repayment of its $25,000,000 loan is especially gratifying to this part of the country.

The New Haven road has been having its difficulties for a number of years. Whatever may have been the cause of them they have been real, and as the result those who have been so long dependent upon the service of that system have been deeply interested in the outcome. Indications that the road has turned the corner and is making good progress toward better conditions have been presented in the past year. One of the obstacles that had to be faced was the repayment of its large foreign loan. The situation was thoroughly recognized by the business men of the states in which the road operates. They knew that much is dependent upon the restoration of the system to its former position. It is a matter in which they are indirectly concerned, but the manner in which they have responded to the situation and indicated their willingness to support the plan of meeting the loan coming due shows their appreciation of the importance of giving their support to something which has a vital bearing upon the entire business and industrial situation in several states.

The response which makes the announcement of a successful carrying out of the plan comes from those who understand the situation, and knowing it are mindful of the influence which they can exert to put an end to troubles of a big corporation which have their effect upon them. New England interests have risen in a commendable manner to aid in improving an unfortunate situation.

THE WARREN NOMINATION.

Hitherto it has always been supposed that the president had the right to select his own official family. Confirmation rested with the senate, but up to the present time the senate has let the president have his own way in regard to the cabinet members, regardless of what it may have done concerning other nominations made by him.

Perhaps the present senate will not establish a precedent in this respect, but it is threatening to in the withholding of confirmation on the nomination of Charles B. Warren as attorney general.

President Coolidge has said that he wants Mr. Warren to head the department of justice. He has full confidence in his ability and judgment, and of course he assumes the responsibility of selecting him. Naturally he desired to choose his counselors, but it would appear to be the aim of a certain number in the senate to deny him that privilege. The whole matter has the appearance of being a continuance of those obstructive tactics which characterized this congress prior to election, and which some are reluctant to abandon despite the verdict of the people in opposition thereto and in behalf of the president.

Such opposition as has been raised against Mr. Warren does not show him to be lacking in ability to properly fill the office. The senate, or at least some members of it, made a poor showing before the country when the Stone nomination was fought, and the opposition to the Warren nomination is simply serving to embarrass the president, whose responsibility in the selection of his cabinet has long been recognized.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

There are very few questions of general interest that do not admit of argument on both sides. It is never an answer to any argument to say that the man on the other side is either a fool or a knave. The higher one gets in the scale of intellectuality the greater will be the differences of opinion. No topic has been more widely discussed of late than the proposed child amendment act, that has not secured sufficient sanction to be constitutional. Is there not a growing danger of tinkering too much with the federal constitution? It was doubtless wisdom on the part of the framers of the Constitution to make from time provision for needed amendments. They could not look ahead 100 years and see what the times would require. But may not amending the Constitution become a passing fad? It is perfectly right that three fourths of the states only can make an act constitutional.

Someone has said (perhaps facetiously) that in order to improve a man "you must begin with his grandfather." It is doubtless true that if our grandfathers had been stronger and better (and this is no reflection on them) we at least would not be any worse than we are. It is likewise true that if we are to have a really enjoyable vacation in August, we must begin to plan for it as far back as February. Some people say that they have been disappointed so many times in making plans for the future that they will never plan again, but will simply get up and go on the spur of the moment when the time comes. There may be something in that, and yet if you carefully plan months ahead, and you plans are not interferred with, you will have a much better vacation by carefully working out the details long beforehand. Besides there is the joy of planning.

One can hardly resist the temptation to let this season of the year go by without saying something about Lincoln, although it seems impossible to say anything new. There is, however, one trait of his great character that has not been very much emphasized, as far as I know, and that was the tendency to make much of a present trend. It is perfectly clear that Lincoln did not see the end of his great reformatory work from the beginning. He did not attempt to carry out a carefully prepared system to its logical issue. In fact the fickle times prevented him from even planning a logical system. His first great work was to suppress a rebellion, and for aught he knew it might end in the disruption of the Union, but he knew that the rebellion must be put down. It was the irresistible rush of events that made him see clearly that with the rebellion suppressed must come emancipation from slarvery. Like Moses, Abraham Lincoln was raised up for a purpose.

Does it ever occur to the readers what an humiliation there is in the thawing of ice? How gently and easily is a tremendously strong thing shorn of its power. The power of freezing is simply prodigious. You cannot make an iron tank strong enough to resist the bursting power of ice. Vast masses of stone avalanches go thundering down the sides of mountains because water trickling into the crevices freeze, then swell with irresistible power tearing away great slabs of granite and hurling them into the valleys far below. This is an exhibition of power that baffles the understanding of man. When several inches of glare ice take possession of our fields, streets and sidewalks, we may hack away at it with pickaxes and spades but we make about as much impression as if we tried to keep back the tides of the Atlantic with a broom. But a little warm sunshine does the trick. How easily was Samson shorn of his strength when Delilah bobbed his hair.

It would probably be quite difficult and altogether purposeless to try to draw a parallel between Abraham Lincoln and St. Valentine merely because their names are associated with the same season of the year. It would, however be vastly more difficult to make a rational or even logical connection between the name of St. Valentine and the amusing custom that has gathered around him. Once (hardly now), in England, Scotland and parts of France, a peculiar custom was observed on February 14. A number of young people—maids and bachelors—would assemble together, and inscribe on little billets the names of an equal number of maids and bachelors of their acquaintance, throw the whole into a receptacle of some sort, and then draw them lottery-wise, care of course being taken that each should draw one of the opposite sex. The person thus drawn became one's valentine. The mystery deepens when we consider that St. Valentine himself was probably fictitious. The custom that has gathered around his name has given much innocent fun to the young folks for very many years.

The line of demarcation between religious fanaticism and dementia is so fine that only a skilled alienist can see it. The honest but strangely deluded religionists who expected, and eagerly longed for, a terrible cataclysm that would destroy this earth at midnight on Feb. 6, were doubtless greatly disappointed when the "greatest show on earth" did not come off as scheduled. As they belonged to the 144,000 immuned from the world tragedy because they had been carefully "plucked as brands from the burning," they were to be privileged to witness the elements melt with fervent from the top of a mount near San Diego, Cal. Exactly why San Diego was not to meet the same fate as the rest of the earth was not stated. Possibly the superior holiness of southern California came to the rescue. However these honest people had so fully whipped themselves to a belief in their crude superstition as to be still undaunted. The explanation they gave (at least some of them) for the hitch in the program would be irreverent were it not so perfectly ridiculous. Here you have it: "Christ started to come at the hour appointed but something happened on the way."

It is certainly no crime to speculate about the prophesies of the Bible. One man has just as much right to dabble in Biblical interpretation as another man. It is much better to come to wrong conclusions than to come to no conclusions. It is much better to have a mind that thinks wrongly than a good mind that refuses to think at all. When we remember how much there is and must be in a man-made theology that is strictly speculative, we ought to have more sympathy for those who are obsessed with views that seem to us perfectly absurd. Is it unlikely that in a few centuries the theology we hold will be considered just as untenable as we regard the theology of the middle ages? The setting of definite periods for the second coming of Christ has always been regarded by the bulk of Christians as unwarranted by both reason and revelation, and probably it will be in the next 2,000 years. It may not be wholly speculation on the part of those learned scholars (and their number is increasing every day) that the second coming was fulfilled on the Day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit was visibly given to men. At least here is food for thought.

STRENUOUS LIFE

"I am going to nail a nice barrel to the Michigan avenue bridge, grow a long bead and sit in the barrel," declared the young man who could not catch up with himself. "Be a meditative hermit, you know. Out-of-town visitors on the Seeing-Chicago autos will have me pointed out to them, but I shan't mind because not a single soul then will say to me, 'Oh, you really must see, hear, read or do something!'

"There are too many things in the world. I go to a dinner party and the fair young creature at my left who gets a slant at my eyeglasses and thinks I must be a highbrow bug of some sort speeds up and gurgles, 'Oh, Mr. Oatmeal, have you read that wonderful last book of Tony Rococo's?' I've got caught too many times trying to laugh things off so I tell her honestly that I have not. However, in order to take off the curse and close the subject, I add that I have perused the latest off the press written by Praline Profanity and Wingette Swiggs. It seems that these will not do. I must, oh, I simply must read Inward Outings, by Rococo! Why, everyone is talking about it!

"That settles it. Anybody knows that when all the world is talking about a book one who has not read it might just as well go sit down in the coal cellar when sprightly conversation starts. I write down the name on my cuff and promise to get it the next day. And even while I tell her that I am deeply indebted to her for calling my attention to my oversight, in reality I am anathematizing the girl.

"Then the beautiful matron on my right asks where did I go this summer and I feel that here I am all right, surely. Oh, I inform her, I did the Canadian Rockies, the western coast and three parks. 'Oh, my,' sighs the beautiful matron, how she wishes I had gone to the most delightful spot that people are just discovering on the Nova Scotian coast! Oh, I just must go to Cape Porridge next year! I've got to promise her that I will not let another season go over my head without basking in the foggy sunshine of Cape Porridge! Why, simply everybody is going there!

"All my satisfaction in the three parks and the Rockies evaporates. I feel subdued, guilty, restless and wonder miserably how I am going to get through the winter since I am totally ignorant in regard to Cape Porridge. I write the name on my cuff and say I really must look up the place another summer.

"Then the oldest man present, who is so rich that everybody listens when he speaks, tells me over a cigar that I really must go to Swanktown on the Ooze. He went there this summer and it is the most delightful spot on earth.

"The hostess throws in her bit. She says I simply must go to Barlington on the Atlantic if I want perfect joy and peace—oh, I must go!

"Have I ordered any suits of that tweed from somewhere up north? Oh, but I simply must! Nothing like them in town and such an opportunity! You know that to an American, missing an opportunity, especially such an opportunity, is the height of indolence, stupidity and sloth.

"I am unutterably dissatisfied with my two brand new suits from a home tailor, and all joy in my neckwear is spoiled when Tommy and Eddie blow in from abroad and say, oh, I really must put in an order at that haberdasher's in Bond street, Lunnon! Real distinction in his neckwear! I tell you I haven't had time to catch my breath in years and I'm gonna quit. You are either in it or out of it and as for me, give me the barrel on the bridge and alms from the faithful!"

"Well, before you settle down there," said the girl who never was quite sure whether folks were joking or not, "you really must see two of the new shows that I'll tell you all about! You must!"—Chicago News.

Harriet Beecher Stowe Won Fame at 40

As a child Harriet Beecher was quiet in her ways and absent-minded. In Little Litchfield, where she was born, her father was a clergyman, with a salary of $800 a year, and her mother eked out their slender income by keeping a boarding house and teaching.

Seventh child in the family, Harriet had few luxuries or pleasures. She was five when her mother died, leaving her to be brought up by an aunt and a grandmother in Guilford county.

After her father's second marriage, she was sent to the Litchfield academy. An earnest student and little given to play, she spent most of her time alone and showed a peculiar talent for composition. At 12 she was sent to the Hartford City Female Seminary, which her elder sister, Catherine, had established, and later helped as teacher.

When her father was appointed president of the Lane Theological seminary at Cincinnati she and her sisters went there. Four years later, at 25, she married Prof. Calvin E. Stowe of the seminary, who was an abolitionist and whose house was one of the "stations" in the "underground railroad" to help slaves escape. There she saw and heard discussed many phases of the slavery problem.

So hot became the arguments over slavery at the seminary that the trustees forbade its discussion by the students, who then left by scores, and the seminary was closed soon afterward. Then her husband was made professor at Bowdoin college at Brunswick, Me.

At 31 she published The Mayflower, which attracted little attention. At 40 she wove together incidents of slavery into Uncle Tom's Cabin while rearing three children and teaching others. As a serial in an anti-slavery paper it received passing notice, and her long quest for a publisher ended only after she had agreed to condense it into one volume.

Although its style was called defective and its portrayals inaccurate, 2,000,000 copies, including translations in 22 tongues, were sold and it was dramatized before she died at 84.

Europe honored her, she wrote other books, and was associate editor of a magazine, but the fame of Uncle Tom's Cabin overshadowed all her other efforts.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Penalties

Various penalties are imposed by the revenue act of 1924 for failure to file a return and pay the tax on time, and for making a fraudulent return. Distinction is made between failure and "willful failure" to file a return. For failure to file the return on time, the penalty is 25 per cent of the amount of the tax, unless a return is later filed and it is satisfactorily shown to the commissioner of internal revenue that such failure was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. If a taxpayer exercised ordinary business care and prudence, and nevertheless was unable to file a return within the prescribed time, the delay is due to a "reasonable cause."

For willful failure to make a return the penalty is not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, and in addition 25 per cent of the amount of the tax. For willfully making a false or fraudulent return, the penalty is not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, and in addition 50 per cent of the amount of the tax, in case of a deficiency.

If there is a deficiency there is added to the tax interest on the amount of such deficiency at the rate of 6 per cent a year from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax to the date the deficiency is assessed. In addition, there is added 5 per cent of the amount of the deficiency if due to negligence, but without intent to defraud. If due to fraud, the amount added in addition is 50 per cent of the deficiency.

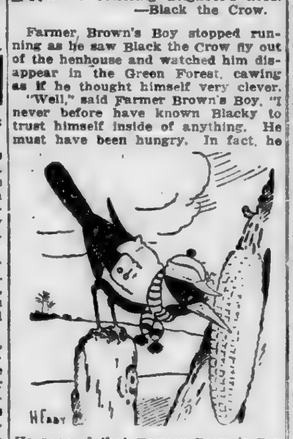
Supplies a suffering neighbor's need.
—Black the Crow.

Farmer Brown's Boy stopped running as he saw Black the Crow fly out of the henhouse and watched him disappear in the Green Forest, cawing as if he thought himself very clever.

"Well," said Farmer Brown's Boy, "I never before have known Blacky to trust himself inside of anything. He must have been hungry. In fact, he must have been almost starving. Nothing less would have made him bold enough to walk right into that henhouse. I hadn't thought of Blacky. Of course, with everything frozen over he must find it mighty hard work to get a mouthful. He saw that henhouse door open and saw the hens picking up corn. He was so hungry that he just took a chance. I'll fix him."



He guessed that Farmer Brown's Boy had put that corn out there especially for him

Now, that sounded like a threat. It sounded as if Farmer Brown's Boy meant to do something to Blacky the Crow. He didn't. He intended to do something for Blacky. He went straight into the barn, and when he came out he brought with him several ears of corn. These he took over to the fence, some distance away, and tied them to one of the fence posts.

"There," said he, "that black rascal will sure find these, for those sharp eyes of his don't miss anything. He can eat over here in comfort. It isn't near enough to the house to make him nervous. I guess that while this icy crust lasts I will have to keep Blacky supplied with food. The Green Forest wouldn't be right without Blacky the Crow. No, sir, it wouldn't be right. Blacky is as much a part of the Green Forest as the trees themselves."

Now, though Black had disappeared from Farmer Brown's Boy's sight, he himself could see Farmer Brown's Boy. He saw Farmer Brown's Boy doing something at that post, and he became very curious. As soon as Farmer Brown's Boy had gone back to the house Black flew to a tree where he could see that post better. He blinked his sharp eyes several times.

"That looks to me very much like corn," said Blacky to himself. "Yes, sir, that is corn or I don't know corn when I see it. But what did Farmer Brown's Boy leave it on the fence post for? He never has done such a think before. There is something queer about this. My, but I would like some of that corn this very minute!"

For a long time he sat in that tree watching. First, he would look at the corn, and then he would look over at Farmer Brown's house. Blacky the Crow was suspicious. He suspected a trick of some kind. He tried to make up his mind to fly away from there and think no more about that corn. But he couldn't. No sir, he couldn't. After a while he ventured to fly slowly over that fence post. His sharp eyes saw the string with which those ears of corn were tied to the post. That made him still more suspicious. He flew to another tree, and there for a long time he sat silent and watchful. But Farmer Brown's Boy didn't appear. And at last Blacky made up his mind to have a closer look at that corn.

He flew over and alighted on that fence post. Even then he hesitated for some time to try that corn. But finally he began to pick at it. Then he made up his mind that there wasn't any trick. He made a shrewd guess. He guessed that Farmer Brown's Boy had put that corn out there especially for him. "Caw! Caw!" shouted Blacky joyously. Farmer Brown's Boy, hearing it, knew that that was Blacky's way of saying thank you.

Stories That Recall Others

Stumped Daddy.

Jane is four years old. During her various romps and tussels with her father she took a great fancy to watching her father make his pocket knife "disappear" by feats of pseudo-magic. The father repeated the trick several times much to the amusement of Jane and the other two children.

Some time later the family was visiting at a neighbor's and while there Jane and her father tussled and romped for the entertainment of the others. All at once Jane stopped, sat upright and said:

"Daddy, do me like you did your knife."

Yes, They Have No Cigars

Jim is not worrying about the future safety of his cigar supply. On several different occasions he had had cause to complain about someone "sentering" his cigar box, but not since Christmas. Santa presented him a burglarproof box. It is so contrived that when it is opened a tune, "Yes, We Have No Bananas" starts playing and continues for about eight minutes, or until the lid is closed. Jim figures his supply is safe in the future.

Not all who think they think have thoughts.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles R. Flint, the New York merchant and financier, who is engaged in his 23rd large industrial merger, a $100,000,000 consolidation of West Virginia coal companies, is known in Wall street as the "Father of Trusts." In the course of his long career Mr. Flint has had an important part in the organization of many concerns which have become internationally prominent. The following are a few of these companies: the United States Rubber Company, the American Chicle Company, the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, the National Starch Company and the United States Bobbin and Shuttle company. Many years ago, as president of the United States Electric Light Company, he came very near consolidating the electric light and power interests of the world. Thomas A. Edison alone holding out against him. Mr. Flint, who has just passed his 75th year, was born in Thomaston, Me., and began his commercial career as a dock clerk in Brooklyn.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

God's Promise

And He said, take now thy son, thine only son, Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of. Gen. 22:2.

Abraham appears to us as a distinctly religious man. there rises within him that desire which in one form or another animates most young men, —The longing for greatness. So far his life had been to trust the promises of God. He had accepted God with the gifts, and to accept God for Himself alone. The scene of Mount Moriah was not simply an episode which interrupted for a time the promise of his youth, though doubtless to Abraham it appeared so. It may be that in the mind of the patriarch there had often risen the desire to know the manner in which his dream would be fulfilled; it may be that from his heart there often ascended the prayer that he might be permitted to see this great day of blessing. If ever that desire was gratified, if ever that prayer was answered, it must have been in that trial of his later years, when the command was laid upon his soul to sacrifice the object of his deepest love.

If Abraham saw that day and was glad it must have been through an experience of sacrifice felt in his own heart; and where could he more appropriately find it than in the silence of that stern hour of mental conflict when he was called to make his choice between the hope of his human will and his trust in the will of God.

And thus it has and always will be to those who trust God implicitly He will go with them.

Abraham Lincoln was the greatest man of his time. What were the elements of his greatness? He could see farther into the future than any man of his day. He had the largest heart and the broadest sympathies of any man known at his time. There was one counselor who never failed him and to whom he often went for comfort and wisdom. He promised The Almighty that if He would give him a victory he would publicly issue his proclamation and give freedom to the slaves. To this we may well believe the response was given and the pledge was fulfilled.

"Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the only thing that relieved me of constipation"

Constipation is dreaded, not only for its insidious self, but for the serious diseases which may be traced to it. Mr. Palludon tells us the helpful story of his relief:

Doing hard work while constipated brought on piles, from which I suffered for two years. I tried almost every remedy without success. Finally I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and it has made me fit again. It is the only thing that helped me and I want everybody to know about it.
(Signed) JOHN PALLUDON,
Clementon, N. Y.

You can get sure, prompt, permanent relief from constipation. Simply eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is nature's own way of cleaning the intestine. It is a bulk food which sweeps the system of constipation's poisons and stimulates normal, healthy action.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to be permanently effective, if eaten regularly, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Eat it with milk, cream, fruits, or try the recipes printed on the package. Made in Battle Creek, Michigan. Served in leading hotels and restaurants. Your grocer sells it.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

NEXT TUESDAY WILL BE NORWICH DAY IN LEGISLATURE AT HARTFORD

Next Tuesday promises to be Norwich day in the legislature at Hartford as a number of bills relating to this city and town are scheduled for hearings before the committee on cities and boroughs.

The bill most likely to promote discussion is S. B. 42 relating to the police department. The bill is as follows:

Section 1—The court of common council of the city of Norwich shall annually in the month of June appoint a board of police commissioners consisting of three members, who shall each hold office for one year from the date of their appointment and until their successors are appointed. Said board of police commissioners shall prescribe the duties of the officers and members of the police department of the city of Norwich, and shall make all rules and regulations not inconsistent with the laws of the state and the provisions of this act, for the government and control of said department. It shall appoint all officers and members of said department and fix, subject to the approval of the court of common council and to the appropriation for such purpose, which may be annually made by the annual city meeting of said city, the compensation to be paid each officer and member of said department. Every officer and member of said department shall hold his office and membership in said department until he shall resign, be retired, or be removed or suspended by said board of police commissioners for cause. Whenever any officer or member of said department shall be removed or suspended by said board of police commissioners, it shall file a copy of the order of removal or suspension with the city clerk of said city who shall, within three days thereafter, lodge a copy of such order of removal or suspension with such officer or member or forward such copy by mail, postage prepaid, letter registered, and addressed to such officer or member at his last known post office address. Any such order of removal or suspension shall contain the reasons for such removal or suspension and the time when the same shall take effect. Any officer or member aggrieved by any such order of removal or suspension may, within six days after the lodging of a copy of such order of removal or suspension with, or after the mailing of the same to him, appeal to the superior court within and for New London county or to any judge of said court, for a review of such order of removal or suspension and of the causes or causes therefore, and in case of such appeal, such order of removal or suspension shall not be in effect until the same has been approved or confirmed by such court or judge.

Section 2. The police department of said city shall consist of one chief, one captain, not more than three sergeants and such number of policemen as the court of common council of said city may from time to time designate and not more than twenty-five supernumerary policemen and the present officers and members of said department shall continue to hold the offices and grades now held by them in said department without any re-appointment under the provisions of this act. All appointments to the regular force of policemen shall be made from the supernumerary list. No person shall be appointed a member of the supernumerary police or of the regular force who has attained the age of thirty-five years, provided this limitation as to age shall not apply to the appointment to the regular force of any person who was on May 7, 1925, a supernumerary policeman of said city. No officer or member of the regular police department shall engage in any business, work or employment which is not included in the business or employment of said department or incidental thereto, and no member of the regular police department shall solicit any person to vote at any election for or against any candidate, nor challenge any elector at any election, not being a delegate or candidate for delegate to any political convention, nor urge the selection or rejection of any candidate for public office, nor be a member of any political committee. Violation by any officer or member of the regular police department of any provisions of this section shall be a cause for removal or suspension from said department as the board of commissioners may determine.

Section 3—So much of the charter of the city of Norwich as is inconsistent with this act is repealed.

Proponents of the bill say that, if passed, it will remove police matters from politics. This is questioned by those opposing the bill. Senator Lee Roy Robbins and Representatives G. G. Engler and C. W. Cassidy say that the bill has some merit but as a whole they do not give it unqualified approval and they will attend the hearing to express their views on the matter. It is understood that a prominent attorney in this city has been engaged to appear at the hearing to oppose the passage of the bill in its present form.

It has been arranged to have Norwich matters heard before the committee at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mayor Waters and Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr., will appear in favor of the bill as directed by the court of common council.

The legislative bulletin contains notice of the following matters to be heard:

Senate Bill No. 2. (Senator Robbins.) Concerning the board of gas and electrical commissioners of the city of Norwich and the profits of the Norwich Gas and Electric Department. Senate Bill No. 95. (Senator Robbins.) Concerning the charter of the city of Norwich in relation to vacancies in the offices of treasurer clerk and tax collector. Senate Bill No. 100. (Senator Robbins.) Concerning the charter of the city of Norwich and the hours of voting and notices and warnings of city meetings. Senate Bill No. 44. (Senator Robbins.) An act changing the territorial limits of the city of Norwich. Senate Bill No. 43. (Senator Robbins.) Amending the charter of the city of Norwich. Senate Bill No 432. (Senator Robbins.) Annexing part of the town of Preston to Norwich. Senate Bill No. 366. (Senator Robbins.) Amending an act concerning the appointment of assessors in the town of Norwich.

Section 1. The board of gas and electrical commissioners of the City of Norwich may annually at their discretion in the month of May out of the profits of the gas and electrical department of said city for the preceding year ending Dec. 31st, designate and set apart for the use of the city, a sum of money in cash not to exceed in amount, however, 4 per cent of the city's assets in its gas and electrical department as last reported for the preceding year to the public utilities commission of the state of Connecticut and said sum when so designated and set apart by the said gas and electrical commissioners shall then be available and may be appropriated by the court of common council of the city for the payment of the general expenses of the city of Norwich other than the expenses of its gas and electrical department.

Under this bill it is claimed it will be possible for the city to use some income from the gas and electric department. As it is now it is claimed that not one cent of the reported profits of the department can be used for the benefit of the city.

In Section 503 of Chapter 30 of the revised statutes of 1918 it is provided that gas and electrical commissioners shall pay over to the treasurer of the city, town or borough all moneys collected in their department.

Under Section 506 of the same chapter, covering the price to be charged for gas and electricity, it is provided that the charges made shall be at a price not greater than to allow an 8 per cent net profit on the cost of investment in the plant. How the rates charged by the city gas and electric department have exceeded this rate of profit is shown by the following figures:

CLOUD DIGGER WARNS OF BIG STORM COMING

The Cloud Digger warns Bulletin readers that the storm he predicted September 21st for the middle of February is about due and will be on hand as predicted.

Even the semi-successful ground hog cannot prevent it. Whether it is to be rain or snow, no man not even the weather bureau can tell until it gets here, but conditions at present say snow, and lots of it.

If it turns out to be rain, get your goods up out of the cellars if you live on low lands, for it will be a hummer, but whether snow or rain, it's coming about on time.

Be warned in time and dig in, says The Cloud Digger.

START WHIRLWIND DRIVE IN BOY SCOUT CAMPAIGN

From the spirit shown by team leaders and workers for the Boy Scout budget, at their meeting Friday night at Odd Fellows hall, the annual drive for funds should go over with a crash this year. Manager Edward A. Harris put the meeting over in fine style and every member of the various teams pledged himself to snap into it and get the necessary funds of $5,000 within three days, bringing the campaign to a close next Wednesday evening.

At 6.15 o'clock a fine supper was served by the supper committee of Hope Rebekah Lodge, No. 27, I. O. O. F., after which Manager Harris called on Harold D. Converse of Boston, regional director for the Boy Scouts of America, who gave a most instructive talk on scouting. He complimented the local committee on its program for the drive and told stories of scouting and offered proof that it was one of the greatest movements for the making of international peace, known to the world. Mr. Converse closed his talk by saying that scouting makes for better citizenship and trains the boys for many things they must do in later life. In putting over this movement, he said, the men were doing a big piece of service.

Scout Executive F. A. Benton also spoke on the merits of scouting, mentioning the award at the Norwich Academy for scholars who take up scouting.

Others to speak were Jonathan L. Johnson, Jean Kieffer, Max Hanover, H. B. Cary, Edwin V. Ross and H. D. Johnson.

At the conclusion of the talks, Manager Harris sent the team members after their names and ordered them onto the job in "double time." Every hope is that when the meeting of the team members is held Monday evening at Odd Fellows hall, the campaign will have been a success. Team workers are to make the drive intense, in hopes of raising the money in less than the three day period, thus once more showing that Norwich is ready to respond when a cause is worthy.

Five teams have been named and are in charge of captains. At the meetings the first three evenings of next week, from 6.15 to 7.45, reports will be made in fast time and the "pep" continued throughout the drive.

WONDERS OF ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY IN PICTURES

The wonders of the electrical industry were shown on the screen at the Elizabeth street school Friday night before an audience of about 200 people including a number of school children. The moving picture was shown under the auspices of the West End Community Association through the courtesy of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. Paul A. Brown, president of the eassociation, presided and opened the meeting about 7.30 o'clock. First a comdy film was shown, this providing much merriment for those present.

President Brown presented Robert W. Perkins, president of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., who addressed the gathering and afterwards explained the pictures as they were shown. After speaking of the electrical industry in its early history Mr. Perkins told of the early methods of telegraphy. He spoke of the old 26 wire system which was afterwards cut down to a five wire system and later, through the invention of the Morse code, cut down to a single wire over which messages could be received and sent.

We want to call your attention to the wonderful service given by the electrical industry, Mr. Perkins said. When you press the electric button you touch a nerve that reaches all the way back through the industry even to the mining of coal.

Three reels of moving pictures on the electrical industry were shown. The first reel showed the lamp lighter passing on foot through the dimly lighted streets of a city as he lit up the old fashioned gas lamps. The early type of steam engine was shown and then the picture passed on to the era of electricity. A part of the reel was devoted to Farraday's discovery in 1831 which led to the invention of the electric generator.

Part 2 showed the power of falling water as it is used in providing power to turn the wheels of industry, especially in relation to the electrical industry. The modern steam locomotive was shown as compared with the modern and huge and powerful electric locomotive. Different types of turbines were shown on the screen and the operation of the steam turbine clearly explained.

Part three, the final reel, was devoted in part to statistics regarding the expansion of the electrical industry and another power plant in process of construction and then the finished plant with its mass of electrical machinery, ready to provide power and light to the community for miles around.

CAMPAIGN FOR $2,500,000 FOR NEAR EAST COLLEGES

A campaign to raise $2,500,000 to provide for the operating expenses of five American colleges in the Near East for the next five years, was announced Wednesday by Cleveland H. Dodge, chairman of the executive committee of the fund for Near East colleges. The institutions included are Robert college at Constantinople, the American University of Beirut, Beirut, Syria; Constantinople Woman's College, International College of Smyrna and Sofia American Schools.

The statement issued by Mr. Dodge says that "It is hoped that this amount may be underwritten as an insurance policy within a few months and that, as conditions in both the Near East and America improve, the necessary endowment may be secured so that by January 1, 1930, the finances of these five large American institutions in the Near East may be permanently assured. They have been largely sponsored by a small group of Americans. This aid, together with local income from student fees, has supported them until recent wars completely upset economic conditions and greatly increased the expense of their maintenance.

"Through the past sixty years they have interpreted America to the Near East. They have symbolized her altruistic spirit and without doubt they have been the most important factors in establishing her prestige there. With their large international student bodies they have become one of the most potent influences for peace.

"The tremendous enrollment this year indicates official and popular favor but at the same time increases the burden of their maintenance under conditions that are still abnormal. The trustees have already made generous contributions to the fund for operating expenses but the responsibility is greater than any small group of people can carry. They must appeal to the public for the remainder of the money. It is an altruistic effort typical of America and as such should have wide public support."

The campaign will be nation-wide with intensive drives in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Providence, Springfield, Manchester, Worcester, Rochester and Montclair.

The total enrollment of the five schools is 2,838 representing 29 national groups, including 589 Syrians, 577 Turks, 416 Bulgarians, 330 Armenians, 281 Greeks, 181 Jews, 144 Iracis, 112 Egyptians, 43 Persians, 43 Russians, 25 Albanians, 7 Circassians, 7 Arabs, 6 Sudanese, 1 Montenegrin and 1 Kurd.

"Pine Needle" Pillows

The forest service says that pine needles are not generally used in making pillows. While the pillows are called "pine pillows" the needles are generally those of the balsam fir or spruce—either red, white or black spruce. No special time of year is specified for gathering these needles, since they are evergreens.

The fight was a bitterly contested boxing and slugging match between two past masters at both arts. The pace was furious from the start, Slattery forcing the fighting except periodically when Delaney, driven to cover, took the aggressive as the best means of defense.

Using a tantalising left jab into Delaney's face then crossing with a pile-driving right which seldom went missed, Slattery established a terrific pace, but Delaney trailed along, never badly behind but just shaded and beaten to the punch. It was one of the most spectacular matches ever seen in the Garden, outside of the championship circle.

Delaney seemed content to trail Slattery until the closing minutes of the match when he opened up an offensive that threatened to cripple his opponent, but clever use of his arms Slattery weathered the attack.

It was a clean fight, but at times it appeared that the referee would need help in separating the two men when they locked in a clinch. Frequently they met in the neutral corner, locked one arm and with the free right hand, poured punches at the jaw, neither attempting to cover and both hammering with all the power at their command. In such skirmishes the scantily-filled Garden burst into an uproar and the din continued until the battle had assumed normal proportions.

The decision was a popular one, newspapermen at the ringside giving Slattery the first five rounds and his Bridgeport opponent one lone round—the final one. But despite the margin of rounds, the decision was close as Delaney's advantage in the final round was decisive.

Rickard indicated after the match that Slattery will be offered terms for a title match with Harry Greb as soon as he reaches his 21st birthday in order to make him eligible for the longer route.

Warnie Smith of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, who quit in the fifth round of his semi-final match with Larry Estridge, negro middleweight, fractured his jaw in three places, his manager announced after Smith had been removed to Bellevue hospital. Smith claimed the injury happened in the second round.

The commission also sanctioned, as a first round match, a ten-round bout between Joe Benjamin and Jack Silver, both of San Francisco, at San Francisco on the afternoon of February 23 but stipulated that the principals must weigh in at 10 o'clock in the morning under the 135-pound limit.

The matches were not drawn, the managers of the principles agreeing to permit the commission to match the fighters according to its own judgment.

Word was received from the French boxing federation that Lucien Vienz would represent France in the tournament. Australia nominated Sid Godfrey and Hugh Dwyer but neither could find it possible to compete in the tournament and as a result Australia will not be represented. The Buenos Aires municipal boxing commission officially notified the commission that Luis Vincentini will represent South America in the tournament. Canada has failed to nominate a lightweight and the commission named Clonie Tate, lightweight champion of Canada, as the maple leaf representative.

The board of boxing control of England has named Harry Mason and Ernie Izzard, both of London. These two will meet within a short time for the honor of representing the British empire. The New York board has notified the English commission that this meeting must be held immediately.

Cuba will name a lightweight to represent that country when the next 15 days while the commission was notified that Garsena would wear the colors of Italy in the tournament.

Leo Flynn, manager of Jack Renault, Canadian, filed a challenge with the commission from Hot Springs, Ark., where he is wintering. Flynn seeks a match between Renault and Jack Dempsey. The commission refused to take action, pending the receipt of a certified check to make the challenge legal.

Max Hoff of Philadelphia, manager of Ad Stone, filed a challenge for his man to meet Mike McTigue, world light-heavyweight champion. This was also shelved pending the receipt of a check.

NURMI'S BUFFALO RACE WAS HIS BEST HERE

Syracuse, N Y., Feb. 13 (By the A. P.).—Paavo Nurmi's race in Buffalo last night, where he shattered his own previous world's indoor records for 2,000 yards, 2,000 metres and one mile and a quarter, is regarded by the phantom Finn as his greatest performance on American tracks, so far as time is concerned. This was his declaration today as he laconically discussed the race on the train trip here, where he runs tonight.

Nurmi, as is his custom, has a prearranged time schedule by which he planned to clip a second or two off his old marks, but, as he puts it, he felt "just right" ,when he took the boards, and about the halfway mark decided to put on full speed. The result was that he broke the three records by margins ranging from about 7 to 11 seconds. To show the pace at which he traveled, he pointed out that his time for the mile and one-quarter was nearly 7 seconds faster than the mark he previously set on the famous Madison Square Garden track, which Paavo regards as the fastest he has yet tested.

Nurmi takes his hasty jumps about the country with characteristic philosophy, but the famous Finn displays another native trait by shunning most of the service and attention offered him. Today, with one of his rare smiles, Paavo waved away the negro porter who sought to shine his shoes and carry his bag from the train. During the trip the Finn devoted most of his attention to the landscape and timetables, which he studied with the same concentration he devotes to his racing.

PLAINFIELD WINS EASY GAME FROM STAFFORD

Plainfield, Feb. 13.—Before a record crowd at the Plainfield Community house here tonight the Army and Navy team defeated the crack Stafford Caseys in a fast and snappy game by the score of 41 to 23. The first half was a one-sided affair, with the local team shooting and passing the ball at will. Dessenger and Belair tied for high honors in the first half, each scoring four goals and a foul. Normandin, the fast forward from Willimantic, kept the visitors bewilderde and they were unable to hold him down. The first half ended in the Army and Navy club's favor, 24 to 8. In the second half Prevost received an injury on his right knee and Nolan substituted. The Caseys held a two-minute conference and afterward showed some real speed and team work, scoring nine goals and two fouls in the last half. The final score ended with the Aarmy-Navy 41 and the Caseys 23.

In the preliminary game the Plainfield Buddies defeated the Y. M. C. A. Emps of Norwich by the score of 33 to 11.

SPORT NOTES.

Fifty years ago, in 1875, the Boston baseball club made a wonderful season's record of 71 victories and only 5 defeats.

Knee pants, the distinctive feature of the present style of baseball uniform were first introduced by the Cincinnati Reds in 1869.

A radical change in rules was made by the big baseball leagues in 1887, when the batsman was allowed four strikes. This rule lasted one season and a return was then made to the old plan of three strikes.

President Keyser of the Des Moines club made a special trip to Decorah, Ia., the other day for the purpose of signing up Ossie Orwoll, Luther college pitcher and outfielder. Orwoll winds up his college work in the spring and has taken Keyser's offer under advisement.

Dee McMenamin, star second baseman of the 1923 Grand Rapids team, pennant winners of the Central league, was buried at his home in Philadelphia, Pa., on December 27. His death was caused by tuberculosis. McMenamin started his professional career with Kalamazoo in 1920. He was also with Muskegon in 1920. In 1921 he was with Ludington and Muskegon. In 1922 Mac played with Moline and Grand Rapids and in 1923 with Denver and Toledo.

Yanks Release Haines.

New York, Feb. 13.—The New York American league baseball club today announced the release of Outfielder Henry (Chinkey) Haines to the Rochester club of the International league.

Essex 6-Coach $895

Freight and Tax Extra

None Can Copy Its Chief Value

The Chassis Is Patented

Essex is a totally different type. It gives results no other car ever gave.

Low price, without disappointment in looks or reliability.

Economy without sacrifice of performance.

Stability and highest roadability without unnecessary weight.

The lowest maintenance cost, we believe, of any car in the world.

Two of every three Essex buyers come to it from those who formerly owned cars bought chiefly for their low first price.

Just as the Coach body and Coach name have been extensively copied, even by costliest cars, so must future mechanical design seek to approximate the results Essex gives.

But the patents which make the Super-Six the most enduring, smoothest motor and give it all advantages, also prevent any from copying its qualities.

Surely you cannot be satisfied with less than Essex offers. Its cost is but little more than cars of the lowest price.

NURMI IS BEATEN BY GOTTLIEB IN HANDICAP RACE AT SYRACUSE MEET

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 13—(By the A. P.)—Paavo Nurmi was beaten for the second time in his American invasion tonight when he trailed Al Gottlieb, Syracuse university star, to the tape by ten yards in a handicap mile race in which Gottlieb started with a 65-yard allowance.

Nurmi's setback came as a stumbling surprise, but the most startling part of it was that he was clearly outrun in the last lap by Gottlieb after catching and passing his rival at the start of the lap. Nurmi apparently believing he had shaken off all pursuit, seemed to slow up about 100 yards from the finish but the Orange star put on a spurt that carried him to the front again. He was drawing away from his famous opponent as he broke the tape.

It was an event that has happened only once before in the course of Nurmi's spectacular invasion of American tracks, and the crowd fully realized its interest. Gottlieb's performance was even more creditable than Gunnar Nilson's defeat of Nurmi by a yard in a handicap event in Brooklyn last month, for the Orange star had only a 65-yard handicap and won by 10 yards, while Nilson barely beat Paavo by a yard after starting with an allowance of 100 yards.

Gottlieb had the smallest allowance of any of the half dozen Syracuse runners starting against Nurmi. Carrying his famous stop watch, Nurmi sped around the narrow track skirting the walls of the university gymnasium at a gait that quickly overhauled the fear guard of his opponents.

Three laps from the finish Nurmi had passed all but Gottlieb and he soon drew up to the latter's heels. Gottlieb lengthened his pace and kept the lead for two laps, but at the sound of the bell for the final tour Nurmi jumped to the front. Paavo looked back over his shoulder, then at his watch as he took the lead and seemed to slow down slightly. As he did so Gottlieb spurted, raced into the lead at the final turn and added yards to his margin in the short dash to the finish.

Chester Bowman, Syracuse, in the 40 yard dash, raced the distance in 4 3-5 seconds, only a fifth of a second behind the world's record set 20 years ago by W. D. Eaton at Boston.

Despite his defeat, Nurmi was credited with lowering the track record for the Syracuse university gymnasium. His time of 4.27 3-5 clipped three-fifths of a second off the former mark set by Jole Ray of Chicago last year.

Gottlieb, a 21 year old junior and captain of the Syracuse cross-country team, ran the greatest mile race of his career against the most famous opponent he has ever faced. When the Orange star put on the burst that carried him past the blue-shirted Finnish racer, the crowd of several thousand, most of them fellow students of the winner, gave a wild demonstration of enthusiasm.

Instead of seeing the expected exhibition of Nurmi's victorious prowess and the remarkable speed that has carried the phantom Finn's feet to 22 world's records, the crowd saw a blond-haired stripling show his heels to the most famous pair of legs in the athletic world.

Will The "Cremona Tyrant" Succeed Mussolini?

[Keystone View Co., New York]

Roberto Farinacci, known as the "Tyrant of Cremona," who, according to reports, will soon succeed Mussolini. He is known as "a magnificent adventurer without a scruple, but with the hottest head in Fascisti councils." It is said that no violence is too great for him, as known by his Cremona tyranny, and when Deputy Matteoti was killed, he pleaded for Amerge Dumini, the assassin, so as to glorify the crime. It is also known that Mussolini is very much in fear of this follower.

How Cheese Got Name

"Jack cheese," sometimes known as Monterey cheese, originated in Monterey county, California, and was first made about 1892. The method grew out of a need for disposing of surplus milk at a small expense for equipment, and because of this fact it can be made on farms where only a small amount of milk is available.

Poet Laureates

The naming of a poet laureate is an English custom. The United States has never named one, and as far as it is possible to learn does not contemplate using the custom. Several of the states have poet laureates.

LOOKING FOR SAILOR'S LOOT
N. LONDON POLICE GET THREE CROOKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb 13.—Charles Raymond McManus, 19, alias Charles David McNamara, Raymond Gouland, 18, alias Richard Gale, and Frank Lipka, 19, were arrested this afternoon by Sergeants John Cavanaugh, and Nelson Smith and Patrolman William Graham, charged with burglarizing the tailoring establishment of Samuel Goodman, 49 Church street, early yesterday morning. Besides arresting the three crooks, who have admitted their guilt, Sergeants Cavanaugh and Smith later took into custody Earl Parks, of Poquonoc Bridge, a public service automobile operator, charged with being an accomplice of the crooks. All four are prisoners at the police station in default of a bond of $1,000 each, for their appearance in the police court tomorrow morning.

The plunder recovered comprised 78 yards of suiting and was of an amount considerably in excess of that reported by Goodman yesterday as having been stolen, for Goodman reported his loss as being about 35 yards. The plunder recovered consisted of 17 rolls of various quality of men's suitings.

From statements made by the youths following their apprehension, it developed that McManus was the brains of the trio, for Lipka stated that the gang went to the rear of the Goodman store and standing on the shoulders of McManus and Gouland, he followed instructions of McManus to place Lipka's cap around a stone and then smash the window with the covered missle.

When searched at the police station McManus and Gouland had three fraudulent checks of the Union Bank & Trust company in their possession, each of the checks being drawn on an account that did not exist and were supposedly to be attempted to be negotiated.

The capture of the three crooks was no much of a surprise to the police as it was for McManus, Gouland and Lipka, for the two sergeants and patrolmen were seeking to recover the plunder stolen from the submarine base, including a diamond ring, when they discovered the loot of the Goodman store.

This forenoon an officer from the submarine base reported to Judge Victor Prince at the police court session that a sailor was under arrest at the base who is suspected of having been implicated in the thefts there. The officer also stated that he had reason to believe that the major portion of the loot was secreted in the residence of Mrs. Victoria Coman, 28 Cedar street. Judge Prince issued a search warrant and it was given to Sergeants Cavanaugh and Smith and Patrolman Graham. The officers, after serving the warrant on the woman, started to search the house. After failing to find any of the property of the government and the diamond ring, the officers went to the upper part of the house where their search revealed the 17 rolls of cloth beneath the rafters. The officers identified some of the property as having been [illegible] the Goodman place and Mrs. Coman, as to how it came to be where found, declared that it was brought there Tuesday morning by McManus, Gouland and Lipka, who requested permission to store the rolls of cloth in the house until today, when they planned they would sell it. Mrs. Coman finally consented to [illegible] be put in the attic. Sergeants [illegible] ed a [illegible] oman [illegible] he [illegible] ould [illegible] own [illegible] a [illegible] and [illegible] being [illegible] ed and in the meantime McManus and Gouland appeared at the Coman residence and were taken into custody.

After their arrest Lipka did considerable talking and in his interrogation by the officers he admitted that McManus caused the goods to be transferred from the room of the rooms in Golden street to the Coman residence a few hours following the robbery and that the automobile operated by Parks was used in the transfer of the goods. When Parks was sought on the charge of being an accomplice he could not be located, but he was finally found at his home.

It is believed by the police that McManus and Gouland have been implicated in numerous other robberies about the city. Both admit not being employed in some time and McManus has not been working for about two years.

McManus claims that he was about to be married and that his intended bride is a Norwich young lady. McManus requested tonight that the young lady be communicated with and informed of his predicament. This was done and the bride-to-be stated that she would come to New London tomorrow morning and visit McManus.

Tonight Parks was released on a bond of $1,000, his father arranging for the provision of the bond.

The suspicious case is that of Julia Brooks, 1, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks, 28 Starr street. The police were called to a residence near Huntington street this evening by a woman who declared that her husband had threatened to assault her. When the police arrived at the house the woman did not want her husband arrested and stated that she was satisfied that he would not molest her.

Michael J. Shea, with a court record of previous arrests, came into New London from Jewett City by way of Danielson, he said, and with a load of liquor aboard which he could not carry. He lurched up against the Union bank building and then into the street, where Police Sergeant Samuel Hick fastened upon him. Shea was in court this morning and there he said he was a quarryman who had been at work at Leete's Island and there was laid off because of the bad weather that came with the winter. He saw a break Thursday and said he started for Leete's Island, or at least for Saybrook, whence he could walk, 20 miles, to the island. But he said he stopped at Norwich and there got his liquor. As an old-timer Judge Prince sentenced him to 10 days in jail, but he suspended the execution of the sentence on the hard luck story that Shea told and reminded him that if he came back within a year he would go to jail, and stay for a considerable period.

Henry Hughes of East Lyme met a buddy with whom he was in France during the World war. The couple had a few drinks, with the result that the buddy got away and Henry got into the police court. GREATER THAN MARRIAGE
(Victor Hugo Halperin Production-Vitagraph — Seven Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)
VITAGRAPH'S latest shows much evidence of great care in direction, in detail, in scenic investiture and in transplanting of the Louis Jospeh Vance novel, "Joan Thursday," to the shadow stage. The result is a creditable production that can boast of an appealing theme—in this instance the desire of a girl and later a wife for a stage career and the effort made by the father and, subsequently, by a husband to keep her from the footlights.
This theme has been developed against a background of lavish settings, including some fine night shoots of the Gay White Way, cabaret interiors with some excellent ballet ensembles, theatre preformances of unusual realism, back stage views and elaborate apartment settings. There is a wealth of comedy woven into the dramatic action, most of which is furnished by Peggy Kelly.
The suspense is fairly well maintained and a climax is put over in fine shape. This contains several real thrills packed into a single reel. One of these comes when the "angel," attempting to attack the wife, forces the latter out onto the balcony of the apartment building. The wife jumps but the "angel" catches a bit of her dress and hauls her back. It is a good punch. There is also a battle royal between "the angel" and the husband who arrives at the apartment just in time to save the wife from the villain.
The cast has been well selected. It is headed by Marjorie Daw as the wife infatuated with the glare of the footlights and Lou Tellegen as the playwright. Both do excellent character work.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The Bulletin of 1875 carried a detailed report of the funeral of Senator Buckingham and also many stories of the extreme cold weather that was prevailing during the week. Sound steamers gave up their trips, a number became ice bound and others started out only to return. Sleighing and horse racing was the prize sport on the Thames in February 1875.

In part the stories in the Bulletin for that week are related as follows:

Monday, February 8, 1875 — The Thames was covered with skaters and horses Saturday and there was some very lively trotting at times, the scene being a brilliant one. In spite of the extreme cold the wharves were lined with spectators. One of the features of the day was an ice boat about sixteen feet in length which was put on the ice in the morning. Several of the horses were driven down the river as far as Allyn's Point and it has been many years since the Thames has furnished such a long drive. The racing however, is dangerous to some of the horses, one falling dead Saturday during a race.

Out of respect for Senator William A. Buckingham notice has been issued by Governor R. Ingersoll that all state business will be closed Tuesday the 9th after 2 o'clock noon. Letters of respect and memorials were also published by the Free Academy, New London County Bar, Travellers Insurance company and many tributes were noted in papers throughout the east.

The name of Judge Hovey of Norwich has been mentioned in connection with the appointment to fill Senator Buckingham's seat.

Edward Chappell, of the firm of E. Chappell & Co., who is touring through California is to go to the Sandwich Island and also to Japan before returning home.

Tuesday, February 9, 1875 — The country roads beds have rarely, if ever, had so smooth a condition at this present, there, being solid ice for them for miles, the ice being twelve inches thick. A man living five miles out in the country skated the distance into the city Monday morning in short space of time.

In Franklin today there are living 27 people whose ages average 68 years and eighty persons the aggregate of whose ages amount to the respectable sum of 5,600 years. In 1870 the population of the town was 721 but there are less people living there at the present time.

A challenge appeared in the Bulletin in 1876, issued by I. Sandreon who offers to trot his horse Royal George against Lady Nash, best 2 out of 3 or best 3 out of 5 mile heats on the ice for $50 or $100 a side. It is expected that his offer will be taken up by local horsemen.

Rev. William C. Scofield's resignation as pastor of the First Congregational church and society is widely regretted in this city, especially among those who have enjoyed his companionship for many years.

Wednesday, February 10, 1875—The last honors to Connecticut's war governor and senator were paid Tuesday. Though the day was one of bitter cold, the streets were filled with hundreds from out of town, many having driven over 20 miles to reach the city, while others came in by trains filled to capacity. In the crowd on the street the predominance of the laboring classes was strongly marked, this in itself a fine tribute to his memory, for Senator Buckingham was a man of the people and for the people.

Throughout the day there was a suspension of business in the city. All flags in the city were at half mast and many private houses were dressed in mourning. The doors of Senator Buckingham's house were opened at 10 o'clock and hundreds filed past the casket in the north parlor. Around the casket of honor stood Col. H. H. Osgood, Col. W. Fitch, Gen. Morse, Col. Thomas Fitch, Col. Matson and Col. Bond, while the visitors were received by Mr. Carey, Mr. Gibbs and Col. Tenny. Over 2,500 people viewed the remains of Senator Buckingham before the doors were closed at noon and at 1 o'clock they were removed to the Broadway church. Hundreds remained in the streets while the church service was being conducted, though the thermometer was close to zero.

A procession over a mile and a half in length followed the remains to the cemetery where brief services were held owing to the intense cold. Senators, representatives, state officers, city and county officers and hundreds of others attended these final services.

Think of going as fast as 58 in a four without noticeable vibration. Then think of combining such speed with a pick-up of 5 to 25 miles an hour in 8 seconds —and—gasoline economy of 25 miles per gallon. No wonder other manufacturers say, "How do you do it?". Splendid factories in which Maxwell is built by Maxwell men from wheels to body, from radiator to rear axle give one answer. Chrysler engineering genius applied to the good Maxwell completes the explanation. The result is unapproached value. See for yourself.

For Ten Years the World's Greatest Buy

Hudson's position as the world's greatest value is not merely a new attainment. For ten years the Super-Six has stood alone in mechanical supremacy. Basic patents have kept others from copying its motor. The smoothness and long life it gives are exclusive. No motor has yet equaled the Super-Six in smoothness and long, economical car life.

A Leadership Never Disputed

Hudson, because of the simplicity of the Super-Six, has always enjoyed manufacturing advantages that permitted a lower selling price than is possible with more complicated types. That, in part, accounts for its leadership for ten years as the World's Greatest Value.

You hear everyone speak of Hudson value. To many that means lower first cost than is to be found elsewhere. Hudson was first by months to give closed car comforts at exactly open car cost. To hundreds of thousands of owners, Hudson value means the most economical service in operation and maintenance. No car ever built has equaled Hudson's record in that respect. For ten years the Super-Six has proved its lasting endurance. And while those cars of a decade ago still creditably account for themselves, today's Hudson, improved in many ways, is smoother, more lasting and more economical.

No wonder, then, that when Hudson value is spoken, all wanted qualities are included. Hudson is the World's Greatest Value, because it has always provided better looks and more comfort at less money.

No rival disputes that and every motorist knows it

PACKARD MOTOR CAR COMPANY
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

AM-L January 5, 1925.

TO STOCKHOLDERS OF THE PACKARD MOTOR CAR COMPANY:

Newspapers are carrying the story of a radical reduction which the Company has announced in the prices of all enclosed models of the Packard Six car.

The prices of the Eight models are not reduced.

The announced reductions vary from $640 for the Six coupe to $840 for the seven-passenger Six sedan.

5-pass. Sedan	$2585	7-pass. Sedan Limousine	$2885
7-pass. Sedan	2785	4-pass. Coupe	2585
5-pass. Sedan Limousine	2785	5-pass. Coupe	2685

This price revision makes the Packard Six in its various models easily the outstanding automobile value of the year. This is particularly true because at the new prices the cars are exactly as they were; there is no change in design, material or workmanship.

While price reductions are nothing new to the automobile industry, no company building a high-grade car and appealing to an exacting clientele has ever before made so far-reaching a price revision in its product.

As a stockholder in the Company you will naturally ask why this drastic move, and can the Company market its high-grade cars profitably at so low a price?

The answer is—we are prepared to do it.

The Six has been on the market four years, during which it has been so far refined and perfected that we believe the appearance and fundamentals of the car will be unchanged for a considerable time; that is to say, the car has been standardized. And while doubtless we shall from time to time make minor and detail improvements, we do not anticipate any necessity for substantial structural changes for a long time to come. We are, therefore, in ideal position to devote our attention and our facilities to turning this perfected car out in quantities at the lowest price consistent with Packard quality. And the price revisions are a step in our program to this end.

Production will be conservatively expanded to take care of the increased sales.

The Company has never been stronger financially, or better prepared, in organization and facilities, for a constructive move such as this.

We enclose copy of our report for the last quarter ending November 30th last. We show net earnings of $1,872,753—one of the best quarters in the history of the Company.

We have no unsold stock of goods on hand and our inventories were never in better condition.

Very cordially,

Alvan Macauley
President.

In order that those interested might have the information which the president of the Packard Motor Car Company addressed to the stockholders of the Company we take pleasure in publishing this letter.

The New Dalton Bookkeeping "Cash Register" does all the work of a cash register plus that of an adding-calculating machine and a statement machine.

With the simplified bookkeeping system that goes with the machine, no bookkeeper is needed — any employee can operate it. All essential figure facts are at finger tips. Lock and key prevent inspection of records except at proprietor's discretion.

By a slight movement of the paper carriage, and without disturbing the cash register record, the New Dalton Bookkeeping "Cash Register" is converted into an all around adding-calculating machine of seven figures.

ROADS AND FISH AND GAME BILLS ARE PROMINENT IN HOUSE AND SENATE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, Feb. 13—The advocates of extensive road building program are not meeting with the success they anticipated judging by the number of bills that have been rejected. The one that was of special interest to the New London county was the road leading from Hadlyme four corners to the Connecticut River was one of those that fell by the way on unfavorable report by the committee on roads, bridges and rivers. This bill if passed, would have completed the road from Norwich to the river.

Mr. Bugbee of Lyme opposed the report of the committee on fish and game that presented an unfavorable report on H. B. 207 that reduced the bag limit on ducks, reducing the number from 25 to 10. He claimed that the number of ducks was growing less each year and that not a "broad bill" could be found in Long Island Sound. This was disputed by Chairman Wheeler of the committee on fish and game. All the state's bordering on Connecticut, allowed the present bag limit and as regarding the presence of the "broad bill" in the sound he could show 10,000 of that bird at the mouth of the Housatonic River today.

The insurance and judiciary committees were the only ones holding hearings today. The one before the judiciary was the largest one held this session, interest being centered on H. B. 41 introduced by Judge Alling of New Britain. The old senate chamber was filled with women welfare workers from all parts of the state to protest the bill, which provides for the commitment to the state farm of any "females" beween the ages of 16 and 21 who are in manifest danger of falling into habits of vice or who are leading vicious lives, who are convicted, also plead guilty to the charges for a period of 30 days. Mrs. Hooker, representative from Hartford opposed the bill, saying that "the home for women was a home and not a prison. It was the aim of the institution to reform and not punish. She asked that each member of the committee to answer if he believed a person could be reformed in thirty days.

Senator Alice Merritt of Hartford also opposed. At this point Judge Alling said that while he introduced the bill he did not sponsor it and suggested that as no one had appeared in its support, that to save a lengthy hearing that those opposed should arise and in response every woman in the room with many men did so. Not even a peep was heard in support.

Senate Bill 41 introduced by Senator Rogers, concerning the juvenile court was withdrawn in favor of one drawn by Senator Wilder of Bridgeport as it was a waste of time to consider two bills that practically the same.

THE HOUSE.

The house was called to order at 11:30 by Speaker Burlingame with an attendance above the average for a Friday session. Prayer was offered by Captain Lewis. The calendar on the desks of the members contained 28 bills that can be acted upon next week. Several more were added today. The appropriations committee reported a bill that will afford additional relief to disabled soldiers and sailors was accepted and under suspension of the rules was transmitted to the senate.

The fish and game committee reported favorably on H. B. 589, providing that the penalty for the killing of a quail or a partridge be not less than $5 nor more than $25 for each bird killed. H. B. 741 extending the open season on quail to Oct. 5, 1927, was accepted and tabled for calendar.

Bills extending the hunting season where a deer had been declared by the governor were unfavorably reported with a statement that a substitute bill would be prepared by the committee that would better meet the matter than the ones presented. Bills favorably reported were H. B. 339 providing payments to agricultural societies to accommodation; H. B. 77, requiring certificates from persons over 16 years of age; H. B. 730 concerning the appointment of George Washington Cable. Under suspension of rules the following state secretary and Judge W. Ware M. Maltbie were made the state library committee.

Senate was called to order and adjournment was made to 1:30 Tuesday, Feb. 17.

SENATE.

Reports from committees were received as follows:

Judiciary favorable on bill relative to adjournments in the city court of Norwich amending the bill establishing the town court of Groton; and borough court of Naugatuck. Tabled for calendar.

Fish and Game Unfavorable on bill relating to the taking of raccoons. The bills were rejected.

Claims. Unfavorable on claim of Theodore Justin for return of bail money, refunding the clerk of the Meriden police court for loss of bond. Bills rejected. WOMAN VERY NERVOUS

Weak, Blue, Discouraged—Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I was nervous and could not sleep, had crying spells and the blues, and didn't care if I lived or died. My right side was very bad and I had backache and a weakness. I read about your medicines in the papers and wrote for further information. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Medicine and Liver Pills, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I have had good results in every way and am able to do my work again and can eat anything that comes along. My friends tell me how well I am looking."—Mrs. F. K. CORIELL, 129 Peete St., Cincinnati, O.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

The Heart o' a Hoss

The only way to treat a hoss
Is like a pard an' friend.
Let love an' kindness be the boss,
An' you'll win in the end!
A hoss has got a heap o' pride
An' feelin's fine and true;
He's got a heart beneath his hide,
The same as me an' you.

He wants to step with head held high,
An' courage in his gait,
An' sight o' freedom in his eye,
Uncurbed by by lash o' hate;
He wants to feel his blood run swift,
An' let his nostrils flare;
An' know he's got the precious gift
O' breathin' God's free air!

He may bow down to spur an' quirt,
An' quiver 'neath the smart;
His flesh can stand the bitter hurt,
But what about his heart?
He craves the feel o' human touch;
He's neither dumb, ner blind;
And he'll respond to it heap much—
The love o' humankind!

A hoss can't speak an' tell folks what
He's thinkin' in his head.
He has to keep his mouth tight shut,
Till he rolls over dead.
He can't explain a cockle burr
Is drillin' in his hide;
Or say in words the quirt an' spur
Are killin' him quick!
If they could speak, like you an' me,

They'd pronto make it plain.
That they've got feelin's we can't see,
Who hold the bridle rein.
So handle 'em with gentle hands
An' from the very start
They'll try to make you understand
The love that's in their heart!

White Wings

Sail home as straight as an arrow
My yacht shoots along on the crest of the sea,
Sail home to sweet Maginarow
Your dear little home here's waiting for thee,
High up where cliffs they are craggy
There's where the girl of my heart waits for me
My home, I long for you Magie
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.

Chorus.
O how we go, O how the winds blow,
White wings they never grow weary
They carry me cheerily over the sea,
Night comes, I long for my dearie
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.
Sail home to love and caresses
When Magie my darling is there at my side,
Sail home blue eyes and gold tresses
The fairest of all is my own little bride,
Sail home to part from me never,
Always together my song it shall be
Sail home to love me forever
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.

BAGS FOR ODDS AND ENDS

Dear Social Corner Members: First of all I want to thank A Social Corner Member who sent me the nice calendar. I am rather tardy in my thanks but this is my first letter to the Corner since receiving it. Some one is surely very thoughtful.

Now here is an experiment I am trying out which I find splendid. Maybe none of you let your bureau drawers get upset and overrun with odds and ends of laces, ribbons left overs from the makings of dresses, etc. as I have. I keep a bureau in my sewing room for such things but to find what I want sometimes the contents looks as though a whirlwind had struck them. Now I have taken squares of cloth to suit the amount of odds and ends they are to hold. I am using cheese cloth and as I buy my sugar in 100 pound bags the thin lining that is inside of the canvas bag works fine. I make mine about a yard square. I stitch a piece of bias binding around the edge of the cloth as large as I can. I stitch this about three inches from the edge. Through this I run a tape. On one square I place all laces, ribbons and trimmings. On another all cottons such as rolls of percales, ginghams, etc. Draw up the tape and each lot is by itself in a bag. Each is labled on one of the four corners that comes at the top of the bag. These are put in a large box out of sight and out of the way. It is so easy when you want to find a certain kind of trimming to place the bag on the table or bed open it flat and there you are. I find it leaves my bureau drawers for large pieces of cloth that I am going to make up, surplus underwear, dresser covers and such as one has. One of these bags is fine for patterns. I tried one out of mosquito netting. One advantage of that was you could see what the bag contained without opening but it tore too easily. I have never heard of any one using this method but hope some one will try it and find what a help it is.

Dorinda: I am thinking about your invitation in the letter I had from you at Christmas time to make you a longer call some time. I am thinking I will try and get up to one of your Social Corner meetings in the summer when the wheeling is good.

My sympathy goes out to the family of H. M. L. as some years ago I went through a similar experience. It is hard to be reconciled to it but in after years we sometimes are able to feel it may have been the better way.

To those of you who have charge of the dinners I don't blame you for urging each and everyone to bring food. It's a shame you have to do it. While I have never attended any of the Corner meetings I know what it means. I used to live in a town where some families were noted for going to picnics and such gathering in numbers and carrying a very small portion of one thing. It is not fair. All should be willing to do their part. Here are wishes for cooperation among all who have the privilege of being able to attend what can be made very enjoyable times for all.

Effie M.: I have often heard the expression, "trying to catch a greased pig." Think you must have had some experience, I'm sure I would not have wanted to be in that hired man's shoes.

E. L. M.

BUSY MAKING RUGS

Dear Cornerites: Like the numerous others will say thank you to a Social Corner Member for the calendar which has a place in my desk where it can be referred to any time. I'll continue my thanks to those who sent cards, letters and phoned congratulations on my birthday. The credit however goes to "Our Father" for so many years of health to be able to do the task, set before me.

The Corner letters are interesting. The one from Persis was especially so as I too am interested in Westminster's past and future. I have a daughter and family that belong to the church there.

What has become of Samantha? She may be interested to know I am still using the holder she gave me long ago. I often think of the day spent in your home on the hill.

Hope you will speak to us through our Corner page some time.

If those that braid rugs will finish every round they will see how much nicer they look. I have braided three since November first. The smallest was three yards and 30 inches around. Crocheted one and one is knit and braided. That makes five.

What do I do with so many? Give them away, to my children and children's children.

I think the eclipse of the sun was wonderful! Also the one of the moon Sunday evening at 6 o'clock.

I am sorry for those people that have been waiting since the sixth to be taken from this earth to realms of bliss, when they are obliged once more to work much harder than before. Their hopes were raised to such heights as they disposed of their earthly goods. They may learn we can not set the time. May the sick ones gain fast, and those afflicted in different ways have strength given them to endure.

ROXANNA WINCE.

ANSWERS ROLL CALL

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: My name has been absent so long I hardly dared to commence again. I will now say present to the roll call if not too late. The old saying is "better late than never."

Crimson Rambler: How are you this muddy weather? It is beginning to seem more like spring every day.

Lo: I saw by the paper that you had a bad cold and did not attend the last meeting. I also was disappointed. I trust you are better now and out of danger.

Calla Lily: I was very much disappointed at not being able to attend the last meeting. I heartily approve of your suggestions in the letter of the 31st and I think all ought to do their share. I for one shall not be lagging.

U. C. E.: Did you attend the meeting? I intended to go but got disappointed. How did the pills work that I recommended? Did you get results? Do you get many tokens nowadays?

Golden Glow, Nespa, Joan, Bumble Bee, True Blue: How are you all? I hope to have the sisters all meet with me in the near future.

Balsam Fir: I owe you a letter. Will answer soon. Well I see some one else wants to get the line, so, best wishes to the editor and all the sisters.

MAPLE LEAF, (July 11.)

GREETINGS FROM BUTTERFLY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: I thought it about time I wrote another short letter since I had such a nice time in Putnam at the Corner meeting.

Pines: I am happy to say I found my napkin when I arrived home.

Caro: I have a doll you made. I am not going to say how long I have had it for some people would call us old folks.

Daisy Dean: If you don't find that pocketbook you spoke of we can have that ride in the sedan just the same when the roads get settled.

Would like to meet with the Corner in Willimantic but the roads are so bad will have to wait for spring to come.

I think if Keziah Doolittle had been at E. K. in the fall at our meeting and eaten a piece of that lemon pie she would want to move back here.

Will have to stop writing now and like to church.

BUTTERFLY.

GREETINGS FROM RHODY LOUISE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I thought I would write a line to let you know I had not forgotten you I had a grand time at the No. 3 Social Corner picnic in Lebanon, when I went riding up through Columbia. Some scenery by the lakes or reservoirs. I wondered if any of the sisters lived there. Sorry to hear of H. M. L.'s death. They all have my sincere sympathy.

Olga: I think you would help entertain as well as being entertained.

Ethelyn: Hope you are all right. I hope every body is all right.

Dorinda: Hope you and mother are all right.

Best wishes to all.

RHODY LOUISE.

A WORD TO FARMERETTES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I know several of the sisters are farmerettes and have horses, so I am sending in a poem and I hope all the farmerettes will read and take heed.

I think it is a wonderful poem and it certainly is real.

PALEFACE.

CHATTY LETTER FROM LUCY ACORN

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: Hope it will be so I can come to the meeting in March.

I have been sick all winter with a terrible cough, did not go out doors for a whole month and in the meantime did not get two of my Social Corner, papers and when you are so sick and watch and wait for the mail man and then get no papers you can't feel very amiable.

Red Rose: Sister lives a mile or more from me and she takes the Courier, also, we telephone back and forth. I tell her my troubles about the paper and she has troubles too. Twice lately she has lost her paper. Last Saturday my paper had two wrappers, her address on the inside. That has happened twice.

I was pleased with all the nice cards the sisters sent me, also with the sweet little calendar, and I thank you all.

Crimson Rambler: You wrote about your plants in bloom. I have quite a few in bloom. I have a red sultanna and a pink one full of buds and blossoms. The plant is 32 inches high. I have single white petunias, a bunch of blossoms and white and blue morning glories. They are wonderful. The vines are so slender for such large blossoms. They only last a day.

Dorothy Bradford: I think it was four years ago you sent me the cactus through the mail, a tiny slip, and it is the first time it has blossomed.

Calla Lily: I too had a nice warm place to see the eclipse in my kitchen. It was wonderful. I smoked a whole pane of glass. The three planets at the right of the sun you could see so plain and everything seemed so near. The eclipse Sunday of the moon was great.

Annette: I have hooked in three rugs this winter.

Olive: I am sewing rags for a rug for our sale in the fall. Our club has a loom at the club house and we weave lots of rugs. We sell every one of them. We are working for the Red Cross nursing fund. We give them $200 every year, we made at our fair, and there have been less than ten members. I live a mile from the club house, but yet there just the same.

House Plants: Ten drops of oil of peppermint added to one gallon of water and used to water the house plants will eradicate the little black flies that fly around them and also the white worms.

LUCY ACORN.

USE FOR CROSS WORD PUZZLES AND COLORED PICTURES

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I wish to express my appreciation of the splendid contributions to the Corner in your various letters. So many useful hints, splendid recipes, poetry, kind thoughts and helpful greetings. I would like to become a member and think a small emblem pin would be of service in recognising members. I would suggest a circle containing 4 corners (east, south, north, and west) with rays to the center (12 in number representing the 12 months of the year.)

As our prison wardens have asked for cross-word puzzles for the prisoners, I cut out all puzzles that I find in newspapers and paste the puzzles in a ten cent blank book and the answers in another blank book, and send them to the warden. The puzzles are educational; keep the mind from thoughts of crime, and enlarge the vocabulary. Colored pictures out from advertisements may be pasted in similar books and sent to a children's hospital. They give much delight at small cost.

"I want to look at a pair of eyeglasses," said the young woman with a determined air.

"Yes madam," said the optician.

"While visiting in the country I made a very painful blunder which I never want to repeat."

"Indeed! Mistook a stranger for an acquaintance, perhaps?"

"No, not exactly that. I mistook a bumble bee for a blackberry."—Boston Transcript.

So did I last summer and was severely stung.

Prune Fritters: Soak 1 pound prunes 24 hours in water. Drain and remove pits, replacing with a nut meat. Dip prune in batter and fry in boiling lard, like crullers.

I will take as my penname.

ARIES (April 13.)

RESPONDING TO ROLL CALL

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is a long time since I wrote to the Corner, and I hope it is not too late to answer present to the roll call as I have not done so before.

Breeze: Was glad to see a letter from you a short time ago. Aunt E. was much intergsted in your recollections of going visiting when you were a little girl. She wonders if you came to W. that time.

Daisy Dean: I was very glad to find out "who was who." Do you remember when I used to be in your Sunday school class?

Bee: I was much interested last week in your inquiry about learning dressmaking by correspondence. I have taken the course in home dressmaking from the Woman's Institute at Scranton, Pa., and found it very helpful and instructive. I finished the course in December and received a diploma, the same as would be given from any school. The course has enabled me to make practically all of my own clothes, and last spring I made a coat, which I certainly would never have attempted had I not taken that course. I do not claim to have done any of the wonderful things that they tell of in their advertisements, but I will say that the course has helped me a lot. And it is surely a great saving to be able to make your own clothes in these days of high prices. If you are interested in taking the course and would care to send me your name and address, I would tell you more about it, or could forward your name and they would send you their circulars. I hope this little information will be of some help to you.

Best wishes to all the Corner sisters.

HOW SHE WAS RELATED

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Reading Rural Delivery's puzzle brought to my mind this one. How She was Related.

"You say, madam," said the bespectacled lawyer to the woman in the witness chair, that the defendant is sort of relation of yours. Will you please explain what you mean by that; just how are you related to the defendant.

The witness beamed upon the court and replied:

"Well, it is just like this. His first wife's cousin and my second husband's first wife's aunt married brothers named Jones, and they were cousins to my mother's aunt. Then again my grandmother on his mother's side and my grandfather on my mother's side were second cousins, and his step-father married my husband's step mother. After his father and my mother died, and his brother Joe and my husband's brother Harry married twin sisters. I ain't never figured out just how close related we are but I have always looked on him as sort of a cousin."

"Quite so," answered the lawyer. Your explanations are perfectly satisfactory—

I haven't seen Neighbor's letter, she was going to write so that L. C. G. could read it. Why, Neighbor, you were always a woman who told the truth! Your word was as good as a bond. Keep up your reputation, even if mine is slipped. You needn't write a long one if you don't care too but if you do we'll be like the man in the congregation who listened to the eloquent preacher whose discourse was very lengthy. Presently the stranger whispered to the man at his side, (evidently one of the old members) "How long has he been preaching?" Thirty or forty years, I think answered the elderly man; I don't know exactly."

"I'll stay then said the stranger. He must be most through.

WHEN TROUBLED WITH NOSE BLEED

Dear Corner Members: An occasional attack of nosebleed the physician says "can be disregarded but when they are frequent or excessive a physician should be consulted."

One who is subject to nosebleed should avoid excitement, and should live as quiet and regular a life as possible. When the attack occurs there is no necessity for fright unless it should continue a long time. Simple remedies will give relief usually. Unless there is faintness the patient should sit quietly with the head thrown back. Do not blow the nose and avoid coughing.

I know of a party subject to these attacks (very violent) who gets relief by putting an ice pack on the back of her neck, holding a lump of ice against her bleeding nostral and keeping cracked ice in her mouth.

Keeping the arms above the head will often cure, with no other remedy. Bathing the hands and feet in very hot water is also good, or a little salt put up the nostril. I have known a wad of white paper pushed up under the lip to give relief.

If the bleeding continues beyond a short time loosen the clothing and remove tight collars.

L. C. G.: Have sent album to you.

If the Social Corner sisters who write me would give me their addresses or if when sending cards would just give an address we would not have to bother our Social Corner editor.

I presume it is natural that one should say "Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner" who has more patience than our Social Corner Editor? I would like to know. I certainly couldn't get any of the men in my family to read my letters. They say my writing is all mixed up and they don't begrudge the Social Corner editor his job. Now suppose he was like the editor who spoke to the budding poet. Editor said, is this your first effort? Budding poet and yes sir. Is it worth while? Editor, with emotion, it's worth $5. If you promise not to write anything more for publication until after this is printed. I want your entire output, you understand.

Budding poet, I'll promise that all right. When will it be printed?

The Editor said, "Never while I am alive."

Nellie Fly: You'll never regret having your carpet dyed. I think. I am mightily concerned as to how you will get along with it. The way that I had the last one dyed was to have the carpet cleaned with an electric cleaner, then took several folds of cheese cloth and wrung it out from 2 quarts of water into which there was one tablespoon ammonia, 1 teaspoon salt nature 1 tablespoon borax and rubbed it around in rotary motion. It will have a tendency to make the nap stand up and the carpets will have to be wet when dyed. You can dye matting the same way only that should be washed in salt and water.

TWO INTERESTING GAMES

Dear Sisters: I will send in a good recipe for making fun for little folks—a novel and interesting game. The players sit round a table, upon the center of which is placed a pack of post cards from which the descriptive titles have been previously carefully erased and arranged face downward. The players then, one by one, turn up a card and endeavor to guess what it represents; if the one who turns it up fails to guess it correctly it is passed around for identification and the one who succeeds in naming it retains the card; if it remains unidentified it is thrown aside, and the next player proceeds to draw a card in her turn. At the end of the game the player who has the largest number of cards in her possession, and has so proved to be the most ingenious guesser, is awarded a small prize.

Now I have given a game for the older girls and boys. I will give a game for the younger ones. Cut a picture of some kind out. If it is a girl after cutting the girl out cut off her head, her feet, in fact cut the entire picture up and paste it on blotting paper or card board. Then place this under a flatiron (the edges never will curl then.) When it has been pasted on the blotting paper or card board cut out all the pieces, carefully cutting inside the heavy blackline outlining each piece. Now fit them all together and find out what the picture is.

HUBBY'S CHUM.

CUP CAKES

Dear Editor and Sisters: I hope it is not too late to wish you all a happy new year. Have not had a chance to write before, but I read most of the Corner page if it's only on Monday. We are having such nice helpful letters, and more than a page full.

J. E. T.: I have put your letter in last week's paper away for future use. Hubby has indigestion quite often and as we are over two miles from a doctor it takes quite a while to get here especially at night and it seems he always has it through the night. Will try your remedy next time.

Lo: Many thanks for card at Christmas. I never knew you were sick until I read your letter in the Corner.

Crimson Rambler: Received your card. Thanks.

Here is a recipe I use quite a lot. Hope some will try it and have as good luck as I do.

Cup Cakes: Rub one cup of shortening, half butter and half lard, with one cup of brown sugar. Add one cup molasses, one cup cold water, one cup raisins, two level teaspoons soda, one of cinnamon, two of vanilla, one well beaten egg, five cups of flour. Drop from spoon or bake in cup cake tins. Frost with chocolate frosting. Fine! Hope all the sick members are on the gain.

GRANDMA GRAY'S ANNIVERSARY

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: As I am all alone this eve I thought it was a good time to write a few lines. I am so lame I do not go out evenings very often. I am feeling sad over the death of a dear cousin and a few weeks ago two of my dear schoolmates—companions of my youthful days—were taken by death. I shall miss their nice cheering letters and postcards which always came to me on my birthday, also Christmas. Our only consolation is the thought that our loss is their gain. I sometimes wonder why I am left and so many younger and more useful taken, but I suppose my work is not all done yet and I am permitted to begin a new year with its pure clean pages. I hope I can remember often the verse I read yesterday.

"Speak a shade more kindly than the year before;
Pray a little oftener, love a little more,
Cling a little closer to the Father's love
Then life below shall liker grow to the life above."

It seems good to see the Social Corner page so full and such fine letters. I enjoy those telling of recollections of early days—the happy days of our childhood we never forget. Now I suppose you will call me an old woman. I shall be 76 years young Saturday, Februray 14. One sister tells us to be careful what we write, but I surely cannot find fault with anyone. I have many dear friends and all are kind and good to me.

I hope the sisters all saw the eclipse. It certainly was a wonderful sight, something we never will see again, and last evening we saw the eclipse of the moon many are predicting awful cold and stormy weather but don't let us shiver over it until it comes. Tonight the moon is shining in all its glory and we will enjoy it while it lasts.

The coasting and skating have been fine and only my lameness has kept me from being with the crowds to enjoy it.

I have pieced and tried one comforter and sent it off. Am now knitting a rug. Tending fires is quite a job on cold windy days and takes much of our time.

I wonder if Ma of Greene Gables is making squash pies this winter. Thank Kuchie for remembering me. If I knew her address would send her a card. I am glad one remembers me.

I like Bon Ami's letter and her bit of poetry is fine. If we all follow its advice it will make the world a better place to live in.

I want to thank the one who sent me the pretty calendar.

I enjoyed Persis' letter and her reminiscenes of Westminster and the parsonage I used to visit there when Elder Caster lived there. Write every week Persis. And now hubby has returned from the entertainment and wonders why I am sitting up so late. So will say good night and happy dreams for all the sisters and God bless and keep you safely through all the year

MANY FRIENDSHIPS THROUGH THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: I intended to send my thanks for the pretty calendar, that seemed to be chosen just to my taste, before January was over, but next Saturday, when the letters are published will complete the first half of February.

The writing of letters seems to be quite a task for most people. One relative of mine says it is a day's work for him to write a letter. I have seen the time, not very far back when one letter a day was my limit physically and other days when mental depression just seems to stop the pen from writing anything at all to send in the form of a friendly letter. But the Social Corner evidences the other side, the brighter one, of many ready pens and letters that are a joy.

I have thought considerably lately since attending some Social Corner gatherings of this correspondence. The members seem to find themselves congenial even at the first introduction. Our loved Windham county historian, Miss Ellen D. Larned, lived on our street and was a loyal superter of the church which I attend. She was especially strong for the observance of Fast day and the weekly prayer meeting. One evening coming from prayer meeting when she was so feeble she always needed some one to see her safely to her door, I remember her quoting, "Familiarity breeds contempt" adding "only with the contemptible." With many familiarity brings respect and love.

With all best wishes to the Bulletin in all its departments and its big family of readers. We do appreciate its high standards shown editorially. It is the most sanely and sincerely religious newspaper that I have ever read. We appreciate the privilege of sharing in it in our Corner.

RECOVERED FROM SERIOUS ILLNESS

Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: The Christmas season seemed more enjoyable than ever this year with all the Christmas carols and sweet music that was wafted in from the air on the radio. It all passed so quickly. New Year's day was here and gone too before we could hardly realize it. I surely intended to send my best wishes for 1925 to the editor and sisters of the Social Corner but before I had the opportunity to express my gratitude for all of the Christmas gifts I was overtaken by a very serious illness and am more than thankful to be alive and able to take up the duties of life again.

Many of the names in the Corner are new but quite a few I recognize.

Crimson Rambler: I hope you will find a way to get your radio. One of my big boys built ours. It is a three tube set with an ambassador hook up. We enjoy it so much. He wants to start on a larger set soon.

I had a fine view of the eclipse from my window. Hope none of the sisters missed the wonderful sight. Best wishes to all.

PLEASED WITH CORNER MEETING AND JOINS

Social Corner Editor: Through the courtesy of one of the sisters of the Social Corner I was invited to attend Club No 3's meeting of Feb. 4th. It was a pleasure to note the interest taken by all members of the Corner present. Everyone seemed jolly.

The dinner was par excellent and everybody seemed to enjoy it.

GREETINGS FROM BARBARA

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Sorry I could not write before but sickness prevented. I love to read the letters very much. Have not been away from the house but three times since I met at East Killingly, so you see I am one of the shut-ins.

Twice Twenty and Care: I thank you very much for the Christmas cards you sent me.

Peggy Alden: I hope Ma's arm is all right now and you are feeling well.

1492: Do you wear your yallow bow on your panch now.

A KEROSENE PLASTER

Social Corner Friends: First of all I want to thank a Social Corner Member for the calendar which I received. It is very pretty and I have it hanging over the table where I sit at my work and I enjoy looking at it and wish I had some roses like those in the picture right now. I dearly love flowers and would have them in the house all the time if I could afford to buy them. At the present time. I have some carnations which came from the church. Each sunday evening the flowers which have been in the vases are sent to the sick and shut ins, so quite often I have some beautiful flowers to look at and enjoy. I have a few plants and there is a begonia in bloom and a white hyacinth. The hyacinth is one which was brought to me by one of my neighbors last spring and it was resting all summer. Last fall I planted it in a pot again, and it has just bloomed on a very short stem. A friend tells me she had a hyacinth bulb growing in water and it was much better than one in dirt. I always supposed that there was a difference in them, that thoses which grew and bloomed in dirt would not grow in water. Now I am going to take a bulb which is growing in dirt and set it in water and see if it will bloom.

Ma of Greene Gables: I have a slip from your begonia, one of those which you sent to the bazaar. My friend Mrs. R., bought it and gave it to me. It is growing fine now, but at first it didn't seem to like living with me.

Deliah Deal: The pattern of babies bootees which you sent to me has proved to be very useful.

I knitted six pairs and gave them away. Now I am making some for friends who can't knit. Some of them (bootees) will go to Switzerland and six pair will go to Canada. Last summer two of my crocheted yokes were sent to England. So you see my handiwork does some traveling after it leaves me.

I must tell the sisters about the bag I have made. I had two small bags crocheted of the hemp rope like those which were carried so much three or four years ago, and as they had not been used at all for the last two years I thought it was time to get them in use. So I raveled them and crocheted the material over into a large square bag. I made a long strip and then sewed edges together, chocheted some handles on and have a fine shopping bag, if I want to use it. But at present it hangs back of the stove full of papers.

I want to thank Ethelyn for her letter on uses of salt. Have pasted that and also Blue Baby's letter Uses of Kerosene in my scrapbook.

I have used kerosene a great deal for a severe cold. Spread vaseline on cloth, then pour some kerosene over it and apply to the chest. Sometimes have used one between the shoulders also and it certainly shows results in a short time. One time I was taking care of a woman who had bronchitis and was threatened with pneumonia. As she was in such distress trying to breathe, I tried the vaseline and kerosene and in a few minutes she was breathing easier, that horrible rattle in the throat stopped, and the next morning she was much improved. She has often said she believes the kerosene plaster saved her life. I will stop now for the editor will surely lose his patience with me if I write more.

JACK'S WIFE.

EAT AND GET THIN

Dear Social Corner: I started this letter entitled, Getting thin without sacrificing the eats, two or three weeks ago, and as it was the time of the sun's eclipse I thought fat eclipse might be a suitable name for it. But just as I was getting on with my letter, I read that the world was coming to an end Friday at midnight. As the Bulletin is not due until Saturday morning I concluded what is the use? So please, Bee, accept my apology. You see why it was held up in the air and I did not send it in sooner. I was to be true to our Social Corner.

After an exhaustive study on the subject concerning stout people, the best formula, I can make out is; Masticate your food until there is no pleasure in it then spit it out, for what does not go into your stomach nature knows nothing about and without the heavenly hash that you have spit out she can not keep you stout. Thus you can eat get all the pleasure derived from eating, and get thin.

After reading my formula my brother fell to the floor. But these men! I never did understand them.

Have you read about the doings in Kentucky where a man is a prisoner in a cave held there by a 2000 pound boulder on his foot? Some foot I must say. But instead of his friends going way down into the cave with pads and food and coffee, to make him comfortable we Corner members would have taken along a hatchet and chopped off his foot left that to the boulder and hauled the rest of him out of there. What is one foot more or less? We could have saved some of him anyway, and with a little patching and sewing around the ankle he could have been kept alive and be alive now.

As it is he has been there nine days and dead or alive he has been growing thin sure without the pleasure of eating for as the entrance to the cave closed up, he has been entombed without food for four days and that is long enough for him to show some signs of getting thin. Ah, well! Life is short anyway. "To do something with nothing," which at one time seemed impossible to me, and, "Short cut to your goal," were set forth in the request of a member who signed herself in a letter a few weeks ago. K—The Unknown. (I beg her pardon if I have not quoted her exactly.)

I have tried to do it and to tell how it can be done. But when another member advises how to make a morning blouse out of your husband's cast off shirt, I say goodnight, the pace is too much for me. Life is too short.

POPULAR SONGS OF YEARS AGO

Dear Editor: Several weeks ago there was a request in the Social Corner for the words of the song White Wings. I was not able to find a copy, but have sent you the words as they were taken from a victrola. I think they are correct, though they may not be absolutely. This song was popular 40 years ago.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor and Social Corner Members: I enjoy reading the Corner letters so much, please may I join. Will take as my pen name.

RCA, (June 6.)

GREETINGS FROM WHIRLWIND

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: I wish to thank the sister for my very pretty calendar. My, how busy you must be getting all those calendars ready for the sisters. I see Calla Lily has all of hers sled away. I passed one on to a friend who was sick in the hospital and I think she was pleased with it. Have not heard from her since I sent it to her. Will tell you how she likes it later. I thought it so nice I wanted to share it.

Deliah Deal: I thank you for your kind thought of me. It was very pretty and I appreciate it.

Joan, Diana, Airy, Balsam Fir: Have sent you the promised letters at last. Were you surprised? Hope you will not get tired reading them.

Jennie and Olive: See you were at State Grange and took two degrees. I took them a long time ago. Isn't it a pretty piece of work? I want the seventh and will take it when it comes this way again.

Dom Pedro: Hope your arm is better. You tumble around as bad as myself. Tumble is my middle name.

Handsome: Have not seen anything from you for a long time. Where are you these days? Busy, I suppose.

Twice Twenty: I owe you a letter and will try to write soon. How do you like the snow storm?

Honeraytkaytinebusqui: Some name, you have chosen. How in the world could you have done it? Have been trying to figure out what it means but am stumped.

Keziah Doolittle: Glad to see a letter from you again.

Calla Lily: I belong to George C. Somers Temple in Meriden, Conn., No. 33 and am Ex. Sent Jr. Have belonged three years this coming April. I wonder if any of the sisters belong to the Daughters of Liberty. Here are a few conundrums for the sisters to puzzle out.

1. How many peas are there in a pint?

2. What are the first signs of age in a comb?

3. Why is a tramp like white flannel?

4. Why is the letter H so important to a man's ear?

5. Why does a horse never pay toll?

6. How many insects does it take to make a land-lord?

Answers next letter.

WHIRLWIND.

DUTY OF THOSE AT CLUB MEETINGS

Dear Editor and Social Sisters: In reading the Corner page of Feb. 7 I was pleased to see there are others that agree with me. Thinking over our last meeting it reminded me more of a restaurant than a Social Corner meeting.

How many stop to think of all the work there is in preparing a dinner for so many, and try to have things satisfactory, the tables to look well and the food to be appetizing?

I have been a member for about six years and there are a great number who have never offered to be hostess or even a helper. It is not so hard to be a hostess if you have some one who is willing to help do their share. I think it [illegible] turns and not let the work fall on the same ones so often. [illegible] we to take turns, there are so many of us, we would never have to work more than twice a year.

In this new year let us all take an interest and do our part.

You all know the old saying, "Let the willing horse carry the load," but we are not going to do like that. We like to have new members and see our Corner grow. We also would have them do as we have done. Come as a guest, choose a name, write to the Corner, then the principle thing is to bring food. Where there are so many it takes lots of food to go around, and we all appreciate a fine dinner. Last, but not least, lend a helping hand.

In choosing a name, do not try to get the funniest one you can find as you get to be an older member you will regret it.

One member said to me, "When I chose my name I thought it was fun, now I thinking of changing it." Let's all get names we can be proud of and always wish to keep. There are lots of pretty names, flowers, birds, Indian names, some are very beautiful. Who not some one take the beautiful name of our city, Rose of New England? I think I have never seen that chosen.

At our last meeting the tables looked very pretty with the valentine napkins, and the hostesses with caps to match.

Thanks to True Blue and Lahleet our dinner was extra good. I heard a person say was worth 50 cents instead of 15 cents.

Then the entertainment committee has such hard work to get any one to take part. The same ones do their part all the time. There are so many if interest was taken we could make out a fine program and help Chocolate. Now let's try. I think she gets very discouraged at times, cannot we help with a verse, poem, reading, or those who can by playing and singing? I am sure among so many some one can play for us.

With best of wishes for the corner,

I am

ONE OF THE FEBRUARY HOSTESSESS.

CRIB QUILTS AND PILLOWS

Dear Sisters: Suppose you are all busy at your favorite winter work. I have made in the last few weeks, two crib quilts of outing flannel pieces, sewed crazy fashion to blocks of old sheeting. At first I basted the pieces on nearly as they came and after joining the blocks together, went over each seam with fancy stitches done in different colors of silkateen. I lined that quilt with flannelette. The second one I did not make as fussy, but just stitched the pieces to the sheeting and lined it with odd pieces of suiting. I made each one long enough so that when they are not needed as crib quilts they will be allright to lay over the foot of the large beds for foot comfort. With the fine pieces that were too small to use I made a fine soft sofa pillow. I have made three other pillows from pieces of percale left after cutting out the best for quilt tops. I was surprised at finding these pillows quite soft as the pieces were stiff. I found enough small pieces of voile and the like too small to make into anything, to make a small pillow. Then I cut up an old sweater that had gone beyond recall and made another large, soft pillow. They will be fine for the porch next summer. I am cutting up old overalls and skirts to weave into rugs later. We have a class in basket making that I am very enthusiastic about. On the whole I find enough to do to keep out of mischief.

As I write this word comes to me that Eloise, to whom I asked you to write last week has passed on. A dear neighbor! I am so sorry.

HARD ON HOSTESS AND HELPERS

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: By the way the Social Corner page looks since the new year, I think the Cornerites have made the resolution to write often. Hope they keep it up.

Bonie: We were pleased to see you at the Buckingham if only for a short time. We all had a very nice time and a fine dinner.

True Blue: You made a fine hostess and I am sure it was hard for all the helpers when tables are laid for from 75 to 80 people at first, and from 15 to 25 at the second. It means some work for the hostess and her helpers and still they seldom make a complaint even when very tired. Still it seems to me that it is getting to be too much to have so many come who have no interest in the Corner except to get a cheap dinner and then go. We make all members welcome, new and old, and each has the privilege to bring a friend, or one who may be visiting at their home, as has been stated before.

Cypress: You have my sympathy in the loss of your little one, but try to look up and think "there is a little angel up in heaven waiting for me." Hope all the sick will soon be well. Best wishes.

A HOSTESS.

A FAIR IN FLORIDA

Dear Social Corner Friends: First I want to thank A Social Corner Member for the very pretty calendar. It is very kind to remember so many each year.

We are having a pleasant time this year, as we have four cousins with us.

Last week we attended the Polk county fair at Winter Haven, a pretty little town, 32 miles from here.

It was a free fair to advertise the different fruits of Florida. There were 250 booths, arranged in rows along one side of the main streets and around the little park and a vaudeville in the park and a midway and band kept a big crowd interested. Some of the booths were filled with all kinds of merchandise like the northern fairs, but most of them were artistically arranged with all kinds of southern fruit and flowers, and made a lovely picture. All kinds of oranges and grapefruit, tangerines, mangerines, guaves, kumquats, and pawpaw.

There were also many real estate booths, with restful chairs and smiling agents to lure you in to talk about buying a building lot in the town.

Florida is growing fast, and every where the companies advertise to carry you free to see their property, and each agent has a different scheme to get a crowd there—a band or entertainment, free ice cream or lunch.

Today we drove to Mulberry, a town about 10 miles from here, to see a phosphate mine. They have big cranes to dig away the sand and dump it in big mounds, then the water is pumped out. The phosphate is light and yellow, and is hauled to a big building and sifted and refined, ready to ship away. For miles, all one can see is big mounds of sand, and pits filled with water, where the phosphate has been taken out.

The weather has been cool lately but when, we look out and see roses in bloom and hear the mocking birds singing, we realize that we are fortunate to be away from the ice and snow in the north. Today the thermometer was about 80, and as we have bought strawberries for ten cents a box, it seemed like the good old summer time.

Practical Polly: Hope to hear good news soon.

Lorettia: I presume you received my letter. My sympathy to all those who are in trouble and sickness, and greeting to all from

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Sisters of the Social Corner: I say good morning.

J. E. T.: They say you must follow suit or trump. I see you followed suit, saving your trump no doubt, for March 21st. How about it? Do you intend to pay a visit to Hillcrest on that day? Sarah says, hurrah for J. E. T. I'll meet her and Joan if you just say the word. You can have some sauerkraut and there won't be five heaping spoons of red pepper in it either.

Forget-me-not: I am wondering if I talked with you up at Camp Wa-Wog one day this past summer. Please let me know? Have I guessed right or not?

Lorna: You see I wrote this letter after you left Sunday. How is that knitting coming on?

Maple Leaf: I see you have mastered yours allright. Not such a hard task after all

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, Feb. 13.—Resumption of trading in the stock market today after the holiday failed to develop a definite price trend, the main body of stocks moving within irregular limits, while violent and erratic fluctuations continued in the high priced specialties. Business was reduced in volume owing to the absence of several large operators, the day's transactions approximating one and one-quarter million shares.

Revival of speculative interest in the oil shares, based on a further increase in Mid-Continent crude and Middle Western gasoline prices was one of the day's features. Several of the petroleum issues moved up 1 or 2 points in the early trading, but many of the gains were reduced to fractions in the usual week-end profit taking which swept over the general list towards the close.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was again the individual feature. It opened two points lower at 218, dropped to 205 with one dip of seven points between sales, soared to 228 and then slipped back to 223 1-2 for a net gain of 3 1-2 points on the day. Nash Motors broke 15 points to 250 and then rallied to 263. Commercial Solvents A and B fluctuated within a range of 15 points, closing at 175 and 174 for net gains of 5 and 7 points, respectively. Savage Arms was run up nearly 3 1-2 points to 95 1-2 and then fell back a point from the top.

Strength in American Can, which established another record top at 166 7-8, closing slightly below that figure for a net gain of more than 5 points, was the outstanding development in the industrial group. Baldwin showed a net gain of more than one point at 132 3-4. U. S. Steel common closed fractionally lower at 126 and Studebaker recorded a nominal gain at 45 1-2.

Air reduction jumped 3 points to 95 1-2. Other strong spots in the industrial group included Allis Chalmers, American Agricultural Chemical, American Sumatra Tobacco, Bayuk Cigars, Consolidated Cigars, Associated Dry Goods, Commercial Investment Trust, Eaton Axle and Spring, Goodyear Tire, H. R. Mallinson, New York Air Brake, Sears-Roebuck, Tidewater Oil and Twin City Rapid Transit all up from 2 to 3 points.

Railroad shares were reactionary. "Nickel Plate" reacted 2 1-2 points to 101 on profit taking. Renewed heaviness of the St. Paul issues, the preferred dropping more than a point to 22, reflected speculative uneasiness over the road's plans for refunding its heavy maturities this year. Southern Pacific, which opened 3-4 higher at 105 1-4, cancelled its gain on the announcement that only the regular dividend had been declared, setting at rest rumors that a special distribution was coming at this time.

Call money opened at 3 1-2 per cent., but advanced to 4 in the early afternoon, closing at that figure. The time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates were reactionary. Demand sterling sold nearly half a cent lower around $4.77 1-4 and French francs broke about 10 points to 5.36 1-4 cents. Moderate recessions took place in most of the other European rates.

A COUGH REMEDY WITHOUT OPIATES

Many cough preparations contain some one or more harmful drugs which are added to take the place of opiates. None of these narcotic substitutes have ever been used in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The name of every ingredient is plainly printed on every carton. You know what you are taking when you take Foley's. It clings to the throat. Good for old and young. You have a cough, why not try it? GIVES INTERESTING LECTURE ON HISTORICAL NOVEL

Rev. Dr. J. V. Moldenhawer, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church at Albany, N. Y., held the close attention of his audience Friday evening at the community house as he delivered the final lecture in the course under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the United Congregational church. Dr. Moldenhawer spoke upon History and the Historical Novel, sketching in an informing way the value of a large number of historical novels upon the ancient, medieval and modern periods. Incidentally he remarked upon the historical information or rather mis-information which the young people of today are absorbing through the movies. The speaker said he enjoyed a good motion picture as well as anyone, but the frequent introduction of unnecessary characters and extraneous incidents in historical motion pictures is giving our young people today all manner of very queer historical information through the films. The historical novel, Dr. Moldenhawer said, is the best possible means by which to interest children in the past.

The lecturer was introduced by Rev. A. H. Abbott. Before the lecture, supper was served for the brotherhood members, with ladies of the church also attending.

MISSIONARY RALLY FOR NORWICH C. E. UNION

A missionary rally of the Norwich C. E. Union will be held Sunday evening, Feb. 15th at 7.30 o'clock in the Norwich Town church. She has had wide experience in young people's work and is a pleasing speaker.

FUNERAL SERVICES FRIDAY FOR JUDGE GARDINER GREENE

With services of simple dignity, in accord with his life and tastes, final honors were paid Judge Gardiner Green Friday afternoon. There was a service of prayer for the family at 2.15 at his home, 328 Washington street, this being conducted by the archdeacon, Rev. J. Eldred Brown, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, Norwich.

At 3 o'clock public services were held at Christ church. Members of the New London County Bar association stood in open ranks, through which the body was borne into the church. Here the sentence and psalms were read by Archdeacon Brown, the lesson and the prayers being by the suffragan bishop of Connecticut, Rt. Rev. E. Campion Acheson, of Middletown.

Organist Arthur E. Hall played the Chopin Funeral March for the solemn processional. The vested choir of twenty voices sang "For All Thy Saints Who from Their Labors Rest" and later gave "Abide With Me." The recessional was "grave movement in G major," from Bach.

A pall of spring flowers concealed the casket. Forms and sprays in magnificent tribute, represented the sympathy and the deference of professional associates, organizations, clients, college and other friends, relatives and the townspeople generally. In the assemblage at the church were state, city and town officials, the directors and officers of the Dime Savings bank, of which Judge Greene was president, business men and acquaintances from near and far.

The honorary bearers were the associate justices of the supreme court and the judges of the superior court: Chief Justice George W. Wheeler, Bridgeport; Associate Justice Howard J. Curtis, Stratford, and Judges of the Superior Court Frank D. Haines, Portland; John W. Banks, Bridgeport; Allyn L. Brown, Norwich; Christopher L. Avery, Groton, and George E. Hinman, Willimantic. The active bearers, from the county bar association, were Charles L. Stewart, Arthur M. Brown, George Houghton Gilman, Henry H. Pettis and Andrew Davies of Norwich and C. Hadlai Hull of New London.

No eulogy was pronounced and none was necessary, in the church with which Judge Greene and his family had been so long, so closely, so faithfully and so liberally identified.

Burial was in the Greene family plot in Yantic cemetery, the committal being by Bishop Acheson and Archdeacon Brown.

The funeral directors were The Henry Allen & Son company. At the church the flowers were arranged by Ernst.

Among those in attendance at the funeral were Burton Mansfield of New Haven, State's Attorney Charles E. Searls and Mrs. Searls from Pomfret, William Jeffreys, Boston, George S. but have just broken it this evening. Now I am using a steel pen and I keep forgetting to dip it into the ink. Can't write decent with it anyway, so my letter will be short. (Guess our editor will be glad I broke my pen.)

I want to thank a Social Corner Member for the pretty calendar I recieved. It's my favorite color, and a picture of children, and everyone who knows me knows I love the "kiddies." One thing I do not love and thats this horrible walking. We have now the ground covered with ice and I am so scared for fear I will fall. Nearly everybody wears creepers but even so all are mighty careful about "stepping out." How I wish I could spend the winters in the south! This morning while slipping and sliding along the street I was wishing I was in Florida then I remembered what I have been told about the snakes being so numerous in the south and I decided snakes were as bad as ice, so I might as well be contented with what I have got. I hate ice on the ground but I hate a snake worse.

OLD TIME SEWING BIRDS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I want to send my thanks for favors received from several sisters: To Hope Cobweb, for poem requested and to L. P. U. for poem sent for my benefit. Also thanks for the dose of Free Air. I have been feeling better ever since. I have been enjoying the letters of old reminiscences.

The letter of Evelyn Burr brought to mind the church in Newent which I first attended when a small child. Some of the old gentlemen would walk slowly up the aisle to the front seats, and if they had on squerky shoes, how I did love to hear them.

Then the letter of Nema, describing her shaker, reminded me of the ones I used to wear, and I think I didn't have much liking for them. When I got larger I had a slat sunbonnet. Ever have one of those, Nema? An old fashioned article which was used years ago, was a sewing bird. I haven't seen one for years, but always wished I had one. They were very handy for holding the work, when sewing by hand.

I have an autograph album nearly 50 years old.

Paula: I only had one New Year's card. Should I have had more?

SEASONABLE FOOD

Dear Cornerites: There is an old maxim, "A place for everything and everything in its place." To which I beg to add another, "A season for everything and everything in season."

For January there are: Fish—cod, crabs, eels, flounders, herrings, lobsters, oysters, perch, pike, sturgeon and porgies.

Poultry and game—Capons, chickens, ducks, wild-ducks, fowls, geese, patridges, pheasants, pigeons, (tame) pullets, rabbits (in the highest perfection.) snipes, turkeys (hen) woodcock.

Fruits—Apples, oranges.

Beef is in season all the year, but best in winter.

The parts of meat same as the names and situations of the joints and the method of cutting up the carcases have been a source of mystery to me, until I asked a butcher who explained to me.

Beef fore quarter — Fore rib (five ribs); (middle ribs); chuck (three ribs) shoulder piede (top of fore lec); brisket (lower or belly part of the ribs); clod (fore shoulder blade, neck); shin (below the shoulder); chuck.

Hind quarter—Sirloin; rump; aitchbone—these are three divisions of the upper part of the quarter; buttock and mouse buttock, which divides the thigh; being pieces, joining buttock thick flank and thin flank (belly pieces) and leg, the sirloin and rump both sides from a baron. This has been a great help to me.

The established rule for boiling meat as regards time is to allow 15 minutes to each pound of meat if the boiling is rapid, and 20 minutes if slow. There are exceptions to this, for instance, ham and pork which require 20 to 25 minutes to the pound, and bacon nearly 20 minutes.

For solid joints allow 15 minutes to the pound, and I allow 10 to 20 minutes over. Of course it depends quite a little on the regularity of the fire.

Ham, 20 pound weight, requires 6:30 minutes.

A tongue (if dry) after soaking 4 hours, a tongue out of pickle, 2 1-2 to 3 hours, a neck of mutton, 1 hour and 30 minutes, a chicken, 20 minutes, a large fowl, 45 minutes, a capon, 35, a pigeon 15.

POETRY

IN PRAISE OF ST. VALENTINE.

Of good St. Valentine I sing,
And all his tender arts;
This votive wreath to him I bring,
Kink Emperor of Hearts.
And Cupid with his bow half drawn
Will join the festive lay,
And press with me the springing lawn
This February day.

Bucolic themes let some pursue,
Or harp in Grasmere's vale;
Let Tuscan heavens echo to
The storied song or tale;
I rather would relate the truth;
Excelling fancy's page,
Of him who binds the willing youth
A captive till old age!

While Venus guide along the blue
Her doves with ribboned reins,
And mating birds their vows renew
In softly warbled strains;
My soul will break the pensive spell
That bound it far too long,
And with a fervid rapture tell
The beauty of love's song.

No "time filed phrase" I can rehearse.
But this my critic knows:
I miss the march of Milton's verse,
The grace of Hugo's prose;
Though lacking still scholastic ease,
Ambition's meed is mine,
If these poor lines a moment please
My dearest Valentine!

RAIN-DROPS.

O little boy at the window-pane,
Come out and play, come out and play!
(Thus sang the sparkling drops of rain
Toward the close of the summer day.)
The wind calls gently down the lane
And shyly buffets the standing grain;
A rivulet flows in the open drain
And leaf-ships sail away.

O dancing men on the window-sill,
They keep me housed on days like these.
I would gladly follow you over the hill
And where the brook roars by the mill.
When I'm grown and can follow my own will
I shall play wherever I please.

O man who was once a boy (cried the rain),
O boy grown tall, with hair grown gray,
Come out and dance with us down the lane;
For who's to forbid, and who's to restrain?
Alas! (quoth the man at the weeping pane),
Their faces have gone but their ghosts remain,
And I've grown too old for play.

OPTIMISTIC REPORTS FROM COLLINS RESCUE WORKERS

They Have Discovered Crevice Leading to an Unknown Destination and Sound Tests Have Been Pronounced Reassuring—Drift From the Shaft Has Disclosed a Natural Cave—Exploration Has Been Halted to Permit Timbering the Crevice—Excavating Was Susepnded for Six Hours Yesterday.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 15—(By A. P.) -Sand Cave miners engaged in the work of rescuing Flyod Collins from his sixteen day entrapment discovered a possible limestone crevice this afternoon leading to an unknown destination after they had completed a five-foot tunnel to the northwest of the shaft.

Crawling through the tunnel beyond the timbered portion of the lateral, miners went downward into a passageway described as two feet square until they were more than 12 feet from the shaft proper. Further exploration was halted to permit timbering the crevice.

Those underground at the time expressed the opinion that the newly found crevice led to the immense cavern which Collins said he had discovered and which is understood to lie directly behind the point of his imprisonment.

The work of releasing Collins from his boulder trap will be simplified if it is possible to approach him from the rear. Workmen and the men upon whom responsibility for Collins' recovery has left a marked impression, frankly were more optimistic than for several days. The discovery was described as the most encouraging development since the first lateral in the shaft was begun.

Samples of limestone from the natural passage were brought to the surface and eagerly examinede in daylight. The specimens indicated that the service at one time had been a waterway, according to Dr. W. D. Funkheuser, zoologist of the University of Kentucky.

One side of the crevice showed solid limestone as far as it was explored. The other was composed of loose rock and some muck which will necessitate the entire passage being timbered.

The drift excavated from the shaft had been timbered for five feet when the natural cave was discovered. At that point the crevice was found to deviate slightly from the original line of the timbering. Workmen pushed themselves seven and one-half feet more before they were recalled. Meanwhile no further evacuation was being done in the bottom of the shaft. The official statement given out at 5 15 p. m. follows:

"The total progress of the lateral heading is seven feet. Excavation conditions were unchanged and are very encouraging. More definite signs of the anticipated subterranean cavern had been found and it is hoped that that avenue developed by the core drill is not more than six feet away and probably five feet lower than the floor of the later heading.

"Sound tests between three man in Sand Cave at a point estimated 15 feet from Collins and a party at the end of the lateral head in the shaft were reassuring as a check upon previous calculations.

"Those in the sand cave party were Mike Brenner, Cincinnati, John Simmons, Louisville and Lieutenant Ben Wells, Bowling Green. Those in the lateral party werse Albert Marshall, Danville, Everett Maddox, Central City, N. T. Carmichael, Kentucky Rock, Ky., and Andrew Collins, Kewanee, Illinois.

Collins expressed himself satisfied as to the correctness of the statements made concerning the location of the shaft and the method of procedure. The next few hours will be spent in timbering the sections already open."

Carmichael, who is in charge of the rescue workers, came smiling up the incline from the shaft to the rescue camp with M. E. S. Posey, executive secretary of the Kentucky highway commission. Seepage from all sides increased today to such an extent that it was found imperative to install a pump to avoid further delay in bailing water out of the shaft. The pump threw a steady stream down into the valley all day some distance from the shaft.

RESCUE WORK WAS SUSPENDED SIX HOURS

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 15—(By the A. P.)—No progress has been made during the last six hours in the rescue shaft headed toward Floyd Collins natural prison. "Due to dirt falls and necessary timber work," said an official bulletin issued at 8 o'clock tonight.

The official statement went on to say:

"The total distance of the lateral heading is now seven feet and we are about ready to drive ahead. Material encountered is still limestone boulder formation, very loosely formed and difficult to hold.

"It is now thought necessary to continue heading at least four feet further before starting downward into the limestone roof of the avenue in order to clear slides and broken formation immediately behind the shaft of the cave entrance side.

"Work tonight will be slow and tedious on account of the dangerous ground but barring unforeseen calamity, it is to be expected that the avenue shown by the core drill may be reached by tomorrow.

R. N. Lambie, chief mine inspector of West Virginia, accompanied W. H. Jones, chief mine inspector of Kentucky, on a visit to the Sand Cave shaft this afternoon.

YESTERDAY'S DEVELOPMENTS IN COLLINS RESCUE WORK

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 15—(By the A. P.)—Today's developments in the Collins rescue effort included:

Discovery of a natural passage seven feet from the shaft which may lead to the tunnel where Collins is imprisoned.

Further sound tests between parties in Sand Cave and in the shaft support previous estimates that the shaft was located near Collins.

Ten o'clock tonight marked exactly sixteen and one half days since Collins was imprisoned in the cave by an accidental fall of debris that caught and held him captive by his ankles.

Discovery of latest underground passage had aroused hopes of workmen in soon reaching Collins, to a higher pitch than has been noticeable for several days.

Officials forced to install a pump in shaft to draw out water seeping in due to heavy rains last night.

After shaft reached depth of 55-feet workmen began to excavate at an angle of forty-five degrees instead of continuing straight on down.

PHLEGMATIC TEMPERAMENT IN GOOD STEAD FOR COLLINS

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Floyd Collins' phlegmatic temperament may be permit him to live through his present experience when almost any other man would not, according to C. I. Owen, assistant curator of anthrocology at the Field museum of natural history.

Mr. Owen knew Collins during a three year stay in Kentucky, and last April he personally conducted the cave explorer through the museum here. Collins sent 32 specimens of gypsum and stalacite to Mr. Owen, some of which are valuable and now are on exhibition at the museum. "He did not appear to be mercenary," said Mr. Owen, "but showed a genuine interest in his discoveries."

"I found those people of Collins' type a marvelous study," he said. "A higher-strung person, suffering from the thoughts of the danger and horror, could not survive so long. When he came here he told me that he had explored Crystal cave for a distance of thirty miles. The idea Collins gave me was that there was be cross galleries which, if found, would connect Crystal, Mammoth and the other caves in one continuous chain. Of course he expected to get his share of the cave patronage."

O. C. Farrington, curator of geology at the museum, said Colins was obsessessed with the cave exploration idea and the magnitude of the beautiful caves already discovered.

STEAMER OHIO TO SAIL WITH 486 PILGRIMS TO ROME

Boston, Feb. 14.—The steamer Ohio, having aboard 486 pilgrims from various parts of the United States and Canada under the leadership of William Cardinal O'Connell, head of the Boston archdiocese, tonight was awaiting clearing weather to sail on the first pilgrimage of a national character to Rome during this Holy Year. The fog which blanketed Boston harbor all day caused postponement of the sailing time which had originally been set for 4 o'clock this morning.

This morning the pilgrims and as many of their friends as could be accommodated attended the high mass celebrated by Cardinal O'Connell at Holy Cross cathedral. The hymn "Pilgrim's Chorus," composed by the cardinal, was sung for the first time. It will be sung by the pilgrims before Pope Pius XI in Rome.

This afternoon 25,000 persons, according to police estimates, thronged the pier and ship to join in a service conducted there and wish the pilgrims bon voyage. Stops will be made at Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers and Naples, en route to Rome, which is scheduled to be reached on March 4. The party will begin its journey home on March 12.

DETECTIVE FIRED UPON FROM TAXICAB IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 15.—Acting Detective Sergeant Thomas J. Cavenaugh who arrested John Leventine, the taxi-chauffeur alleged to have fatally wounded Dennis J. Kenny in a fare dispute recently, was fired upon from a taxicab early yesterday morning, policemen reported.

Cavanaugh, who is said to have received several threatening letters signed "Taxi Chauffeur," was approaching his home in Decatur street, Brooklyn, when he was fired upon from a taxi parked beside the curb. The cab sped away when he returned the fire.

The detective started his hunt for Kenny's assailant with only a meagre description furnished by Miss Annabelle Flower, the young woman who was with Kenny when he was shot. Since the arrest of Leventine, Cavanaugh has received letters with the warning: "You've made your last arrest."

ELECTRIC STORM AND HEAVY RAIN IN NEW HAVEN

New aHven, Feb. 15—Considerable damage to electric light circuits resulted from the electric storm here this afternoon. Lightning struck a pole in Derby avenue putting a transformer box out of commission which cut off the power in five houses and put two telephone lines out of order. In Townsend avenue, water seeping into a manhole snaked a cable and put 800 telephones in the Morris Cove district out of commission.

The rainfall was 44-100 of an inch until 8 o'clock tonight, but the melting snow and ice added to this and taxed storm sewers to capacity and made walking extremely uncomfortable. The rain brought a rise in temperature of three degrees the thermometer going from 35 in the morning to 42 in the afternoon, and evening.

The electric storm, the first of the year, struck here about noon. There was heavy peals of thunder and three or four flashes of lightning.

The pole struck by the lightning in Derby avenue, was used jointly by the New England Telephone company and the United Illuminating company. The pole was undamaged, but the door of the transformer box was hurled to the ground. Officials of the telephone and illuminating companies said that lightning damage in February was very unusual.

Frederick William Upham.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Frederick William Upham, whose death was announced from Palm Beach late today, before his retirement as treasurer of the republican national committee last June was for twenty years the financial genius of the G. O. P. by reason of his chairmanship of the Chicago convention committee which made arrangements for five national conventions.

Mr. Upham, who was 64 years old, came to Chicago in 1894 and entered the lumber business. Besides his interest in politics he was president of the Consumers' company, one of the large corporations of the country, and a director of a large coal company. He was president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association in 1908-09.

His interest in national politics had not waned in thirty-two years, but he held elective office only as a member of the Cook county board of tax reviewers and as an alderman of Chicago. He held the former office for fourteen years, but resigned during his first term of the latter.

He was a delegate to the republican national convention four times since his first selection in 1892 for the Eighth Wisconsin district. In 1904 as chairman of the local convention committee he had organized and financed four national conventions, each year his task becoming larger and more difficult. He saw the national expenses grow from $70,000 in 1904 to $150,000 in 1920. He was treasurer of the national committee for seven years.

He had been in poor health for some months before his retirement from the treasurership last June at the urgence of his wife. He desired, despite his poor health, to serve through the Coolidge campaign. Last winter he spent a lengthy period in the southwest and on the Pacific coast and returned feeling much stronger.

New Haven Road to Pay European Loan

Generous Responses Made to New Bond Issue for Refunding the Loan.

New York, Feb. 15.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company will pay its $23,000,000 European loan in full at maturity on April 1 next, Edward G. Buckland, vice president, announced tonight.

Fifteen year 6 per cent gold bonds which have been issued to fund this heavy obligation have been virtually all subscribed, Mr. Buckland said. The public response to the new bond issue not only had made certain the success of the refunding plan, but constituted a show of good will and practical support from banks and corporations in the New Haven territory which he called unique in transportation history.

"With the $23,000,000 European loan out of the way," he was asked, "do you mean the New Haven is now 'in the clear?'"

"That's just what I mean," answered Mr. Buckland with a smile that apparently recalled 1924 had been the first year the New Haven had shown a surplus since 1917.

Mr. Buckland said the company had been requested by holders of the European loan that they be allowed to participate in the new bond issue. Invitation accordingly had been extended, he said, whereby they might exchange all or part of their holdings for the new securities upon the same terms as subscribers, that is, par for par. They would deposit their European loan debentures in the amount described, (after cutting off the April 1 coupon), with certain banks designated to receive them, or send them direct to the treasurer of the railroad company.

In discussing the popular response which had enabled the New Haven to clear the $23,000,000 debt on April 1 without recourse to an underwriting syndicate, Mr Buckland classified the subscription by states as follows:

New York	$6,682,000
Connecticut	5,848,000
Rhode Island	993,400
Massachusetts	6,168,100
Miscellaneous	1,624,800

Of this subscription, banks had taken $9,517,000; insurance companies, $9,376,500; and individuals, $2,423,000; the company directors themselves furnishing $1,000,000 of this latter amount. While the total of these subscriptions fell slightly short of the entire $23,000,000, Mr. Buckland said the balance was fully assured.

The European loan, of which he estimated that $18,000,000 was held by investors in the United States, and the balance abroad, originally bore interest at 4 per cent. In 1922 it was extended for three years at 7 per cent.

With its refunding "now an accomplished fact," he said, there were no other maturities of consequence until 1940 except advances made by the government on account of federal control. These matured between 1930 and 1935.

Mr. Buckland commented upon the company's present favorable financial showing, showing it had no floating debt, owed "not a dollar to any bank," and had "current assets much in excess of current liabilities," during federal control, the road's operation cost got as high as $1.2229 in 1920 for every $1 taken in. The ratio by 1924 had been reduced to 76.6 per cent and the road had set 75 per cent as "hogey" for 1925.

Dudley Harmon, who directed the bond subscription campaign among the New England industries, said the subscribers there felt "they were taking out issuance against poor transportation."

GIRL HELD WITHOUT BAIL FOR SLAYING HER SUITOR

New York, Feb. 15.—Dorothy Perkins, 17, charged with killing a suitor, Thomas Templeton, of Jersey City, at a party at her home early today, was held without bail by Magistrate Goodman in Jefferson Market court for examination tomorrow in homicide court.

The girl after her arrest declared that the shooting was an accident, caused primarily by the attempts of her parents to make her marry Templeton, police said. He had been calling on her for a year and a half, she said, and her parents furthered his suit and opposed her friendship with another man.

According to police, the girl said that at the party Templeton upbraided her for her attentions to his rival and that during the argument her father entered the room and tried to strike her. He hit a revolver concealed in her sleeve, she said, and discharged it. The shot entered Templeton's heart.

EAMON DE VALERA FINDS FAULT WITH OFFENSES BILL

Belfast, Ireland, Feb. 15.—Eamon De Valera, the republican leader, in a speech today at Carrick-on-Shannon, described the treasonable and seditious offenses bill just introduced in the Dial Eireann by the Free State government as the first great coercion measure in Ireland and a continuation of British opposition. He was glad this challenege was forthcoming. The Saorstaie government had thrown off the mask and had given a great St. Patrick's day message to the Irish race abroad.

Memorial For Lodge, Brandegee, And Colt

Washington, Feb. 15.—The house today paid a two-hour tribute to the memory of three republican New England senators—Lodge of Massachusetts, Brandegee of Connecticut and Colt of Rhode Island.

Speaker Gillett led nearly a dozen house members in eulogizing the deceased senators, emphasizing the learning, oratory and political mastery of Lodge, the analytical mind, conversational powers, parliamentary ability and fidelity of Brandegee, and the judicial standing and friendship for the immigrant of Colt.

Senator Lodge's success rested primarily upon his vast fund of knowledge, Mr. Gillett declared, comparing his attainments in this respect to those of President Roosevelt and Ambassador Jusserand.

Representative Tilson, republican, Connecticut, eulogizing Senator Brandegee, asserted that "the tragedy of his passing was and is still a mystery as impossible of solution as death itself."

"Those who knew him best," he said, "feel that there was an explanation, though known only to himself, and that somehow, or in some way, it squared with his philosophy of life."

Senator Colt's judicial career of 32 years was recalled by Representative Burdick, republican, Rhode Island, who described him as "a judge, by temperament, by thinking, by experience," and "a statesman by his love for his country and his unalterable determination never to let personal or party considerations determine his course on public questions."

Other speakers included Representatives Treadway, republican, Gallivan, democrat, Dallinger, republican, and Connery, democrat, all of Massachusetts; Freeman and Fenn, republicans, Connecticut, and Aldrich, republican, and O'Connell, democrat, Rhode Island.

Representative Treadway, speaking of Mr. Lodge, emphasized his advocacy of preparedness. Representative Gallivan paid tribute to the senator as a politician and a typical American. Mr. Lodge's service was longer than that of other distinguished sons of Masschusetts, Mr. Coolidge said, but he never lost the confidence of the people. He was always "the learned politician in history, foreign affairs and human nature."

Representative Dallinger asserted that if Mr. Lodge had done nothing more than leave to the American people his biography of George Washington he would have earned their gratitude.

Representative Connery, a World war veteran, said that "the service men of the nation will revere his memory," because Lodge kept his pledge to men.

The ability of Senator Brandegee on various senate committee was referred to by Representative Freeman, who said he was never content with "half-knowledge." The senator's spirit loved to be unfettered and unhampered, he said.

Representative Aldrich said that Senator Colt was essentially a scholar but never lost touch with humanity. He had a philanthropic spirit and was an orator of note, Mr. Aldrich said. He was portrayed by Representative O'Connell as a "gentleman of the old school, held in esteem by all, regardless of party."

FINANCIAL SURVEY MADE BY PARIS SUNDAY PRESS

Paris, Feb. 15 (By the A. P.)—The weekly financial survey, which is a prominent feature of the Paris Sunday press, will not prove pleasant reading to the French people in general, for there are only a few of the French who have not some capital to their name.

"The exchange barometer announces a tempest," says the Temps. "Its needle, which is controlled by nobody, registered the opinion of the world."

Premier Herriot's appeals have failed to influence exchange, the Temps declares.

The Journal Des Debats says there has been too great haste in believing that exchange has been stabilized.

"It is not, as last year," adds the paper, "foreign speculation which is leading the movement. The cause of the lack of confidence which is driving so many Frenchmen to shelter their capital abroad is only too plain. The budget as introduced by the finance minister showed an expenditure of 32,814,000,000 francs; the chamber raised the expenditure to 34,187,000,000 francs, and certain categories of taxpayers feel themselves seriously threatened by the means which may be taken to cover the deficiency when they see how the socialist congress at Grenoble openly proclaimed the socialist party's domination over the government."

ARREST IN $10,000 DRUG RAID IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 15.—Dr. Carletan Simon, special deputy police commissioner, said today that a man arrested with a companion in a $10,000 drug raid yesterday is not William Williams, who jumped bail in a similar case two years ago.

GUSTAV A. BAUER EXPELLED FROM THE SOCIALIST PARTY

Berlin, Feb. 13.—(By the A. P.)—Gustav Adolf Bauer, former imperial chancellor, has been expelled from the socialist party. His expulsion was due to his alleged connection with the Barmat financial scandal.

A dispatch from Berlin February 6 said that Herr Bauer had resigned his seat as socialist member of the reichstag on the demand of the socialist parliamentary party. His resignation was requested because of allegations that Bauer had received money from the Barmat concern in Holland, the directors of which recently were arrested on suspicion of illegal transactions with the Prussian state bank.

SENATE IS TO HOLD NIGHT SESSIONS BEGINNING TODAY

Legislative Situation is Complicated by Contests Over a Number of Appointments Recently Made by President Coolidge—A Filibuster Has Been Directed Toward Several Appropriation Measures—The House Will Deal With a Constitutional Amendment Resolution Proposing a Change of Method of Ratifying Additions to the Federal Constitution.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The sixty-eighth congress is leisurely writing the final chapter of its history.

The house, having disposed of all of the regular supply bills, is moving along slowly in the consideration of the general legislation on its calendar.

The senate, in less fortunate position with respect to appropriation measures, is blocked by a filibuster directed at several measures.

With the inauguration of regular night sessions tomorrow, administration leaders in the senate are hopeful of speeding up business, but are faced with real controversies over the emergency officers' retirement bill, the Cape Cod measure and the conference report on Muscle Shoals.

House leaders have made no plans for night sessions, and since tomorrow is to be devoted to a clearing up of the unanimous consent calendar, none may be necessary for a week or more.

The legislative situation in the senate is complicated by contests over a number of appointments recently made by President Coolidge. The chief fights center around the nomination of Charles B. Warren of Michigan to be attorney general and Thomas Woodlock of New York to be a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Efforts will be made during the coming week to put through the house the Wadsworth-Garrett constitutional amendment resolution proposing a change in the method of ratifying additions to the federal constitution. Preferential treatment will be given half a dozen other measures of more or less general importance.

The emergency officers' retirement bill has the right of way in the senate, with the Cape Cod and Muscle Shoals measures in the background. The postal bill also is to be passed during the week if the opportunity is afforded.

Farm legislation still is in the formulative stage, and until the house and senate agriculture committees can come to agreement on a bill to embody the recommendations of the president's agricultural conference, leaders can make no specific plans as to time for consideration. When a measure is reported out, however, it unquestionably will be given priority.

A RESEARCH INSTITUTE FOR DISEASES OF THE EYE

Baltimore, Feb. 15.—Dr. Frank J. Goodnow, president of the Johns Hopkins University, today announced the completion of the $3,000,000 fund needed for the establishment here of a teaching hospital and research institute for diseases of the eye.

The institute will be under the direction of Dr. William Holland Wilmer, of Washington, D. S., whose name it will bear, and will be the first of its kind in America.

Although it is to be a part of the Johns Hopkins medical school, the clinical institution will be in itself a complete research center for disease of the eye. Researches to be undertaken will deal with such problems as those of glaucoma, one of the common causes of blindness in middle-age, and Trachoma, a dangerous and infectious disease of the eye. Sixty beds will be provided in the institution, two-thirds of which will be for the care of patients who are unable to pay all or any of the cost of treatment.

President Goodnow announced that Dr. Wilmer has been appointed professor of opthalmology in the school of medicine of the Johns Hopkins university, and ophthamologist-in-chief to the Johns Hopkins university.

Of the $3,000,0000 required for the building and equipping of the Wilmer institute, the general education board of the Rockefeller foundation pledged $1,500,000 on condition that the other half of the sum be raised. [illegible] through friends of Dr. Wilmer, the remaining $1,500,000 was secured [illegible] contributions of 350 persons.

COUNT SALM TO BECOME A NATIVE OF HUNGARY

Vienna, Feb. 15.—(By the A. P.)—Count Ludwig Salm-Hoogstraten of Austria, who married Millicent Rogers, daughter of Col H. H. Rogers of New York, in January last year, in a few days will be in possession of authorization by a competent court for his adoption as the son of the janitor of the Budnest foreign office, a man named Kovacs. Then he will became a native of Hungary.

By choosing a penniless man as his father, Count Salm has simplified greatly the usual procedure, as it will not be necessary to draw up a declaration waiving claims to the new father's fortune, which is a matter surrounded by much red tap.

If Count Salm and his wife repeat their civil marriage ceremony in Hungary the marriage will be legal and binding throughout all the world, including Austria. The count must take his adopted father's name, hyphenating it with his own name, but he can drop it later.

MRS. BUDLONG HOLDING HUSBAND'S APARTMENT

New York, Feb. 15.—Although she has had no food since Friday, Mrs Jessie Margaret Budlong, society matron, today continued to hold the fort in her husband's apartmen Friends were unable to communicate with her and though she is at liberty to leave the apartment she cannot return to it without a court order.

Her self-imposed imprisonment has continued since Friday noon, when she returned from Newport, R. I., and locked herself in a bedroom to forestall anticipated desertion proceedings by her husband, Milton J. Budlong, vice president of the North Central Texas Oil company.

A suit for divorce, brought by her against her husband, in which she charged cruelty and misconduct failed in a Rhode Island court and she was held an unfit guardian for her children.

Although two secretaries and a butler are said to be occupying the apartment also, it is understood that Mr. Budlong has ordered meals and housekeeping there stopped. The telephone in the bedroom now occupied by his wife has been disconnected.

A representative of Mr Budlong said today that he is not running away from his wife, nor does he anticipate at present any legal proceedings against her. He is completely worn out, it was stated, by the situations resulting from his marital troubles of the past two years.

It was said by the man, who answered telephone calls to the apartment, that an attorney has called Mrs. Budlong but that she refused to leave her room to speak to him.

"Mrs. Budlong deserted her husband, went to Newport and established a residence there," the representative said, in outlining the husband's side of the case. "She took her two minor children with her and repeatedly refused to return to Mr Budlong, subsequently, she sue him for divorce. She got only [illegible] the case, but the judge decided she was an improper person to act as guardian to the children.

"In two years Mrs. Budlong has had 11 attorneys. Her husband has made every effort to reach an agreement with her, but she has always refused to sign the agreements. Mrs Budlong occupies in her husband's view, the position of a stranger. He is not running away, but is completely worn out from the situation."

Engine Company No. 1 responded, followed in succession by Truck Company No. 1 and Hose Company No. 1. The truck stopped in front of the Gulf gasoline station, next to the new building, from the rear of which smoke poured in great clouds. Seen from the west, it promised to be a big fire and pedestrians raced up the street. Some cried out that it was the theatre, while others said it was the Buick garage. In the rear of the buildings in that vicinity the land falls abruptly, down to the railroad tracks. Here, in a space between the unfished theatre building and one of the houses of the Stone Row, workmen were preparing some tar for the roof of the structure. Just how this caught fire is not known, but the whole vat of molten tar went up in smoke which spread in thick volume over the business section. A hose connection was made, but the work of extinguishing the blaze was done with chemicals, twelve gallons being used. There was danger in the fact that several barrels of the tar surrounding the heated vat were within a yard of the theatre building. The workmen engaged in roofing the building are in charge of Foreman Bowick assisted by Fred Young.

FIVE NORWICH YOUNG MEN VIOLATED OLD BLUE LAWS

Willimantic, Feb. 15.—Five Norwich young men were arrested Sunday forenoon by Officer Arthur Hurley by order of Prosecuting Attorney Samuel B. Harvey for violation of the Sunday laws, namely, for performing manual work said to be a disturbance of the peace of the Sabbath. The men were Thomas E. Hartley, a truckman, Charles H. Gallup, Walter Stamm, Jared K. Maples and Leonard A. Bogue.

The men had come up from Norwich and were removing skid-ball apparatus from a store in the Gelinas block on Main street, opposite the Hotel Hooker, and incidentally opposite the office of Prosecutor Harvey. The skid-ball alleys were conducted in the establishment up to recently by a firm of Norwich young men, of which Maples, aged 18, was a member. The men displayed considerable surprise when informed that they were guilty of a breach of a remnant of the old blue laws. They were scheduled to appear in police court Monday morning. Hartley furnished a $100 bond for the appearance of himself and his companions.

Prosecuting Attorney Harvey claimed that from his office window he saw the men drive a truck up to the curbing in front of the Maverick building and load a bowling outfit on to the machine. The outfit was the property of Maples and was to be taken back to Norwich. The men protested and were told by the prosecuting attorney that they were breaking the Sabbath by unnecessary work.

LEON RUSSELL TOOK SYNAGOGUE VICTROLA

Willimantic, Feb. 15.—Leon Russell, 21, a former inmate of the reformatory at Cheshire, was arrested in an alley just off Main street, near Bank street, about 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon by Officer Arthur Hurley on a charge of breaking and entering and theft of a Victrola valued at $160 from the Hebrew synagogue on Bank street. The break and theft was committed within the past two weeks and was discovered last Wednesday by Wolfe Rosen, who went to play the Victrola and noted its absence. The broken lock on the rear door of the synagogue was found by Isadore (Jake) Heller, another member of the congregation. Discovering the location of the missing machine was by Mrs. Rosen. Several records had been taken along with the Victrola and as Mrs. Rosen passed the Perkins home on Meadow street, where young Russell boards, one day last week she heard one of the records which she had bought for the congregation being played. She told her husband of hearing the familiar music. Mr. Heller owns the building in which the Perkins family reside and he and Mr. Rosen paid a visit there. Mrs. Perkins said that the Victrola belonged to Russell, one of her roomers, and she allowed the men to look over the records. Several of them bore identification marks showing them to be the property of the Hebrew society. The machine was also identified, but Russell had removed the serial number plates from the cabinet. According to Mrs. Perkins, the young man had thrown the plates into the stove. The machine had been purchased from the United Music company. Mr. Heller located another roomer at the Perkins home who stated that shortly before 10 o'clock one night recently he had complied with Russell's request to help him bring a Victrola into the house. Russell claimed that he had bought the machine from his brother [illegible] that he was to pay for it by the month.

Quizzed by Captain Grady at police headquarters, Russell at first denied the theft but later admitted that he had taken the machine from the synagogue. He said that he and another man, whom he did not know, had gone there and loaded the Victrola on a small sled and hauled it to his boarding place. He insisted that the door was unlocked and denied any connection with the breaking of the lock. A further inventory of articles in the building was being taken Sunday night. It is believed that a number of dishes and curtains were taken also.

Alpha Chi Rho fraternity team of Wesleyan university, Middletown, went down to defeat before the onslaught of the Service Battery five at the state armory Saturday evening. In spite of the fact that the battery boys won 37 to 18, the score does not indicate how well the visitors played. They had a very fine team and it was not at all certain in the early stages of the game that soldiers would win. That they did, however, eventually, by a liberal margin, is another bit of evidence of how good the Service Battery boys are. Moss and Moore starred for the visitors, while Armington was the outstanding player for the battery.

In the preliminary game the Killingly High school team won an easy victory over the St. James' school team.

Saturday night of this week the Atlas team of Manchester, one of the best in that section of Connecticut, will come here to play.

DRANK KEROSENE FROM LAMP, TRIED TO CUT THROAT

Danielson, Feb. 15.—Joseph Simpson, 36, was giving promise of recovery Sunday afternoon after slashing his throat with a pocketknife at his boarding place in the rear of the Keystone block, Saturday morning.

Simpson arrived here Thursday from Providence and obtained employment in a local manufacturing plant. Another boarder rapped at his door and called him early Saturday morning and received a reply, but Simpson was not prompt in appearing. Later the fellow boarder went back and again knocked at the door, getting a response from Simpson who declared he could not get up. The circumstances were suspicious and an attempt was made to open the door, but Simpson had locked it and entrance could not be gained until the boarding mistress was summoned, with a master key.

Simpson was found lying on the bed with a gash about three and a half inches long in his throat. He was bleeding and the bedding was saturated with blood. A physician was summoned and the police were notified of the attempted suicide.

Dr. George M. Burroughs gave the wounded man attention. It appeared from the first that the wound in his throat was not necessarily fatal and this belief was justified during Saturday and Sunday, when the chances of his recovery increased.

Simpson was not in a condition to say more than that he had attempted to take his life in a fit of despondency and to give certain information as to his relatives. He told Chief John McFarland of the police department that he had a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Barry, at 61 Beach street, Fall River, and an aunt, Mrs. Mary Feeley, at 11 Rangeley avenue, Providence. Selectman John A. Gilbert gave his attention to the case and visited Simpson's boarding house Saturday.

Mrs. Feeley, aunt of Simpson, was communicated with at Providence, but did not seem greatly interested in the wounded man's plight.

Sunday afternoon Simpson appeared to be giving promise of recovery. He has a bad wound in the throat and his changes of recovery have not been enhanced by the fact, as an officer who investigated the case learned, that he drank the kerosene from the lamp in his room before attempting to kill himself by cutting his throat. Simpson is said to be a British army veteran of the World war.

Arthur S. Macdonald, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce is authority for a statement that Putnam has prospects of another new industry in one of its present factory buildings. Saturday was the clearest, balmiest day of 1925. The sun shone brightly all day. There was enough tang in the air to remind one that it is still winter but there were unmistakable signs that spring is not far away. The streets and walks are entirely clear of snow and ice, and the day was about as delightful a contrast with the preceding Saturday as could be imagined.

Some of the boys have been doing damage to the property and she asked the co-operation of every parent in enforcing this rule. The games followed the business. Each one was given a pair of scissors and paper to cut hearts for five minutes. The prize, a vase, went to Mrs. H. Myers for cutting 36. LAUNCH WITH $14,500 RUM CARGO TOWED TO PORT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 15—The motor craft Rhode Island, hailing from Providence, was seized in the sound early this morning by the crew of the United States coast guard destroyer Cassin, charged with being a rum-runner. The craft had 400 cases of Scotch and rye whiskey aboard and was towed into port, where the craft and her cargo are under guard at the United States coast guard station, state pier. The crew of four men, Harold McVey, 36, 285 Weybossett street, Providence; Samuel Cohen, 24, 745 Weybosset street, Providence; John Reid, 11 Delaware avenue, Oakland Beach, R. I., and Jack Fraser, 109 Broadway, Providence, are detained at the police station pending a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson, of Norwich, here Monday morning.

The Rhode Island had been to the rum fleet off Montauk Point and after taking on her supply of liquor, had started for Providence. When off of Block Island, the Rhode Island was sighted by the crew of the destroyer and a chase of the rum runner began, the latter craft being overhauled a quarter of an hour later. When the motor craft was searched it was found that she carried a cargo of liquor of the estimated value of $14,500.

Victor Frederick of Smith street, was taken into custody Saturday evening by Traffic Officer John Courtney, charged with breach of the peace and jay walking. He was liberated upon furnishing in Cesare Vescovi, a surety on his bond of $50 for appearance in the police court Monday morning. Frederick, it is claimed, was crossing Bank street, corner of State street, and refused to heed the signal of Traffic Officer Courtney, who was on duty there. When the officer reprimanded Frederick for the manner in which the pedestrian walked across the street, refusing to abide by the signal, Frederick, it is alleged, returned to the post of the officer and engaged in a war of words. The result was that Frederick was taken into custody and the double charge preferred against him.

Joseph Wilson, familiarly known as "Soldier" Wilson, ex-soldier and prize fighter, was arrested by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan, Saturday night, charged with theft, in stealing a watch and chain from Frederick Niles. When searched at the police station Wilson had two pairs of shoes in his pockets, beside Niles' timepiece. Wilson was unable to procure a surety on his bond for appearance in the police court on Monday morning and was locked up. Niles who was considerably under the influence of liquor, was also locked up on a charge of intoxication; so as to assure his being in court to appear against Wilson. Wilson and Niles, it is understood, had been about the city drinking and when Niles became intoxicated, Wilson removed Niles' watch. When Niles discovered that his watch was gone he lodged a complaint against Wilson.

Wilson has a long and varied career as a frequenter of the police court.

Mrs. Butt, of 7 Prest street, late this afternoon complained to the police that seven boys had opened two bags of cement temporarily stored in the yard of her home and had scattered the cement about the street. The seven youths were taken into custody and are being held pending a hearing in the juvenile court.

One of the most brazen gang of thieves the city court has had to deal with in a long time was presented for a hearing Saturday. They robbed the tailor shop of Samuel Goodman at 49 Church street and obtained about 80 yards of suitings worth nearly $300. One of the thieves, Charles R. McManus admitted his offense on the witness stand with as little show of shame as he would have shown in admitting that he was a surprised chap when nabbed. He and his partners, Raymond Goland and Frank J. Lipka, did the job. Ali admitted their part in the robbery. They took the cloth to Golden street where McManus had a room, and then McManus went and secured a taxi at the railway station, Charles Parke of Poquonoc, driver, and hired him for an unstated purpose. He innocently went to Golden street and loaded the cloth, which was in wrapping paper and a seabag, and took it to a house on Cedar street. When the cloth was taken from the taxi Parke wanted to know what was doing. He wanted his money for the cab, too, and then McManus told him of the robbery. Parke was angry, but he had participated in the scheme unwittingly. He, too, was arrested, but when the facts became known he was declared not guilty of association with the crime knowingly. The other three were bound over for trial in the May term of the superior court. The trial should be a short one for the evidence is complete to convict them. The gang are strollers, although McManus and Goland have been in New London about two years. They selected the Goodman place as one easy to enter and rob because it was located on a street where there was compartively little passing and where they thought, and rightly, that the police would not interfere with them.

A Dodge coupe, owned by A. Allen, 53 Dover street, West Hartford, was stolen early this morning and all efforts of the local and state police as well as the authorities of Norwich, Westerly and New Haven, failed to recover the stolen machine. Allen operated his car to a point on Green street, near Golden street about 3 o'clock and while he went to a restaurant the car was stolen. When Allen returned he discovered the car missing and reported the theft at the police station.

John R. McLean, 25, residing at 152 Grand avenue, Medford, Mass., was arrested by Patrolman William Babcock this forenoon upon complaint of Arthur Connors, driver of a Yellow Cob company's automobile, who alleged that McLean evaded payment of fare. McLean hired the cab and after riding about an hour, refused to pay the charge. When arrested McLean was intoxicated and had a full quart of "gin" in his possession. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.

Underhill, 307 Huntington street, and operated by Harry Johnson, of Willetts avenue extension were in collision on the Thames River highway bridge approach this afternoon. The cab company's machine was not damaged, but the car operated by Johnson got a demolished wheel.

William H. Long, 32, of 10 Robinson street, was arrested Saturday night by State Police Officer Bobnick, of Groton barracks charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and with reckless driving. He furnished, in Levi Kenyon, a surety on his bond of $100 for his appearance in the police court on Monday morning. Long, who is a machinist, was driving his automobile about the city and the zig-zag course the car took attracted the attention of the state police officer, who held up the driver and it was then found that Long had been drinking.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ella S. Baker, wife of Lewis L. Baker, were held Friday night at 7.30 o'clock at her residence, 227 Connecticut avenue, Rev. Joseph A. Elder, pastor of the Huntington Street Baptist church and the Women's Relief Corp, of which order Mrs. Baker had long been a member, officiated. The body was forwarded to Long Island for burial on Saturday.

The residence of Michael Migliaccio, Gallows Lane, was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning, together with practically all the furnishings and the personal belongings of Migliaccio and his family. So serious had the fire become when it was discovered that Migliaccio had considerable difficulty in getting his wife and children safely from the burning structure. The fire originated from a defective chimney. The blaze was discovered by Migliaccio when he was awakened shortly after 5 o'clock by inhaling smoke. He found that the entire upper part of the house was ablaze. Arousing his wife and children only quick action on the part of Migliaccio enabled him to get his family to the yard, in whatever clothing they could snatch.

The fire gained in headway so rapidly that Migliaccio could save but a few household effects and a half hour after the blaze was discovered the structure and its contents was a mass of smouldering ruins. The house being outside the city limits no effort could be made to save the building.

John Martin, colored, a former resident of New London, is under arrest at Springfield, Mass., charged with violation of the narcotic act and will be given a hearing in the police court in the latter city on the 20th inst., Thomas A. Kenefick, narcotic inspector of the Springfield police department, has communicated with the New London police department, requesting Martin's police record. The local police have no court record of Martin, but about six months ago he was quizzed by the police following the fatal falling from a window of a Main street residence, of Ambrose Terris. It was believed that Terris was pushed from the window during a drunken brawl. Nothing incriminating, however, was found against Martin. When arrested Martin was driving a new touring car and was accompanied by his white wife and by Warren Leach and wife, both colored.

Police Arrest Gang

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 15—Police officers arrested a gang of roisterers Friday night who were "painting" the town, but the cops did not have the evidence to convict them, when they were presented in the police court on Saturday. There were eight young rowdies in a gang that went through Bank street and stopping in their bibulous wanderings at a bakery they bought cookies and then stole five pies. Then they got into Washington street and there tore a gum machine from its fastenings at the corner of Huntington street and carried it to a residence down the street where they deposited it on a veranda. Then came the disinterested citizen and told police officers of what was going on and the gum machine was found. A search led to the identification of the youths and three of them were taken into custody. They might as well have been neglected for the officers could tell nothing that was definite enough to connect them with the disgraceful affair. The youths admitted they were in the gang, but it was the fellows who were not apprehended who did the mischief. That was the story they told under the guidance of their attorney and as the state had nothing on which to base its case, the accused were discharged. One of the gang has twice before been in trouble. He has had all the sympathy that might come from good family connections. He has been accused of felonous assault and of intoxication, but he has not yet had the punishment due him.

HORACE STANLEY COMMITTED TO NORWICH STATE HOSPITAL

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 15—Horace Stanley, a young man, who had been serving a six months sentence in the county jail, as a result of having been convicted in the police court six weeks ago charged with theft, was committed to the Norwich State hospital, on Saturday for observation. Stanley had acted queerly for several days and when his condition gradually became worse, City Physician George P. Cheney examined the youth with the result that he was committed to the hospital as he displayed unmistakable signs of insanity and incompetency.

Stanley was arrested during the holiday season, when he went to the post office lobby where a long line of men and women were waiting to purchase postage stamps. In the line was Mrs. William Howard and she carried her purse. Stanley suddenly grabbed the pocketbook and attempted to flee, but he was seized by two men and compelled to return the purse to the owner. He then gained his release and fled to State street, running into the arms of Sergeant John Cavanaugh, who was approaching the post office, having been attracted by the commotion there. Stanley had been employed as a restaurant worker prior to his arrest.

GALES FERRY

The first annual banquet given by the Men's classes of the M. E. church on Lincoln's birthday evening at 6.30 o'clock, in the vestry, was a splendid success, with the following program: Assembly, all standing at their places at the tables and singing the doxology, Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt at the piano; blessing asked by Rev. Allen S. Bush; Courtland E. Colver, chairman of the program committee presented Rev. George Smith Brown, the pastor, as toastmaster and song leader. All seated. A group of songs, Old Gales Ferry Forever, Old Black Joe, Those Boys Did Shine, encore, Parker Did Shine Tonight, Old Folks at Home with Rev. Mr. Brown leader, concluding number, Star Spangled Banner, all standing. Banquet address of welcome, Rev. Mr. Brown. Following this the toastmaster presented Dr. Vincent Eldred of Norwich, who sang Sunrise and You (Arthur A. Penn); encore, Somewhere a Voice is Calling, (Arthur F. Tate). Rev. Giles E. Goodenough of Ledyard Congregational church, responded to the toast, Ledyard. Rev. Allen S. Bush of Gales Ferry, was heard on Our Community. Nathan A. Gibbs made a brief address and asked for applause for the toastmaster, Rev. Mr. Brown, which was given with a will. Dudley C. Perkins was called on for a children's story, and responded with the Three Little Dogs, which was very pleasing. Rev. Mr. Brown then presented H. W. Lawrence, professor of History and Political Science, at Connecticut college, who spoke on Abraham Lincoln. He was listened to with intense interest as he portrayed the life of Lincoln. At the close of the address the toastmaster asked Charles H. Comstock, who served in the Civil war, under President Lincoln, to rise, also asked for those present who served in the World war, and there were two, Pay Clerk D. D. Clark, of the Submarine Base and John Harold. Then singing followed by the assembly; Auld Lang Syne; benediction by Rev. Mr. Goodenough.

The large vestry had been transformed into a banquet hall, with elaborate decorations of bunting, covering the entire side walls, arranged by John Harold of the Submarine Base. There were four long tables, which seated 88 people. Ribbons of red, white and blue, outlined the table cloths with tiny flags, for each guest, as favors. Flowers were effectively arranged in baskets. The menu was Fruit cup, roast beef, mashed potato, mashed turnip, celery, salted peanuts, ice cream, cake and coffee. The committee who made the banquet such a success was: General chairman, Rev. George Smith Brown; secretary and treasurer, Stanley Faford; head waiter, C. E. Colver; aids, Harry Allyn, Alfred Erickson; speakers' table, Walter T. Clark in charge, C. E. Colver, Jr., Amos Main; table No. 2, R. Irving Hurlbutt in charge, Alton, Chapman, A. O. Faford; table No. 3, John Harold in charge, Billings F. S. Crandall, Rufus W. Hurlbutt; table No. 4, Stanley Faford in charge, Thomas Allyn; culinary department, Nelson Parker in charge, Peter Hoffman, H. Winthrop Hurlbutt; substitute waiters, Stephen H. Norman, Joseph Davidson, Mr Fullerton; reception, D. C. Perkins. The waiters were natty in dark trousers, white blouses and black bow ties.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Colver of the Submarine Base, heard Rosa Ponselle of the Metropolitan Grand Opera, at New London armory, Friday evening.

Mr. Billings was the son of Squire Frank Billings, and was born at the Billings homestead in Rixtown, and there spent his early life. He was in the employ of B. B. and R. Knight for many years, and later for more than 25 years was a bookkeeper for the Slates Mfg. Co. at Webster by which firm he was pensioned a short time ago. Mr. Billings was a graduate of Eastmans Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and was an expert accountant. He was a quiet, unassuming reserved gentleman, whom few knew intimately, yet he had a large circle of friends. He leaves no children. Mr. and Mrs. Billings were frequent guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Mary Palmer and her family.

GAS AND ELECTRICAL PROFITS.

A hearing of no little interest to the people of Norwich is that scheduled for Tuesday before the legislative committee on cities and boroughs at Hartford relative to the proposed bill giving the court of common council of this city authority to use for the general expenses of the city a certain proportion of the profits of the gas and electrical department.

According to the present arrangement all profits of the gas and electrical department since the city has operated it, if in fact there have been any such amounts that might be regarded as profits, have been turned back into the plant. It has been needed for new equipment, and in addition it has been necessary for the people to make sizeable appropriations from time to time. It doesn't appear, however, that there has been any great surplus piled up in addition to plant requirements, and if we are not mistaken the profits which have been figured have not been adequate to provide a plant that is able to take care of all the demands that have been made upon it, even with the addition of the depreciation fund and new money.

What will be the situation if half of the profits of the plant are taken for general purposes? Is it going to mean that there will be a reduction of the department profits yearly for two or three years, for use in meeting general city expenses and then have the people called upon to make up what has been taken and go down in their pockets for some more in order to provide the whale of a demand for new equipment and extensions? Is it going to be a case of taking from one pocket and putting it in the other only to find that when it is needed for gas and electrical purposes that will be no money available?

If we are going to maintain the department and if we are going to insist upon generating our electricity at a cost of $40,000 a year in excess of what it can be bought, there must be some provision made for developing the plant to the point where it can meet the existing demands within city and town. We have been called upon for big sums in the past and the plant is not now able to supply the demands. We have been turning in the profits for such a purpose and the plant is not able to supply all would be customers.

Are we going to better the position of the city, or the position of the gas and electric plant, by taking away part of what has been necessary in the past, and what will be equally necessary in the future, for use in some other direction? Isn't it a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul and deluding ourselves into thinking we are really getting something from the plant for other uses when over a period of years we would be actually getting nowhere?

What effect will such a move have upon the reduction of rates? Will it mean that the taking of half the profit shown by the department will make impossible the reduction of rates which the city has hoped to see come from time to time, or will it mean the collection of rates in addition to the amount allowed, in order to provide for department needs and to permit of a turnover to the city? Is it a means of dragging an indirect tax out of the people in order to produce something for general expenses not included under taxes?

Is it going to be illusory or is there real benefit in the proposed change?

A KNOWLEDGE OF ENGLISH.

Much sympathy can be expected for that bill which has been introduced in the Maine legislature which would require all who seek licenses to drive automobiles to have such a knowledge of the English language that they can speak and read it. This will be especially true when it is set forth by one of the sponsors of the law that it has been possible to his knowledge for motorists to get licenses who could neither read nor speak English.

According to a circuit court in one Maryland county deaf mutes have been barred as drivers of automobiles. It was maintained that inasmuch as they could not hear fire alarms and grade crossing signals that there was danger to life and property should they be permitted to drive autos.

For the same reasons and others in addition the person who cannot read English is a menace to all users of the highway, while the danger to himself and others with him is greatly increased through inability to read.

It isn't to be supposed that because a person can read and write the English language that he will not be a menace, or that he will not endanger himself or others. There are those who know nothing but English who are doing just those things. But the driver who cannot read is unable to comprehend the many traffic signs that are established, is unable to appreciate the crossing warning, has no idea whether he can park for five minutes or not at all, doesn't recognise a one-way-street sign and when he is unable to talk English he is in quite as bad a predicament as the deaf and dump chap which the Maryland court says is a menace.

Maine isn't a state which is confronted with as many automobile problems as some others but there are those who are evidently unwilling to have its troubles multiplied by conditions which have come to be regarded as undesirable. Likewise, the importance of being able to read and write the language of the country cannot get too much emphasis whether auto licenses are involved or not.

THE BOY SCOUT APPEAL.

Is Norwich interested in its boys? There can, of course, be but one answer to such a question.

Is Norwich interested in the benefits which are brought to its boys through the Boy Scouts? There should be only one answer to that question.

Norwich is to be called upon to answer those questions this week, however, through the appeal which is being made in behalf of the Boy Scout budget.

For a number of years there has been an opportunity to note the good results obtained through such an organized work among the boys. To have any undertaking succeed it must have merit, it must get results and it must make an appeal to those who are directly concerned. Through the various troops of Boy Scouts in the city and town, there has been a chance to study the purposes of the organization, how well they work and what is accomplished. It is known that the Boy Scouts is inspirational, is highly valuable in teaching the boys many things they should know and lays the foundation for good citizenship. It is aimed at turning attention from the unworthy and undesirable channels to those that will have a salutary effect upon the future as well as the present.

To keep the organization active and up to the proper standard, its control under a Scout council is important. It is for the purpose of carrying on and extending the Boy Scout work through this council that the people of Norwich are being asked to subscribe to the fund of $5,000.

The answers which are expected of Norwich to the above questions, and they are not unreasonable, is that Norwich is interested both in its boys and in the benefits that are being obtained for them through the Boy Scouts. The best means of indicating such an answer is through the provision of the fund that pays such big dividends each year in the accomplishments among the boys.

Norwich cannot consistently fail to include the Boy Scouts among the good causes it insists upon supporting.

DEATH SPURS ACTION.

Even though it is known that conditions are bad, life too frequently has to be sacrificed in order to concentrate the right amount of attention upon them and get remedial action.

This is noticeably brought to attention by the developments that have taken place since the shooting and subsequent death of a New York young man by a taxicab driver, who it was found was an ex-convict without a license but hiring and running a taxi about New York city and forcing his patrons to shell out according to his demands or get a dose of cold lead.

Tardy action by the police in dealing with this situation has resulted in the surprise inspection of taxicab drivers by the New York police with the result that hundreds of summonses were served and scores of arrests were made because drivers were operating cars in violation of the requirements. Drivers were found without licenses, without other requirements of the law, one was carrying a revolver and others abandoned their cars rather than submit to inspection. Such discloses the manner in which disrespect for the law has prevailed in the metropolis and what encouragement is given to gunmen to go into that line of activity to get an easy and handsome return.

It is highly unfortunate that one young man was obliged to die because this state of affairs had not received attention before. It has long been known to the taxi cab companies. They have in many instances tolerated it because no resistance was being offered by the authorities. They knew the law was being dodged but they also knew that no attempt was being made to enforce it, and they did not regard themselves as enforcement officials.

The effect of the new scheme of inspection makes it plain that such a method should be employed frequently, and especially so when it is known that gunmen are employing the taxicab as a means of getting a new grip on the pocketbooks of the public. It should have been done before there was loss of life.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water.

Serve rings of ripe olive in chicken soup.

Garnish molded egg salad with small sardines.

Hamburg steak will be especially welcome when served with tomato sauce.

The white of egg should be beaten separately when making an orange.

A few chopped nuts or a little grated cocoanut is nice sprinkled over a meringue.

If there are flower-pot stains your window sills use wood ashes to remove them.

Look over the refrigerator each day for signs of decay in food.

Rinse the lemon squeezer immediately and it will save you much annoyance later on.

Dried fruits are usually dirty and should be rinsed with boiling water before cooking.

Never cover poultry when roasting it. It will take away that lovely brown crusty look and give it a rather greasy appearance instead.

Pour a little vinegar into the frying pan in which fish or onions have been cooked and bring it to a boil. It will take away all odors.

Place a lump of sugar in the vase containing thick-stalked flowers and it will prevent the unpleasant odor which frequently accompanies these hardier plants.

SELECTING VEGETABLES

Take care that the vegetable has not been washed to give it a fresh appearance. Avoid dampness around it. Beets should be caked a bit with dirt showing that they have not been handled a great deal. We also expect spinach to be a bit dirty. Carrots should be firm and small. Onions should be hard and devoid of brown spots. Squash and cabbage should be hard, firm and white. Cauliflower should be perfectly white without any rubbed off brownish spots.

WHEN THE ICE IS LOW

If the ice is low, place the small piece in a pan or bowl which will fit in the ice compartment. Around the ice place the bottles of milk, or anything needing special attention. Then when the ice melts, the articles are in cold water and the usefulness of the ice prolonged.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Take time to think out interesting variations in your diet, so that it will not become monotonous. Especially in trying to gain weight, it is important to keep the appetite keen by a varied diet and daily exercise out of doors.

A lotion that is soothing and particularly good for improving hands that feel stiff after engaging in household tasks may be made of equal parts of honey, glycerine and lemon juice, thinned with cologne water. Massage it in gently.

Judicious selection of food particular attention to the need of a well mixed and balanced diet, such as whole wheat bread, milk, eggs, butter, fresh fruits and vegetables will go far toward promoting and maintaining health.

In winter it is especially important to avoid the use of strongly alkaline soaps. Be very careful to rinse off every particle of soap and dry thoroughly with a soft towel. Apply a skin lotion after every washing and before going out of doors. It is best to wash the hands as seldom as is consistent with cleanliness since washing discourages the secretions of natural oil in the skin, which are further lessened by the cold.

A CORRECT MANICURE

The correct manicure starts with filing the nails with a flexible steel file and an emery board. The first filing should be done quickly, following the natural oval of the nail—a very pointed nail is never in good taste—and then smoothed with the emery board. The fingers are soaked in warm soapy water for about five minutes and the nails thoroughly cleansed with a round-pointed orange-wood stick, as the sharp point of a stick or file should never be used under the nail. Stains may be removed with powdered pumice and peroxide, which also act as bleaching agents. Then, a bleaching cream is spread under the nail with the orange-wood stick and allowed to remain while the cuticle is being treated.

Next the cuticle is rubbed with oil or salve to soften it and carefully pushed back all around the nail. This treatment of the cuticle is one of the most important parts of the manicure and the prime rule is—never cut the cuticle. If there are hand nails, use the utmost care in treating them. If the corners are ragged, trim them as little as possible, for, though cutting the corners may improve the appearance of the nail momentarily, it only leads to more roughness and more cutting in the future. A flat orange-wood stick or a cuticle pusher should be used to push back the cuticle, not a knife, which might cut into the cuticle.

After the cuticle is shaped, the fingers are dipped into water again and dried carefully, the bleach is removed from under the nails, and the nails are ready to be polished. A step in the manicure that is sure to improve the polish is buffing a little powdered pumice, which has been applied on a clean buffer, lightly over the nails, making them perfectly smooth to receive the polish evenly. In buffing the nails should be gone over three time lightly, rather than continuing the buffing until the nails become hot.

TO PREVENT TARNISHING

Pack your silver in flour. Cover it completely and all you need to do when wanted is to wipe the flour off. See that the silver is in good condition, clean and polished, and perfectly dry before packing.—A. H. Findlay.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Neckpieces and chockers bid fair to be extremely popular this spring. Women are buying the skins and having them made up to order.

Paris has introduced the evening frock of white with touches of gold for trimming, and already its vogue in this country is established.

The modern version of the patchwork quilt is seen in white bedspreads quilted in beautiful designs and decorated with appliqued motifs of color.

The new ensemble coats are distinguished by linings brilliant in color. The majority are lined with the beautiful, new printed silks in the wildest designs and shades.

If by this time one is a bit weary of the ubiquitous felt hat, there is a smart model of black or brown satin. These are new and extremely chic, as well as of a becoming shape.

Crepe de chine collars, cuffs and ties are favorite adjuncts of the new two-piece jumper frocks so popular now. Many of these costumes are knitted of soft Austrian zephyr wool.

A very smart new frock is a two-piece model of powder blue and white plaid taffeta. The overblouse is tailored in line and quite short and the skirt is laid in box plaits.

The newest handkerchiefs are of linen and have borders made of three rows of net, each one a different color. This is in keeping with the vogue for shaded effects.

The coats of the new three-piece afternoon costumes continue to be fur-trimmed, but the broad heavy bands of fur are conspicuously absent. In their place is a narrow edging of beaver, ermine or coney at collar, cuffs and hem.

Quite charming are pillows of taffeta in shades of blue, rose and violet, finished at each corner with a bell-shaped ornament covered with taffeta and trimmed with gold lace. The pillows are a large oblong in shape.

Any one who knows the London climate can appreciate the reason for the vogue of flannel blouses there at the present. In many instances these charming garments are adorned with detachable collars and cuffs of suede which contrast or harmonize with the shade of the flannel.

WITH MANY FLOUNCES

The unwrapped umbrella served as an inspiration for one of the newest evening dresses decidedly not intended for a rainy evening. The dress is of violet mousseline de soie over a fuchsia slip. It is trimmed with embroidery of steel beads and flounces which look just like up-ended umbrellas fall from the low waistline in front, back and at the sides.

SPRING HAT FASHIONS

The trend of millinery trimmings so far as the small early spring hats are concerned is well exemplified in one model which has nearly all of them. It is of brown and rust-colored brown trimmed with a double row of brown picot straw lozenges and surmounted by a rust-colored spray of ostrich.

NEW HOSIERY SHADES

Here are the new shades in hosiery—see if you recognize them — chair, naturelle, horsie, pucelle, phantom, jeunesse, Park avenue, discretion, footlight, romance. None is new. They range from the flesh tones represented by "chair" to a rosy beige for "romance" to a silver gray for "phantom" and to a dark tan for "discretion."

SEWING HINTS

Use odds and ends of silk thread when basting velvets. Then they will not leave holes in the material like cotton bastings.

Buttonhole round the edges of a tear in gloves before mending. It will be quite easy to draw the two sides together.

Save all scraps of silk, lace, and trimmings from old evening or day frocks. They will come in useful for making work-bags, cushions, or other fancy articles. The foundations of frocks often make excellent underskirts, which will wear quite a long time.

Two pockets in an apron save steps One may be used as a receptacle for things that are picked up as one cleans.

Thread your needle before you cut the thread from the spool, and make a knot at the freshly cut edge. You will be working the right way of the thread and will have no difficulty with knots.

OLD FURNITURE

Our heritage of rare old pieces of furniture associated with American traditions is comparatively small. Any housewife, fortunate enough to possess one or more examples of our own charming Colonial has a treasure worthy of preservation. Antique pieces of furniture should be examined periodically to detect weak spots. To neglect to do so may sometimes prove costly, since furniture has many enemies. Once destruction takes hold its progress is rapid. It pays to go over such pieces carefully at regular intervals. A little repairing, painting and varnishing will preserve their beauty and usefulness indefinitely.

When these aristocrats of the furniture world require refinishing, by all means renew them in the original finish. It is an exhibition of very poor taste to paint or enamel antique pieces of walnut or other cabinet woods.

GLOVE SILK HOSIERY

Practically every woman has the same complaint to make concerning glove silk stockings—they wear out just above the shoe line. One woman cut a triangular piece from the under side of the wide hem that is always found on glove silk hose and carefully appliques the piece over the worn part, making a pointed finish so popular nowadays. She claims the stockings wear twice as long.

LESS ODOR

Are you baking your sauer kraut this year instead of boiling it on top of the stove? It can be put in the oven just as you would prepare it for boiling and very little odor will permeate the house. Bake very slowly for three or four hours.

ULTRAMODERN SLEEVE

Sleeves, like Cousin Egbert, can be pushed just so far. In the latest models shown they are pushed far down over the hands with a tassel to add to the length and to make up for it these sleeves never reach the shoulder and are absolutely unconnected with the dress with which they are worn. A rubber band holds them up.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Natural red hair of any shade is very rare—only five women in 100 possessing it.

A Spokane man has been bequeathed $300,000 by an uncle provided he marries a woman with unbobbed hair.

Texas State College for Women, at Denton, believes it has the youngest woman professor in America in the person of Miss Margaret L. Wiley, who at 19 years of age is a full-fledged member of the college faculty.

THE CARVING KNIFE

It is wise to make a special operation of the washing of the carving knife. Don't put it in a dishpan with the silver and then cut yourself on its sharp edge while searching for it in the sudsy water.

TAPE-BOUND PILLOWS

As charming as they are colorful are tiny boudoir pillows of taffeta bound with linen tape in different colors. The tape forms conventional and symmetrical designs.

RECIPES

Tamale Pie for Six: One cup cornmeal, three cups boiling water, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-half tablespoon fat, one-half medium onion, minced, one cup tomato pulp, one-half pound chopped steak, two cups sauce.

Make cornmeal mush of cornmeal, water and half the salt (30 minutes.) Heat saucepan, melt fat, brown onion (three minutes.) Add steak, panfray, stirring constantly, until red color disappears (about two minutes.) Add seasonings. In greased baking dish put half the mush, spread meat over, cover with rest of mush. Hot oven, thirty minutes.

Newburg Shrimps: Drain the shrimps from the liquor in the cans, remove the intestinal vein, and break the shrimps in halves or leave them whole; there should be two cups. Melt two tablespoons of butter in an omelet pan or blazer of the chafing dish, add the shrimps and cook three minutes. Season with one-half teaspoon of salt, a few grains of cayenne and one teaspoon of lemon juice; mix well and let cook two minutes. Remove shrimps, add one tablespoon of butter to the butter and seasonings in the blazer, add one and one-half teaspoons of flour, and two-thirds cup of cream; stir until thickened, add the yolks of two eggs slightly beaten, the shrimps and two tablespoons of sherry wine. If the wine is not available, add two extra tablespoons of cream. Serve on hot buttered toast or, in reheated puff paste patty shells, at the club luncheon. Grapefruit, orange or combination salads are particularly good with these shellfish entrees.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

John E. Andrus, who today enters upon his eighty-fifth year, is rated as one of the fifteen richest men in the United States. Mr. Andrus is a leading layman of the Methodist Episcopal church, whose gifts to that body and to other organizations for years have been large. Some years ago, with the authority of the state of New York, he established a richly endowed "foundation" for the distribution of wealth to educational, religious and philanthropic societies. He is the son of a Methodist preacher; was educated at Wesleyan University, and, after graduation, taught school for several years. He then entered on a business career in which he amassed a fortune estimated at close to $75,000,000. He is a resident of Yonkers, N. Y., where he has served as mayor, and for four years was in Congress as a representative of the district which includes that city. Despite his age, Mr. Andrus goes to business every day in New York City and has no intention of retiring.

Prince of Wales' Lessons Often Baffling

With all his titles, wealth and advantages, the Prince of Wales is remarkably shy yet must be constantly before the public eye, and many of those competent to judge say that he is "the average son of an English country gentleman."

From the time of his birth at White Lodge, Sheen, England, he has been under surveillance and guidance of relatives and others. At 13, he went "like any other gentleman's son" to Osborne, and at 14 to Dartmouth, where he caught the measles. At 18, as Earl of Chester, he went to France to study, and was stared at but respectfully ignored.

Next in Oxford, he was considered just an "ordinary" pupil, and his lessons were often deeply perplexing to him. He is reported to have said that poetry gave him a headache—even Shakespeare's. He had no flair for literary masterpieces, read only the first six books of Homer, and did not learn to write Greek. He had difficulty in getting his B. A., and tradition says that he finally came away without it. Furthermore, he just was able to make the second football team And all the time he was in the full light of publicity.

Passing a preliminary training in the guards just after the World war broke out, he was denied command of a division because Lord Kitchener noted that he possessed "the qualities of an intelligent and loyal officer," but "is not apparently equipped by temperament or abilities for sole responsibility in the field;" so the youth of 19 went to France with his regiment, ranking as lieutenant.

In France he went among the watchers in the front line trenches, had trouble with his gas mask near Amiens and was made sick by gas. He was unable to pass an examination for a higher grade, was rejected as a candidate for a commission in the flying service, had to wait several weeks before being gazetted to Sir John French's staff, and could not win promotion from Sir Douglas Haig, it being explained that he "lacked the faculty of passing examinations with brilliance."

But the Prince of Wales has studied men, has developed a business capacity, is democratic, and at 30 is one of the most popular members of royalty in the world.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Additional Time

When by reason of illness or absence from home, additional time for filing an income-tax return is required, the taxpayer should address to the commissioner of internal revenue, Washington, D. C., a request for an extension. Collectors of internal revenue are not, as under preceeding acts, permitted to grant such extensions. The request must be made before the return is due—March 15, 1926, if made on the calendar-year basis—and must contain a full recital of the causes for the delay.

An extension of time for filing the return does not extend the time for payment of the tax or any installment thereof unless so specified in the extension. As a condition of granting the extension, the commissioner may require the submission of a tentative return and estimate of the amount of the tax, and the payment of at least one-fourth of the estimated amount.

A tentative return should be made on the usual return form, plainly mark "tentative" at the top, contain a statement of the estimated amount of tax believed to be due, and be properly executed. No other data need be given. Tentative returns will not be accepted unless permission is obtained previous to filing. A copy of the authority to file the tentative return must be attached thereto.

Where a taxpayer files a tentative return and fails to file a complete return within the period of the extension granted him, the complete return when filed is subject to the penalties prescribed for deliquency.

Except in the case of a taxpayer who is abroad, no extension will be granted for more than six months.

Stories That Recall Others

Originality in Courtship.

A sociologist was speaking before an interested gathering when he told of his experiences in studying courtship among those who had no parlor to entertain in. He said the most original case he ever saw was of two young persons at a rail road station. He noticed two young persons at the gate bidding each other farewell.

They kissed and parted and then joined each other again when the arrivals came through the other gate, kissed and started home. Each evening the same performance was gone through with, the two separating as though for a long journey and immediately meeting each other again and returning to their homes.

Some Bother

A party of five had been to a convention. They were having some difficulty in getting the time the train left for home. Finally one of the number was appointed "tour manager" to complete the details of the return trip. He made several trips to the porter of the hotel and at last exhausted the porter's patience.

"Hell Maria," the porter said, "Why don't you walk home?".

LINCOLN PICTURES WITH REV. A. N. FOSTER SPEAKER

A large audience of men and women assembled at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the feature of the service being the showing of four reels of moving pictures of Abraham Lincoln. Previous to the pictures hymns were sung, the Scripture read and prayer offered. Hugh Kinder rendered vocal selections and furnished music for the pictures. The pictures showed the early life of the great American and demonstrated the fine influence the mother had upon him; perhaps the most touching part of the pictures was when Lincoln was appealed to for a pardon of a soldier who had been sentenced to be shot for good reasons. The troubled mind of the president showed clearly on his noble face as he pondered the difficult case and finally his judgment yielded to the fine impulses of his big heart and he set the boy free.

Between the reels a specially fine address was given by Rev. A. N. Foster, of the Universalist church, who spoke impressively of the great characteristics of this great American president. He mentioned his humble birth, his handicaps at the start, his eager striving for knowledge, and his ability as an orator, a debator, a story teller. The speaker told of the effect the life of Lincoln has had and is still having on the world. While Lincoln was never a member of a church, said the speaker, he was loyal and true to the God of the church; he believed firmly in the protection, and in the efficacy of prayer and often went alone to pray.

Connecticut College

One of the largest affairs of the season in the social calendar of Connecticut College is the annual tea dance, the only one of the dances to which the freshmen of the college are formally invited as guests and not as waitresses. This year it was held at the Bulkeley auditorium, Saturday afternoon and evening. The auditorium was attractively decorated in red and white with gold streamers. Comfortable armchairs and divans were grouped about the corners, and there were large clusters of palms about the place in addition to other potted plants. The waitresses' costumes were of red and black satin. Heart-shaped aprons were worn and red raffes about the neck and wrists.

Miss Katherine Bailey, 26, of Wilton, Wisconsin, was chairman of the dance committee and Miss Dorothy Perry, 25, of Springfield, Mass., chairman of the waitresses and refreshments. Miss Madelyn Smith, 26, Montclair, N. J., Miss Jean Howard, 27, Newton, Mass., and Lucy Norris, 25, were in charge of the decorations. The patrons and patronesses were President and Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall, Dean Mary K. Benedict, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Lawrence, William Erb, Mrs. Morris Wesael and Miss Mary Snodgrass.

The music for both afternoon and evening dancing was furnished by a New York orchestra.

The dance is given to raise money for the Connecticut College delegates who are to be sent to the national Silver Bay conference.

WOULD CHANGE NORWICH ASSESSORS' TERMS TO RUN FOR SIX YEARS

A bill that proposes to change the term of members of the Norwich board of assessors from four to six years is one of the proposed measures that is to be heard Tuesday before the cities and boroughs committee of the legislature. The bill has been drawn by the town counsel, Attorney H. H. Pettis, and it is the purpose to overcome the situation that arises at times under the present system by which two inexperienced men may be elected to the board. It is the aim of the proposed bill to arrange the time and term of election so that there shall always be two members of the board who have had previous experience.

The present term for the assessors is four years. It is proposed to make this term six years and provide that one assessor shall be elected this fall for the term of six years. Two years later two assessors will be elected, one for a two-year term and the other for a six-year term. This arrangement will provide for the election of one assessor every two years for the term of six years, thus bringing it about that there will always be two members of the board holding over, i. e., there will never be an election that will place on the board two men who have had no previous experience.

NORWICH C. E. RALLY HEARS BOSTON SPEAKER

A missionary rally, under the auspices of Norwich Christian Endeavor Union, was held Sunday evening at the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, with a large attendance, representing the several societies in the union.

The Union Missionary Committee was in charge of the interesting programme, which included an address by Miss Ruth I. Seabury of Boston, who is Young People's Secretary of the Woman's Board.

Arthur Avery, president of the entertaining society, opened the meeting and called on Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, to offer prayer, but the latter invited Rev. J. Beveridge Lee of New London to officiate in his stead.

Miss Gertrude Ladd of Hanover, the president of Norwich Christian Endeavor Union was then presented, and she in turn introduced Miss Helen Eadie of Hanover, who is chairman of the Missionary committee of the union. The other members on this committee are, Miss Ethel Sheldon of Franklin, and Miss Alice Bishop of Bozrah.

A special chorus of mixed voices from the entertaining society, in charge of the music committee, Miss Helen Avery, chairman, led the singing with the church organist Herbert L. Yerrington accompanying.

Miss Gertrude Ladd introduced Miss Seabury who is an entertaining speaker, having had wide experience in young people's work.

While Miss Seabury has addressed many young peoples' meetings, this was the first time she ever addressed a Christian Endeavor Union meeting.

In her introductory remarks she said that she would use for the basis of her talk, answers to questions that had been asked of her concerning her missionray work. One of the more important questions answered by Miss Seabury was "What Is a Missionary?"

While attending a conference in Washington, Miss Seabury listened to talks by young missionaries just going out into their several fields. One of the last to give a three minutes talk was a husky young man with red hair who began by calling himself a cow college man, saying he was going to Africa to teach its people to be good farmers, and to give them a little Christianity on the side. One of Miss Seabury's friends then asked her if she would call that man a missionary; she answering by giving the following definition of what a missionary is— Living a Christian life wherever the Lord sends you. That's a missionary!

To the question, is the job worth doing? the speaker replied thus—By their fruits ye shall know them.

Several illustrations were given to this question, one being about a boy in the bush country in Africa, twelve years of age, a savage who had in no way come in contact with civilization.

One day while traveling along a trail the boy in question found a pack of playing cards, which he took home to his tribe, none of which had ever seen the like before. In examining the cards he noticed that each card with two spots was marked with a certain character in the corner, while that with three spots and so on, were marked with other characters. By his keen observance of these characters he learned to write them and to count other objects. This information was soon spread around the near-by villages, finally reaching the ears of Portuguese traders who raided the place and took the boy with others to work in their lumber camp, where he was eventually found by a white man, who soon after started a school for the boys; which the government not daring to stop, prohibited the boys attending under threat of punishment. In spite of this fourteen boys still attended and were punished each time they attended.

The white teacher, not wishing to see the boys punished, closed his school, at the same time telling the boys if they could run away and cross the border to British territory, they would have a chance to learn. If caught, these boys would lose their lives, yet six of them started, travelling at night through the jungle and hiding by day, reaching their destination after fourteen nights, nearly starved for the lack of necessary food.

After studying in the British schools because of his good work this boy, Columbus Canvass Amango, was sent to Hampton Institute, later graduating from a Portuguese college with an M. A. degree, just ten years after leaving his life of savagery. He was later married and with his wife returned to his native country as a missionary. About a year ago, Mrs. Amango lost her life in an epidemic. He is still carrying on his work.

In closing, Miss Seabury related a story about an Indian who while not a Christian himself, said that India must have some religion and he hoped that its people would take Christianity because it seemed to cost so little to the people of this country. If Americans were asked to do something, they did if they wanted to, and if they did not want to, they did not. A missionary to go into the field must be young, seldom over thirty, in good health, and pass a severe examination in their line of work which they were to take up and be able to adapt themselves to the country to which they were going and to learn the language, therefore an education was quite important. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

NEW YORK PASTOR AT CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

The Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church was in charge of Rev. Eugene C. Carder, associate pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, New York city. There was a good sized congregation and the service was opened at 7.30 o'clock, the usual hour. That our attitude toward life influences our verdict on life was the principal thought brought out by Rev. Mr. Carder in his sermon.

The verdict which we will make on life with respect to ourselves will depend on our attitude toward life, he said. The determining factor of success or failure is attitude. Rev. Mr. Carder spoke of the need of loyalty and sincerity in the workaday world. Men are getting higher wages than ever before, and they work less, he said. He went on to speak of the four sides of life. There is the economic side, he said. If you make things your objective in time they will turn around and render valueless all the other values of life. There is the intellectual side of life. Intellect will bring us much, but there are many things that it can't bring us. Unless it is tempered with mercy and the love of Jesus Christ, it becomes a menace. Then there is the social side of life. Rev. Mr. Carder went on to explain how people can make success or failure out of the social side in life. The fourth side is the open side of life, the side that puts a spiritual meaning in everything in life. That side will stay open forever because it has been pushed back by a hand that has never been denied.

Allen won the crown here today when he forced Charles Gorman, of St. John, N. B., defending champion, throughout the 440 yard event of the American diamond trophy championships and placed second piling up his total points to 100. Gorman led throughout the race and came within one-fifth of a second of the record time he established last year at Saranac lake. His time today was 36 4-5 seconds.

Joe Moore, of New York city, placed third in the 440 to clinch the 500 point Maxwell trophy with 310 points.

O'Neil Farrell of Chicago, won his fifth successive race and the Lake Placid trophy by taking the 440 yard event in 36 4-5 second, equalling Gorman's time in the national contest.

Allen duplicated Gorman's feat last year, of capturing both national and international championships. Allen previously had won the international title at Saranac Lake. No records were broken this year, due to ice and weather conditions, but the Chicago skater made time which approximated several established marks.

Farrell's feat in capturing the Lake Placid trophy was the climax of this, his first year in he senior skating class. He won consecutively the first five events of the trophy and placed third in the final three mile race, which was won by Lou Morris, of New York.

Moore now retains permanent possession of the Maxwell trophy, which will not again be contested. It was presented by Henry L. Maxwell of New York, for award to the skater first winning 300 points in competition at Lake Placid. Until this year Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, a member of the American Olympic skating team, had held the lead for the cup with 270 points. Gorman finished second to Moore with 300 points, leaving Jewtraw in third place. Allen had 190 points and fourth place.

Early victories of Carl Parody, of Lake Placid, gave him victory in the intermediate 18-year old competition for the Lake Placid trophy. William Logan, of St. John, N. B., won the one-mile event today to place second. Parody had 50 points, Logan 50 and Edgar Snodgrass, of Fairville, N. B., was third with 40.

Floyd Dissonette, of Malone, skated to victory in the junior 14-year old 220 yard race, capturing the title with 80 points.

BACON HIGH LOSES TO BULKELEY HIGH QUINTET

Colchester, Feb. 15.—Overcoming the cocksuredness of the Bacon Academy five, the Bulkeley quintet entered and left Colchester, Saturday evening with another victory to its credit, making it four straight in eight days. With scientific basketball almost impossible due to the small size of the court, which was not of regulation size, Bulkeley used a concoction of plays which proved successful on the Colchester court where they would have not proved as successful on a regulation court. Even though Bacon Academy's knowledge of the court was more extensive than of the visitors they were forced to bow to a 14 to 5 score.

Good pass work was almost impossible on the court seemed overcrowded with the 11 members which occupied it. Each team was vieing for an opening to break through the man-to-man defense which was used throughout the game by both fives. In this respect as well as in every phase of the game, Bulkeley was by far stronger and more active than the locals.

Bacon Academy found it difficult to penetrate the defense of the visitors to do any real damage. In the first quarter only one point was scored by both teams, that being a foul goal by Taylor.

The second quarter found Bacon Academy leading when London tossed in a field basket. But the loss of the lead was not so noticeable as the loss of Huck Taylor who was disqualified for personal fouls. The referee was out to put him where he could do no damage it seemed, for the least movement on Taylor's part in playing a local player resulted in a foul being called. He was declared out in the second quarter after two minutes of play had elapsed.

Harris took Huck Taylor's place, and his heavy bulk seemed to count. He followed Parisi's field goal with one himself, and the half ended with the score 5 to 3 for Bulkeley. The Orange and Black had little competition in the second half as far as goal making was concerned. Parisi made three field baskets, followed by a double decker by Harris. Bacon Academy was held scoreless in the third quarter, but the fourth quarter found the hoop for a field goal.

Parisi was high scorer with four field baskets, while the guard work of both Graves and Watterson was outstanding, the guards not allowing the forwards a single field basket. London played a good game for the locals.

The score:

Bulkeley.	G.	F.	Pts.
Parisi, rf	4	0	8
Taylor, lf	0	1	1
Harris, lf	2	0	4
Watterson, rg	0	1	1

Score by quarters:

DARTMOUTH LEADING IN BASKETBALL VICTORIES

New York, Feb. 15—(By the A. P.)—Dartmouth, with four victories on its home floor, retains the lead in the eastern intercollegiate basketball league, with an undefeated Princeton team in second place and a virtual tie.

The Hanover quintet has played one more contest than have the Tigers, its victims including Yale, Columbia, Cornell and Pennsylvania. The Green's first meeting with Princeton is scheduled for February 28 at Hanover, when the victor in this year's campaign will probably be determined.

Columbia, by overcoming Yale on February 7, and Penn for the second time on February 12, has established itself in third place, forcing the Quakers into fourth. Yale and Cornell still struggle in the cellar, neither having won a game.

The individual scoring list is headed by the name of Carmack, Penn forward, who retained his lead during the past week by scoring five points while facing Columbia. Laub of the New York team had his opportunity to overtake the Quaker that night, for he stood in second place and only a point behind, but he failed, and last night Picken, Dartmouth's forward, dropped three baskets and three fouls against Cornell, squeezing into second position.

Captain Goas of Dartmouth, who arom a guard position leads the league in the scoring of field goals, pulled up to the leaders duduring the week and rests in fourth place, Carmack's lead is still due to his ability to negotiate points from the foul line.

NURMI FACES THREE TRACK MEETS THIS WEEK

New York, Feb. 15—(By the A. P.)—With two more world records added to his long list, Paavo Nurmi of Finland faces three track meets this week—in Philadelphia, New York and in Washington.

Having run two miles in the fastest time ever credited to a human being, just as he had promised to do, the Baron of the boards has accomplished his present aims and for a time will confine himself to cutting off times for various distances which undoubtedly will lead him to another clash with Joie Ray of Chicago, American middle distance champion, in the near future.

When Nurmi meets Ray again, however, another star must be reckoned with, for last night at the New York A. C. games at Madison Square Garden Lloyd Hahn, of the Boston A. A. erased the time for the mile that Nurmi set on his first appearance after coming to America. Hahn ran the distance in 4 minutes, 13 2-5 seconds, a fifth of a second faster than the Finn's fastest.

Paavo's feat in negotiating two miles in 8 minutes 58 1-5 seconds had been regarded as almost an impossibility when he stepped on the garden track to face such opponents as Verne Booth and Harry Helme, and it was thought that the Olympic champion would contest himself with finishing ahead in the race, as he had failed to do in a handicap event at Syracuse the night before.

BULKELEY HIGH WILL HOLD INDOOR TRACK MEET

New London, Feb. 15.—The first indoor track meet to be held by Bulkeley will see in action nearly forty athletes Tuesday afternoon, when the first of the several indoor meets which are under consideration will get under way. Events which are expected to attract students from all four classes will be run off during the afternoon, with special pains being taken in the running events due to help Bulkeley in placing in the Yale interscholastic meet to be held sometime this spring.

There are some special artists in the various events, and with a meet of a similar nature to be held again before the big indoor meet at the state armory, Bulkeley track is expected to be revived to the level that it occupied before it was necessary to abolish this sport as well as basketball. In the preliminary workouts held under the direction of Coach Frank B. Hamlin of the English department, the various aspirants for the track team have given a good account of themselves.

CHAPMAN TECH TO MEET DEEP RIVER HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 15.—The cancelling of the game with Westerly High, by the latter management, on Friday, caused the Chapman Tech five to be idle over the week-end. Tech was to be notified on Saturday, if the Westerly management was able to secure a court to have the contest played off, but receiving a negative reply the game has been extended by the Red and Black until later in the season.

For the second time this year, Deep River High will leave its home floor to oppose a team, and this team will be Chapman Tech. This game is for Tuesday evening at the Tech auditorium.

Chapman Tech has not fared so well in the games which have been played without the services of the two suspended players, E. Bernard Hewitt and Noble Hicks. However, their suspension has but a little over two weeks to run, and then it is expected that these players will get into harness once again.

JOHNSON HAS NOT YET SIGNED WITH SENATORS

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 15—If Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher and hero of the last world series has signed a 1925 contract with the Washington team, Stanley Harris, manager, today stated that he knew nothing about it. Harris, accompanied by M. J. McNally, and Stanley Coveleski, pitched reached Hot Springs, today. A delegation of about 15 more Senators is scheduled to arrive Monday. They will remain until March 3, when they will leave for their training camp at Tampa, Fla. Harris said the men would not get into uniforms here, but would confine their preliminary work to mountain climbs, golf and the hot baths.

"I do not know whether Johnson will be with the team or not," Harris said. "When I left Tampa last Friday he had not signed his contract. Whether he had done so since I do not know. Neither Marberry and Reuther have signed for this year, but I don't anticipate there will be any difficulty getting their contracts."

The failure of Johnson and other members of the team to get here as scheduled today caused a postponement of an official welcome that was to have been given by Mayor Harry A. Jones, to Manager Harris, Johnson and others of the world champions.

J. C. Edwards, pitcher, of the Cleveland American League team and Urban Shocker, New York Yankee hurler, were among today's arrivals.

ETHEL McGARY BREAKS 880-YARD SWIM RECORD

De Leon Springs, Fla., Feb. 15—One world's record and one American record were broken here today when Ethel McGary, New York, swam the 880-yard free-style in 13 minutes and 7 seconds, and Ethel Lackie, Chicago, negotiated the fifty yard free-style in 32 3-5 seconds.

Miss McGary clipped 12 seconds from the former record held by Gertrude Ederle. She was paced by Margaret Ravior, of Philadelphia. Miss Ederle defeated Elinor Garatti, San Rafael, Cal., and Olive Hatch, Indianapolis, by a length.

Sybil Bauer, Chicago, Olympic backstroke champion, planned to have a try at a world's record in her specialty, but painful bruises about hands and neck, sustained in an automobile accident, prevented her from entering. She will swim at Ormond Beach, Fla., tomorrow.

The meet was conducted under the championship conditions, Miss Charlotte Epstein, New York, supervising the details, with William G. Irons, and Harold Bond, New York, and W. E. Flowers, president of the Florida A. A. U., acting as timers.

"DUKE" FARRELL, VETERAN BASEBALL PLAYER DEAD

Boston, Feb. 15.—Charles A. "Duke" Farrell, veteran baseball player and for the past two years coach and scout for the Boston National league baseball club, died in a hospital here today. He was operated upon for a stomach complaint more than a month ago and never rallied.

Farrell began his professional career in 1887 with the Salem club of the New England league. The next two years he was with the Chicago Nationals and later played with the Chicago team of the Players' league, the Boston American Association club, Pittsburgh, Washington, the New York Giants and the Boston American League club and Brooklyn. A catcher he later became a third baseman and general utility player. He was with Brooklyn when that team won two championships. He was in his 60th year.

ALL-AMERICAN ALL-TIME FOOTBALL ELEVENS PICKED BY KNUTE ROCKNE

Chicago, Feb. 15—Two All-American all-time football teams, one of men who played before 1906 and the other after that year, picked "just for fun" by Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, were made public here today.

"You can't compare very well the players who took part in the game before 1906 with those who came afterward," Coach Rockne stated, "or the other way around. They didn't play under the same sort of conditions."

For the ends before 1906 he chose Hinkey and Shevlin of Yale "who go together like ham and eggs in the one arm restaurant." Curtis of Michigan and Hillebrand of Princeton, are the tackles, Schultz of Michigan, center, and Eckersall of Chicago, quarterback. Heston of Michigan, "the most sensational of all the group before 1906, is one half back and Morley of Columbia the other, and Salmon of Notre Dame, he said, "as great a fullback as the old game ever saw," completed the team.

Pfann of Cornell, "the greatest, all-around exponent of what a quarterback should be," is pilot of his mythical modern eleven.

The rest of the lineup follows: Muller of California and Hardwick of Harvard, ends; Henry of Washington and Jefferson and Weir of Nebraska, tackles; Peck of Pittsburgh, center; Spears of Dartmouth and Pennock of Harvard, guards; Gipp of Notre Dame and Grange of Illinois, halfbacks; and Thorpe of Carlisle, fullback. Gipp, Grange and Thorpe, he said, are players who come "once in a life time."

BASEBALL MONUMENT MAY BE ERECTED IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 15.—The proposal of the American league to erect a $100,000 monument to baseball has not been dropped, President Ban Johnson said tonight, adding that it would be erected in Chicago or New York instead of Washington.

The American league club owners at their meeting in St. Louis last week withdrew their offer to congress to erect the monument in East Potomac park, Washington, D. C., because of opposition when the subject was up for debate.

President Johnson had planned to have the names of the most valuable player in the American league selected annually, inscribed on the monument.

Chicago has an ideal setting for a monument on the lake front on which is built the municipal stadium and as the league will celebrate its 25th anniversary next year it has been suggested that an effort be made to have the club owners build it here and dedicate it as a part of the celebration. Chicago is the birthplace of the league.

HOSPITAL VALENTINE TEA WILL NET UPWARDS OF $600

Putnam, Feb. 15.—The Valentine tea given Saturday at Odd Fellows' hall by the Woman's board of the Day Kimball hospital, was probably as successful in point of attendance as well as in the amount of money realized as any of its predecessors. This has been an annual event for a great many years. When the present site of the hospital was given by the Kimball family of Pomfret it was stipulated in the gift agreement that there should be a public entertainment as February 14 was the birthday of the late Day Kimball and the gift of the land was in the nature of a memorial to him.

It is the one big undertaking of the year which has the support of all classes of people regardless of social status, wealth, or religious faith, or the lack of it. All the northern towns of the county, Putnam, Pomfret, Eastford, Woodstock, Thompson and Killingly are represented on the various committees.

In the afternoon there was a musical program by Putnam High School orchestra, under direction of Samuel Rich. At various tables flowers, candy, cakes and fancy articles were offered for sale. Supper was served from 5 until 7.30, and there was dancing from 8 to 12.

It is estimated that the net proceeds will amount to between $500 and $600.

Those who had charge of the affair were:

General committee, Mrs. Andrew V. Frost, chairman; Mrs. William H. Richardson, Mrs. George Twigg, Mrs. A. Newton Vaughn, Miss Ellen Wheelock and Miss Emma R. Roberts of Putnam, Mrs. S. W. Bard of Brooklyn, Mrs. L. L. Lorillard of Pomfret, Mrs. George Sampson of Woodstock, Mrs. Alfred L. Reed of Danielson and Miss Sarah Crosby of Thompson.

The tea was served by the women's committee from Thompson with Miss Sarah Crosby as chairman and Mrs. Vincent Dart and Mrs. Marvin Taylor and Misses Mary Bradford, Rose Bradford and Mary Spencer of the Howe-Marot school as waitresses.

Flower booth: Mrs. Herbert Bowen, Mrs. Hamilton Holt and Mrs. Thomas Taylor of Woodstock and Mrs. Louis DeFlores, Mrs. A. Vonsiatsky of Pomfret.

CLAIM G. & E. BILL WOULD HELP TAXPAYERS

Although under the general statutes covering municipal gas and electric plants, the board of commissioners is directed to pay over all money collected by them to the treasurer of the city, town or borough, this merely constitutes the city treasurer a treasurer for the gas and electric department to operate merely as a receiving and disbursing agency, said Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr. when speaking Sunday night of the reason for the bill that has been proposed that gives the gas and electric commissioners authority to pay over the city for the general use of the city some proportion of the profits of the gas and electric department. As it is now while the money from the gas and electric department may come into the hands of the city treasurer, he has no control of it and he merely checks it out according to the vouchers from the gas and electric commissioners.

If the proposed bill is passed providing that the commissioners may annually set aside a sum from their profits to be paid to the city for the general uses of the city, advocates of the measure claim that this is one way every taxpayer will experience some appreciable benefit from the city's ownership and operation of the gas and electric plant. Their reasoning is that the average taxpayer, who may be in the list for $2,000 would have a saving of about $7 on his tax bill. If the gas and electric commissioners should turn over from $50,000 to $60,000 annually for city uses. This sum would represent about 3 1-2 mills and would save the appropriation of this amount and consequently cut down the rate about 3 1-2 mills which would mean $7 no a $2,000 piece of property.

Operation of busses by electric railways to supplement their regular service will be discussed at a meeting of the American Electric Railway association at Washington today and tomorrow.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

To a Waterfowl

Whither, midst falling dew,
While glow the heavens with the last steps of day,
Far, through their rosy depths, dost thou pursue
Thy solitary way?

Vainly the fowler's eye
Might mark thy distant flight to do thee wrong,
As, darkly seen against the crimson sky,
Thy figure floats along.

Seek'st thou the plashy brink
Of weedy lake, or marge of river wide,
Or where the rocking billows rise and sink
On the shaded ocean side?

There is a Power whose care
Teaches thy way along that pathless coast—
The desert and illimitable air—
Lone wandering, but not lost.

All day thy wings have fanned,
At that far height, the cold, thin atmosphere;
Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land,
Though the dark night is near

And soon that toil shall end:
Soon shalt thou find a Summer home and rest,
And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend
Soon, o'er thy sheltered nest.

Thou'rt gone, the abyss of Heaven
Hath swallowed up thy form; yet, on my heart
Deeply hath sunk the lessons thou hast given,
And shall not soon depart.

He, who, from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone,
Will lead my step aright.

By William Cullen Bryant

The Rainy Day

The day is cold, and dark and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
The vine still clings to the moldering wall,
But at every gust the dead leaves fall,
And the day is dark and dreary.

My life is cold, and dark and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
My thoughts still cling to the moldering past,
But the hopes of youth fall thick in the blast,
And the days are dark and dreary.

Be still, sad heart! and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining;
Thy fate is the common fate of all,
Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Daily exercise is necessary if we would keep in good health. Therefore our health plan should include some form of exercise regardless of summer, winter, fall or spring. The Connecticut State Board of Health is greatly interested in the health of boys and girls, for it is realized that the healthier the boy and girl the healthier the man and woman. Here is a little advice on good health that has been sent out by the state health board and which boys and girls will do well to read.

The daily health plan should include some form of exercise regardless of the season of the year. During the summer months this is not such a difficult matter as exercising in the open is but a pleasant part of the day. With the coming of winter little exercise is indulged in.

If one but realized it there are just as good facilities for exercise in winter as in summer. With prevailing cold weather skating provides one of the best forms of exercise while brisk walking is both exhilarating and healthful. With its snow covered hills Connecticut sets the stage for perpetual winter sports and everyone should find the way to take advantage of one of more of these—coasting, skiing, snow-shoeing. Here is health aplenty and exercise which stimulates and brings a ruddy glow to the faces of young and old.

As if to remind man of his inactivity, nature has recently played its little trick by covering walks so completely that one and all have been forced to get out and shovel. Perhaps this was not the form of winter sport that one would have chosen but it provides good vigorous exercise which should be counted fat as a hardship, but a health measure.

Edith C. Slate, Eagleville—I thank you very much for the book entitled Daddy's Girl. I have read part of it and find it very interesting.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

Chestnuts

Dear Uncle Jed: The chestnut tree is one of the most beautiful trees. It is very valuable for its timber and shade, and the nuts afford no end of pleasure to the children. There is a good market for the nuts also, so there may be both pleasure and profit in growing them. The tree grows in the United States and Europe. Perhaps the most remarkable tree of this species is the one growing on Mount Etna. It is 160 feet in circumference and has a hollow trunk in which the shepherds find a retreat for themselves and their flocks. It is called the hundred-horse chestnut, from a tradition that Joanna of Aragon once visited it with a party of nobility from Catania, and that the whole party found protection beneath it from a sudden storm.

There is another in France which is believed to be over a thousand years old. The nuts are concealed in prickly burrs until ripened by the frosts, when the burrs open and the nuts are shaken out by the winds. Roasted chestnuts, hot from the oven, are very acceptable in the chilly days of the fall, and like peanuts, roasting much improved them.

Had Pleasant Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: I have never written to the Wide Awake Circle but thought I would like to tell you of some of the pleasant trips I had last summer. Some times I took a row down the river to the drawbridge and went in swimming. We would take our lunch along and go up into the grove and eat it. Then we listened to the band playing. And two brothers, 4 and 5 years old, went in bathing for the first time. I hope we may have more such trips this summer. I had a fine view of the eclipse last Saturday. It was a wonderful sight. Am glad I saw it, though it was so cold, one could not enjoy it as much, as if it had been in the summer. I go to school and am in the sixth grade.

My Trip to Groton

Dear Uncle Jed:. I am a little boy of eleven years and read your paper every week. Have never written to you before, but I had such an enjoyable ride that I just had to write you about it. My uncle came and asked me to go to Groton and I tell you it was an interesting trip. Started from Voluntown after dinner, went to Jewett City through Norwich, saw the hospital for the insane. It is a regular little village and houses many patients.

From there we went on and enjoyed the scenery all the way. Then came the submarine base. This I did enjoy. Saw many boats and submarines on the water. Guards on duty around the base and everything neat and clean, showing what a fine place the navy is for a young lad who wants to learn something of neatness and discipline. After looking around a while, we started for Groton. This is a nice little place, and the step for the ferry from New London. Saw New London across the river, making a nice view from Groton side. Also saw the toll bridge. That's a wonderful piece of work, showing the ability of the workmen of today. Could write ever so much more, but as this is my first letter I will make it short, and hope it doesn't reach the waste basket.

Will just say that I arrived home in the evening tired but surely satisfied with my trip. Best wishes to all Wide Awakes and three cheers for Uncle Jed.

Fell into the Snow

Dear Uncle Jed: I felt myself falling, slipping. Could I catch myself, or would I slide down, down in the new fallen snow which covered the ice? It was only a question of minutes.

My dazed brain told me to grab something, anything that would check my fall. I saw, dimly, some bushes nearby and I reached for them and missed.

A desperate idea burst upon me. It was my last hope; perhaps I could avert my course and fall against the bushes.

Then it was over, and I lay on my back in the soft snow, a foot deep.

About Frost

Dear Uncle Jed: When the hot summer days have passed and the autumn leaves have fallen, then frost holds sway. First he rinens the nuts for happy boys and girls. Then he freezes the lakes for their pleasure and covers the earth in a mantle of the purest white and then the joyous sleigh bells are heard.

Besides giving pleasure he is of great use. He makes the ice to keep us cool in summer. He gives the trees and plants a chance to rest.

Then find no fault with dear old Frost. You may have your summer or you may have your spring, but give me winter when the frost is here.

Feeds the Birds

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time that I have ever written to you. I hope that I will be successful. I am going to tell you about our birds.

We had some chick feed in the barn, so every day we throw some in our side yard. Some times only a few birds will come to eat, then again a whole flock will come. They do not have much peace because our two cats sit and watch them. They are either sparrows or snowbirds. I do not know which.

RUTH WIGHT, Age 10.

Has New Calf

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you about what we have in the barn. I will give you three guesses. It has four legs, two ears, one tail, two eyes. We have not named him yet but we will find him a name before long. I will tell you what it is, if you cannot guess. It is a calf. He is very much alive. I tried to lead him but he ran around the barn so fast that I could not hold him. We have not taught him to drink yet.

Feeding the Birds

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my second letter to you. In front of my house there are many birds that come daily. The names of the birds are Blue Jay, Snowbird and the Starling. When I see they have come I go out and give them corn, scratch feed and bread crumbs to eat. They are all pretty birds. I hope that all the little girls and boys will be kind enough to feed the birds, as the weather is bad and they can't get anything to eat.

OLIVE FLETCHER, Age 10.

Ben Franklin

Dear Uncle Jed: I read the stories by the Wide Awakes and find them very interesting. Franklin's boyhood was full of hard work. His education was very scanty, but at an early age he showed his fondness for books. At the age of ten he was taken from school to help his father make candles. Franklin did not like this and later assisted his brother in printing. At the age of eighteen as the result of a quarrel with his brother, he ran away and went to Philadelphia with a dollar and a quarter in his pocket. The lady who laughed at him going down the street when he had two loaves of bread under his arm was later his wife. Franklin wrote the Poor Richards Almanac.

A Visit to the Farm

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my visit on a farm. Last summer my aunt wrote to mother asking if I could spend two weeks with her in the country. Mother said I could go, though she thought I would make too much trouble and my aunt would get tired. I promised that I would be as sweet as sugar all the time, so mother let me write the answer, saying I was coming on Wednesday.

Annie Adams, a great friend of mine, lives near my aunt's. I wrote to her also, so that she would know I was coming again. I told her to be ready for some fun. I hadn't been there since February and I knew there would be at least forty new things to see on the farm.

I went to bed very early that Tuesday night, but I guess I was awake half the night. I heard the clock strike the hour more than once. Then suddenly mother said, "It's high time you waked up. The car is here, ready to take you to he farm."

When I arrived they were all glad to see me. And I was glad myself because I always do love he farm.

When the two weeks were nearly gone, I had a cough and my voice became very hoarse. Aunt Mary said, "My dear child, I do believe you are beginning to have a fever. You must see the doctor tonight."

The doctor asked if I was having any aches and pains. I answered, "None at all," so he told my aunt that he thought I'd pull through all right. Annie was sure I took cold just so I could stay longer. Truly, I didn't, but it did look as if I meant to play a trick.

Keeping the Sabbath Day

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you. Every week I enjoy the Wide Awake circle ever so much. I am writing to tell you about my five year perfect record at the Central Baptist sunday school. When I was two years, ten and a half months old mother and I went to Sunday school. Every Sunday from Jan. 11, 1920, I have been in my class. I have received rewards, also an attendance diploma. My first Bible verse, was, Give us day by day our daily bread. —St. Luke, 11:13. I will be 8 years old the 27th of this month.

EDWIN CARL COLE, Jr.

Flax

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about flax. The flax plant bears pretty blue flowers. A field of flax in blossom is a very pretty sight.

When the plant is ripe for harvesting the work people pull it up by the roots, and lay it in water to soak.

This is done in order to dissolve the gum which hold the fibres of the bark together.

The fibres of the slender delicate stem are the part to be spun into thread and woven into cloth.

When the plant has lain long enough in water it is taken out, rinsed, and dried. Then it is beaten and combed. The large comb or hatchet separates the long fibres from the short ones which we call tow. The flax now looks very much like long, light-colored hair.

It is then spun into threads, from which linen cloth is made.

Eclipse of the Sun

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the total eclipse of the sun. Saturday morning I awoke at 7 o'clock. When I got up my father had smoked a half dozen pieces of glass. We watched to see which one would see a piece taken out of the sun first. I was the first to see it. We all went up on a hill to see the eclipse. Bye and bye it grew dark. The moon had a corona around it which was very beautiful. There were three stars Jupiter, Venus and Mercury. There was a jumping shadow which was seen on the snow before the eclipse was total. I saw a pretty rainbow. I think that was the prettiest sight I ever saw.

RUTH HUGGARD, Age 8

A Lucky Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell about my dog. His name is Rags. He is a very nice dog. He likes to swim very much. One day a short time ago he went down to the river for a swim. He went out on the ice, and through his great desire for a swim fell into an air hole. My mother and another woman heard his cries and went to the river bank. When they got to the bank they saw Rags about twenty feet from shore. The only part of his body that was out of the ice was his head.

My mother could do nothing so she went home to get my father who just came home for dinner. He went to the river and walked out on the ice and got Rags out. He carried the dog home and wrapped him up warm. We all thought he would get sick but he did not. I think he was a lucky dog don't you?

Likes Wide Awake Letters

Dear Uncle Jed: I want you to know I enjoy reading the Wide Awake letters. Mother used to read them to me and brother before we could read them ourselves now we don't miss it. I want to tell the Wide Awakes about the fun I have with my new sled. I slide so much that when night comes I am all tired out. I hope this letter wins me a boy scout book so I won't have to slide on my sled so much that I can rest and read for a while.

Our Saving Club

Dear Uncle Jed: In our school we have formed a saving club. The children bring as many pennies as they can. Usually our teacher or the supervisor takes the money to the bank.

Every child who is thrifty likes this plan. Most of the children earn their money by helping their parents. They do useful jobs for them; for instance the girls washing dishes, and the boys helping their dads.

Monday is Bankers Day, and all children try to beat each other in bringing more pennies.

I have saved fourty two cents. The way I get my money is by helping mother wipe the dishes, and I also rock the baby. Mother always gives me a cent or two, for doing it for her.

Our school has saved nearly 80 dollars. I am proud to know that our school has so many thrifty children.

ROSE COHEN, Age 8.

A Pretty Sight

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you because I thought you might like to hear about a pretty sight I saw one day. In our neighborhood there are quite a few deer and there are some dogs around that are in the habit of chasing them.

One morning I looked out of the window and saw five deer. They soon jumped over the wall and were gone.

Later I heard some dogs barking in our pasture. I climbed up on the wall and looked. Suddenly I saw a white tail go up and I saw a deer in the pasture. He stood there awhile then he started and disappeared in the brush.

The same time he started two smaller deer ran from the thicket. They had light tan coats and looked very pretty jumping over the brush. They ran around the pasture and then disappeared.

It was about the prettiest sight I have ever seen.

A Story About Bees

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time. Now I will write a story about bees. Last summer I visited my grandmother in the country. My uncle keeps bees. One day he had two swarms. One was in an apple tree, and the other one was on the wall in some poison ivy.

One day I heard a buzzing noise. I didn't know what it was. So I looked around and saw the bees in the apple tree. I ran up to the tool house where my uncle was and told him about the bees. My father came down a little while after that and said he had found another swarm.

My uncle was making new hives. So he took one of the hives he had finished making, and took some molasses and walnut leaves, and rubbed the hives with it inside. I asked him why he did it. He said he did it so the bees wouldn't smell the new wood. He took the pruning shears and cut the swarm off the apple tree, and put it near the hives. The bees crawled over each other while trying to go into the hive.

The bees on the wall were very hard to get. He had to take them off in handfuls. I was afraid the bees would sting him, but they didn't. The bees are still living. They make much honey. My uncle gives us many boxes of it, and we eat it all. They must have to work awful hard to make all they do. In the winter if they haven't enough for themselves, my uncle gives them sugar and water. One winter he made some for them. He asked me if I wanted to taste of it so I said yes. It is good after it is boiled. It tastes like sirup.

One day he looked over the bee hives. My sister and I went with him. He took out some of the frames and looked them over. In some of the frames were little bees.

The baby bees looked like little white worms. They looked like snakes coiled up. He looked into all of the hives, and found baby bees in most all of them. In some of the frames the little bees were dead. When they are dead they look a brownish black.

He also showed us the queen bees and the drones. The queen bees were young bees. They were in a thing that looked like a peanut shell. When they are old enough they make a hole in one end of the comb and come out. The drones are the bees that do not work.

They are called drones because they are lazy. When the queen finds out they don't work she kills them. I think it is awful but I suppose they have to do something with them. I like to watch my uncle take the frames out, but I am afraid the bees will sting me. But he doesn't mind them at all.

My School

Dear Uncle Jed: I am a little girl seven years old. I am writing you a little letter. I hope I win a book. I like to read easy books. This is the first time I am writing to you. I am wishing you and the other children a happy new year.

Dog's Name is Muggins

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awakes I am going to tell you about My Dog. My dog's name is Muggins. He is an airdale. He has long hair. He does not like the water. In the spring he catches woodchucks. He will be two years old April 12. He is a very big dog.

HAROLD CROWDER, Age 9.

The Eclipse

Dear Uncle Jed: It is a long time since I wrote to the Wide Awake Circle, so I thought I would write and tell you about the eclipse.

Many people wonder why the eclipse occurs. The cause of the eclipse is the passing of the moon between the sun and the earth.

To see this beautiful sight I went on top of a high hill. I took with me a smoked glass. Everytime I'd look through the glass the sun grew smaller and it was very red.

At last the eclipse appeared. For a few minutes it was dark. There was four stars. Perhaps you would like to know the names of them, they were Jupitor, Mars, Mercury and Venus. As the eclipse was on hand a soft wind arose. After two minutes the eclipse disappeared.

I enjoyed watching the eclipse. I hope that every Wide Awake was able to see it.

Has Pet Sheep

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I will tell you about my pet sheep. Nannie. She is all white and in the winter she has thick wool. She is almost eight years old. Nannie does not stay with the other sheep but she likes to stay in the yard and play with the children. She does not go far from the house. I have to tie her up because she eats the rosebushes.

DAVID PEPIN, Age 8.

A Walk in the Woods

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a walk my friend and I took in the woods. We were going down the cow path and we could hear the birds singing and the cows were right near us. We went down by the river in the pasture, and picked flowers. We had our lunch with us so we stayed there by the river and ate it. When we got done we were going back home and we saw a big black horse. We were both afraid and we didnt know which way to turn. After a while we saw a path. We went down it and I went right over a snake and didn't know it. My friend began to yell and we were very much frightened. When we got past that we went straight home and it was five o'clock. We started at 10 o'clock. I think we would have had a good time only for the horse and snake scaring us.

GRACE L. WALSH, Age 12.

Clean Teeth

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing a story and would like to tell you how to keep our teeth long. We will need our teeth all our life. With good care they will last long. Neglect means big dentists' bills and much pain later. And perhaps rheumatism, heart and kidney trouble for poison from neglected teeth goes all through the body.

Have a dentist clean and fill them twice a year. Then the cavities won't get big. Filling small cavities seldom hurts. Clean your teeth yourself night and morning. If possible, after each meal, too, for food particles left on the teeth. Use a stiff brush with uneven bristles and brush teeth and gums, gently with a rapid, circular motion. Use warm water and soapy toothpaste. Clean sides and tops of teeth with the brush and between teeth with dental floss. Hang your brush in the air and sunshine and don't let anyone else use it. Rinse your mouth every morning with a little baking soda in the water.

HELEN KOLBUSZ.

A Wise Horse

Dear Uncle Jed: I am now going to tell you about a wise horse. A horse was grazing in a field near Leeds. In the field was a trough and a pump at the side.

The master's work was to keep the trough filled with water. He often neglected his work, and the horse was left without water.

One day, the horse was very thirsty and there wasn't any water in the trough. He seized the handle with his mouth and began swinging it up and down. Soon the trough was filled with water. He drank heartily.

A Winter Experience

Uncle Jed: One winter day I went to school and it was snowing so I could hardly get there. When I got there my feet were wet and the children were playing. So I watched them play checkers in front of the stove.

Then after my feet were dry I played checkers at recess. Then too I had a lot of fun making snowballs. The boys made a snow fort and hid in back of it and threw snowballs.

The next week they came back and found half of it broken. They had to build it up. After they had built it we had a snow fight. But I was not in it. A girl friend of mine played with me and we made snowmen. I made one on the bulletin board where they put the notices. Then the bell rang and we had to go in. The next day the boys came back and knocked them over.

A Letter From Stratford

Dear Uncle Jed: I was reading the paper for January 27. I saw a letter, My Trip to Bridgeport. I was very much interested. For you see I only live about six miles from Bridgeport. I do not get the paper. But my grandmother does and she only lives a little way from us. I have no pets, but I have a little sister. She's almost six years old. I am in the sixth grade and expect to go in the seventh grade in a few days. You see we are promoted twice a year. We go a half a grade at a time.

My mother was born in Norwich. She went to Pearl street school, when she was as old as I am.

ELOISE BRAGUE, Age 12.

Our Sleigh-ride

Dear Uncle Jed: My mother decided that we could go on a sleigh ride. The next morning I asked the teacher if we could go she said we could that night. After school we were all excited. I fell out of my seat. Then all of a sudden we heard sleigh bells. I looked out of the window, it was the man that was going to take us. We all piled in like sardines. That night it was half past five when we got home. We had a very pleasant time. I wish we could go again.

MARION KNOUSE, Age 10.

Helping the Poor

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about helping the poor. One day as I was walking down Eighth street I met an old man. He was very dirty and ragged. I had fifty cents for I was going to the moving pictures. He held out his hat and I gave him my fifty cents. So I went home and told my mother what I had done. She gave me 25c more and I went to the moving pictures. I hope the Wide Awakes will like my story.

MARGARET LUCILLE BITGOOD, Age 10.

The Eclipse

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write and tell you about the eclipse on January 24, 1925. It lasted two hours. It was total for two minutes. There will not be another eclipse for three hundred and eighty years. I saw it and hope all the Wide Awakes did too. There will be an eclipse on the moon on February 8, 1935.

There were seven stars, three of which were known planets. They were Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

CLIFTON BITGOOD, Age 11.

George Washington

Dear Uncle Jed: I will now tell you about George Washington. He was born in Virginia, Feb. 22, 1732. He was a very bright lad. Everybody liked him. When he and his friends played soldier he was always captain. He never did an underhanded thing. George hated a lie. He was president from 1789 to 1797. Died Dec. 14, 1799.

BLANCH GOULET, Age 10.

The British Isles

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write and tell you about the British Isles. They are west of Europe. First of all I will name the divisions, England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. These little islands own many parts of the world. They are great manufacturers. The people call Ireland the Emerald Isle. They get cotton rubber, tin, silk and other things from their possessions. London is the capital and largest city in the world. Glasgo in Scotland is noted for its ship building. The British Isles are warmed by the gulf stream, they have cold winters also. These island's form the United Kingdom. Liverpool is the chief port on the west coast of Great Britain. It is on the Mersey river.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Jumper the Hare's Race for Life

Who finds he cannot stand the pace
May by his wit yet win the race.
—Jumper the Hare.

These were hard times for everybody. Perhaps this isn't quite true. There were a few who, like Prickly Porky and Paddy the Beaver and Jerry Muskrat, had little or nothing to worry about. Living on bark, Prickly Porky could always get a good meal when he needed it. Being protected by a thousand little spears in his coat, he was afraid of no one. Paddy the Beaver and Jerry Muskrat, living in their snug houses and getting their food beneath the ice, didn't even know it was bad weather. They didn't have a single worry. But with the others it was very different. Jumper the Hare could find enough to eat, but he didn't know a moment of restful peace. Hunger kept his enemies constantly searching for him. He never moved without the feeling that the next second he might have to take to his long heels for his life. Reddy Fox, Old Man Coyote, Yowler the Bob Cat, Terror the Goshawk and Hooty the Great Horned Owl spent a great deal of their time hunting for Jumper. He slept with one eye open, as the saying is. He would jump at the sound of a bit of ice falling from the trees.

Then when Old Man Coyote would come in sight Jumper would race away in a great panic

Late one afternoon Old Man Coyote caught the scent of hare as he was trotting along in the Green Forest. Instantly he stopped. That scent was so strong that he knew that Jumper was close by. Very patiently and stealthily and carefully he began to hunt for Jumper. Jumper kept as still as he dared to. Because his coat was as white as the snow on which he sat he could not be easily seen unless he moved. Twice Old Man Coyote went right past within a few feet of Jumper and did not see him. But the third time he came that way he smelled Jumper and headed straight for Jumper's hiding place. Jumper waited as long as he dared to and then with a great jump away he went. Old man Coyote was after him instantly. If the snow had been soft Jumper could have escaped without any trouble. But it was covered with an icy crust, and on this Old Man Coyote could run as easily as Jumper. Now Jumper is one of those foolish people who, when they are frightened, lose their heads, as the saying is. If he had run easily he could have tired Old Man Coyote out. But he didn't run easily. He ran with all his might until he was out of breath and had to stop. Then when Old Man Coyote would come in sight Jumper would race away again in a great panic.

The result was that after awhile he ran a much shorter distance each time. He was growing tired. Old Man Coyote didn't seem to be tired at all. Jumper saw this and it frightened him more than ever. He tried all the tricks he knew to fool Old Man Coyote, but Old Man Coyote wasn't to be fooled. He understood every trick that Jumper tried, and at trick after trick failed Jumper began to be in despair. He couldn't fool Old Man Coyote and he couldn't tire him out. What could he do? He must find some place that he could get into but that Old Man Coyote couldn't get into. That was the only way he could save himself. But he was so frightened that he couldn't think. It began to look very much as if Jumper the Hare was running his last race.

Bumsteads Worm Syrup

To children at first it's delicious, then comes pain. Then follows nausea, vomiting, fever, convulsions, death. If SANTONIN, Oil Chenopodium, Calomel, Worm Candy or Lozenges have been given, or by mail, take a bottle.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

New York, Feb. 14—Irregularity characterized this week's financial and commodity markets. Stock prices, in the main, drifted lower despite violent advances in some of the high-priced industrial specialties. Grain prices reacted further in reflection of the gradual elimination of the speculative accounts in the principal commodities. Cotton prices held relatively steady.

One of the most interesting developments of recent weeks has been the large amount of new stock financing which has embraced such widely diversified liens of business as oil refining, electrical refrigeration, meat packing, radio, drugs, cotton, manufacturing, and department stores. Meanwhile, the flood of new bond offerings has continued bringing the year's total to date to around $800,000,000.

The feature of the foreign exchange market this week was the sharp reaction in French francs, which carried them down to around 5.15 cents. Selling of the French currency was inspired by reports of a threatened increase in note circulation as a result of the government's difficulties in arranging its budget. Demand sterling sold below $4.77, or nearly 4 cents under its recent high level.

Escaped Prisoner Recovered

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 15.—Emilian Ostrowski, of Bridgeport, a patient at Norwich state hospital, Preston, escaped from the institution Saturday night and this forenoon when he was observed acting strangely at the union station, he was taken into custody by E. J. Montgomery, special agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, when it developed that Ostrowski had fled from the hospital. Later in the day officials of the institution came to New London and took charge of the patient.

JEWETT CITY

A valentine dance given in Rioux hall Friday night under the auspices of Faith Chapter, O. E. S., was very successful. The hall was never more beautifully decorated. The platform was transformed into a living room, with rugs, wicker furniture, floor lamp, baskets of roses and red candles. On the curtained doorway was a large heart and red arrow. Over the hall ceiling, red and white festoons were lavishly used. More than half a hundred vari-colored balloons were suspended among the festoons and at sixteen different points there were large balloons filled with confetti. The windows were curtained in ruffled white crepe paper, with red hearts in the center of the valance. Red hearts were on the walls around the hall. At a certain time in the dance program, the confetti from the large balloons overhead fell in showers, the small balloons floated airly around the hall and paper serpentines and packages of confetti were added to thee pretty confusion. Morey's orchestra furnished music and Prof. F. H. Gilbert prompted. The committee was Mrs. Dona Ballou, Mrs. Earl S. Hiscox and Miss Doris Myott. Miss Myott was in charge of the decorations.

A valentine social was held in the Methodist vestry Friday evening, under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Robertson and Mrs. A. C. Burdick. The evening was spent in playing games, the contests in some cases being among groups of two and three persons. John Neil took the prize in the bow and arrow contest. Heart sandwiches, cake and cocoa were the lunch, cafeteria style.

Judge John Barry's town court had a grist of cases of various sorts Saturday morning. There were three cases of violation of the liquor law, four arrests made by the Groton barracks state police. They were citizens of the vicinity near Pachaug. Sam Chekam got $400 and costs and went to jail, Thomas Stalaboin was fined the same and took an appeal, Anna, his wife, was fined $200 and paid, Del St. John and Ed. Fotrest were arrested by Officer Viegard for drunkenness, and paid $13.77 each. Polydore Rondeau's case, of driving an unregistered automobile, was brought up, after waiting two weeks. He entered a demurrer which was overruled, and he was fined $38 and costs on two counts. He appealed. His arrest was made by Officer Viegard.

Reports of pistol shots were heard about 8 o'clock Saturday night in the vicinity of Brown avenue. But no fatalities seemed to follow, as everything seemed serene Sunday. Possibly it was only valentine heart target practice, or someone's hip-pocket bomb exploded.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

OVER 500 NAMES COMMEMORATED BY MEMORIAL TABLETS AT ST. MARY'S

Sunday morning at the services in St. Mary's Memorial church, the pastor, Rev. W. A. Keefe, called the attention of the large congregations to the memorial tablets that have been erected in the church that will commemorate the names of those making the larger donations at the time of and since the building of the beautiful new church. These are small cast bronze plates, that have been set in the walls and on the pews, a plate for each name, something over 500 names in all.

Father Keefe called especial attention to the fine organ and the memorial tablets which would be found upon it. Here he had assembled, he said the names of non-Catholic friends who contributed so generously toward the funds for building the new church. As the organ was a symbol of harmony it seemed fitting that it should bear these memorial tablets to the non-Catholic friends, whose gifts were an indication of harmony and good will, a spirit that ought to continue to exist. At this time, when in some other communities there is bad feeling, strife and division, it seemed fitting to erect these tablets that would be reminders and symbols of the good spirit that is shown in Norwich. The names on the tablets are of those who made gifts of $50 or over and the total donations of these non-Catholic friends has nearly met the price of the organ, which cost $7,500.

Since the tablets have been placed around the walls of the church the members of the parish have expressed their great satisfaction with this plan that has been carried out by the rector and within the past few days over $1,100 has been placed in his hands to provide for additional tablets, while there is promise of more money to be received for this purpose.

FAITH AND SCIENCE SOURCE IS THE SAME, SAYS PRIEST

Sunday morning, at 7.30, Rev. John J. Reilly, who read the low mass in St. Patrick's church, chose as his text the Saviour's words, from John XVI., "I have many things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now." These words were spoken but a short time before the Lord was to leave His disciples, and were, in brief, a warning to them that there would be much which they and His millions of followers to come could not understand, but must take on faith, by the word of another, through His teaching church.

The preacher made the point that there must always be things in life which Christ's followers must wonder about, but the knowledge of which they cannot yet bear, since their weak and imperfect minds cannot compass that which is in the knowledge of God. Life, he declared, is filled with unexplained marvels—the mystery of love, the puzzle of pain, the problem of suffering. Why these and others must be we cannot know, until death shall tear away the veil which hides their solution in eternity from our human intellects. When men, boasting in a little knowledge, proclaim that science is all, scoff at those who believe what cannot be proved, claiming that faith and science contradict each other, they make the mistake of forgetting that both science and faith have their source in God—hence are completely compatible.

Father Reilly advocated a belief as strong and convincing as was the faith of the woman of the Scriptures, who, although unable to crowd through the throng to reach the benignant Redeemer thought with compelling conviction, "If I touch but the hem of His garment I shall be healed." Having this faith, it should be put into practical activity; and this was the thought which he developed in his brief instruction.

In administering Holy Communion to the customary large number of penitents, including the members of the Rosary Society, Father Reilly had the assistance of Rev. Edward Marcoux, a missionary from LaSalette College, Hartford, who aided the parish priests over the week end.

It was the sixth Sunday after Epiphany, the epistle read in all masses being I. Thessalonians, 1, 2-10 and the gospel Matthew xiii, 31-35—the parable of the sower and the seed.

BOYS OF HI-Y CLUB HEAR TALK ABOUT COLLEGE

The local Hi-Y club had a very interesting and busy meeting Friday night at the Y. M. C. A. after meeting in the afternoon in the gym and enjoying athletic events and games. Following the gym work a period was spent in the swimming pool. Supper was served promptly at six o'clock. President Haslam was presiding officer, George Gulle was song-leader and Robert Otis officated at the piano. Short speeches were made by Theodore Montgomery and Frederick Benton on Current Topics, and a splendid message was brought to the club by Harold E. Robbins of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. Mr. Robbins told the members some of the things that they would be up against when they arrived at college. He brought out very clearly a number of things that a fellow would receive benefits from at college besides simply studies. First, one will find it hard to adjust himself to the lack of restraint and apparent discipline when he arrives at college. He will also find it hard to accept responsibility. In college one can drift along or he can work hard to get all that is possible out of the time that one is there and no one seems apparently to care or take very much interest in whether you fail or succeed. One of the greatest things that one gets out of college is knowledge and ability to handle things. Science trains a man's mind to arrange things in an orderly manner. One also gains the knowledge to know how to mix and mingle with other men. The man who can mix with others well, has a great advantage over his competitor. Contacts with other men is also another source of great help.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

BINGHAM FAMILY ASS'N RECALLS NORWICH ANCESTOR

Members of the Bingham family from several states met in New York Thursday night at the Waldorf-Astoria to form the Bingham Association. Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut was elected president. The other officers chosen were: General Theodore A. Bingham of New York, first vice president; Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, Ky., second vice president; F. F. Bingham of Pensacola, Fla., third vice president; Prof. Eugene C. Bingham of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., secretary; F. L. Bingham of New York, treasurer; Dr. Anne Bingham of New York, recorder.

The object of the association will be the collection and publication of data concerning the family, the preservation of landmarks and other objects of historical value and interest connected with the family, and the conservation of the best traditions of the family.

Many of the representatives of the family who attended Thursday night's meeting and became charter members were descended from Thomas Bingham of Sheffield, England, son of a master cutler, who came to this country in 1639 and settled at Norwich, Conn. He was the father of eleven children, who settled in various parts of New England.

If the good fish still in the sea are wise they will continue to abide there.

CONGRESSMAN FREEMAN SPOKE IN EULOGY OF BRANDEGEE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Washington, Feb 15.—The house today pronounced eulogies on the late Senator Frank B. Brandegee of Connecticut, once a member of that body. Congressman Tilson of New Haven delivered the principal eulogy as the dean of the Connecticut delegation. Other members from Connecticut and former colleagues of Senator Brandegee also spoke eloquently. Tributes were paid by the speakers to Senator Brandegee for his splendid statesmanship, his loyalty and devotion to friends, the state he represented and to the country.

Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London paid tribute to the former senator from his state in the following words:

Mr. Speaker: Even if I spoke "with the tongues of men and of angels" I would find it difficult to voice a true appreciation of the character and life work of the late distinguished senator from Connecticut—Frank Bosworth Brandegee.

But the opportunity afforded by this memorial session to inscribe in our records permanently, a loving and sympathetic tribute to one whose memory we shall always cherish, I undertake, with something like the sorrowing emotion of a younger brother. You must realize, that we of his home town, not only lament but regret profoundly his untimely death. We knew him and we loved him, we were proud of him, we ever rejoiced to honor him, conscious at all times that thus we honored ourselves.

When in 1903 we, of the Second Congressional District in Connecticut, sent Senator Brandegee here to represent us in this branch of our national government, we sent you our best. As many of you perhaps know, in all of the smaller cities and towns of old New England, from colonial times down to our own, one family at least stands out as closer kin to royalty—so to speak—than all others. Their virtues and their attainments attest their real worth. In New London, one of the oldest settlements in New England, the Brandegee family had occupied for several generations just such an enviable position. Its members were not only refined and cultured, but able and public spirited as well. They enjoyed the esteem and respectful consideration of their fellow townsmen. Thus you may vizualize the happy environment to which Senator Brandegee was born. From birth he was one of the fortunate of earth, and seemed blessed with every good gift. During his youth he was subjected to careful and wise training by devoted parents, and the fruit of this training throughout his whole life never failed to reflect aught but credit and honor to them.

His father, Honorable Augustus Brandegee, Yale graduate, a most distinguished lawyer, a brilliant wit, was showered with political honors by both city and state. He, too, was elected a member of this house, serving during the closing years of the Civil war. It so happened that through successive bereavements, the father came to set great store by his youngest son, the late senator. So nobly did this son respond, and strive in all ways to fulfil every wish and ambition the father's heart held for him, that the elder man was forced to acknowledge at times that he idolized this son.

While possessed of marked intellectual ability, Senator Brandegee's interests at Yale, where he was graduated in the class of '85, were not exclusively, nor even chiefly scholastic. Because of his charming personality he was one of the most popular men of his class, and these years found him nothing loth to giving crew and team, glee club and a host of friends their full share of his time. A year of travel in Europe followed graduation. Admission to the bar in 1888, and a few years of successful practice were quickly followed by political preferment in city and state, almost identical with that bestowed upon the elder Brandegee.

In 1902, at 38 years of age, with ideal training and experience for a splendid career here in Washington, Senator Brandegee was elected to membership in this house. But before winning his spurs here, he was advanced in May, 1905, to the senate. How well his work there fulfilled the promise of his young manhood, his manifold labor for a score of years on some of the most important committees, bear most eloquent witness.

The Appalachian Mountain Reservation was established while Senator Brandegee was chairman of the committee on forest reservation. While he was serving in a like capacity on the interoceanic canals committee, the Panama canal was building. As a member of the foreign relations committee, where his knowledge and judgment carried not only great respect but also strong influence, he allowed his whole mind to be absorbed with the study of the league of nations question; and as chairman of the important judiciary committee he constantly gave evidence of marked ability and legal acumen.

As we of course well realize, the work on such varied committees was arduous and exacting, especially for one never content with half knowledge. Senator Brandegee must delve to the very heart of any important matter under consideration, for only then would he allow himself to form a fixed judgment in regard thereto. When his course was once determined, his colleagues knew that as far as he was concerned, it met with the approval of "both head and heart, and both in earnest."

Duty was always a reality with Senator Brandegee and a most potent one. Any and all of his speeches on the floor of the senate, infrequent though they were, might have had a Catonian ending, but in place of "Carthago delenda est," we should have heard, "I have done what I thought my duty." This explains the intensity of his opposition to the entrance of the United States into the league of nations. All his spirit and his energy were roused to action in that crisis of our history. To him the place of the United States of America was among the hilltops of peace, lofty and serene, like a daughter of the stars: in company with a host of others if maybe, but alone if necessity compels; breathing a spirit of friendliness and sympathy and helpfulness to all other nations, but never for a moment agreeing to descend and dwell in the European plains of distrust, and greed, and dissensions.

Senator Brandegee's spirit was one that loved to be unhampered, unfettered, in any way. When ill health drew one cordon close until it hurt, and loss of fortune still another, he felt that he had run his course, and that with no near relatives to grieve he might seek the rest his soul longed for. Despite his charm of personality and the scintillating play of wit which drew so many to him, there were depths in his nature that were never plumbed, reserves that no friend ever fathomed. We can well believe that in the solitude and loneliness of long days and nights during the recess, alone in his beautiful home, he—thinker as he was—oft pondered the thought, "If a man die shall he live again?"

Senator Brandegee was such a tower of strength to others that it is hard to believe that he is gone, another stands in his place. But since he willed it so, we must, while lamenting his loss, pray that only men as courageous, as intellectual, and as incorruptible as he was may be found serving the nation. Connecticut may well be proud of the public career of her loyal son.

WILL FORM UNIT FOR HOME SERVICE WORK

The regular meeting of the missions department of the women's federation of Park Congregational church was held in the Hugh Henry Osgood Memorial at 3.30 Friday afternoon, with Miss Edith Bliss, the chairman, presiding.

The devotional exercises were led by Miss Amy Coggswell with Mrs. Charles A. Saxton at the piano and Miss Elizabeth Collins leading the singing.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Mrs. John S. Blackmar, Miss Bliss introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. J. D. Prigmore of New Haven, who gave an interesting account of the activities of the units of the home service work throughout the state in supplementing the work of home missions. There were 123 units reported last year, and several more have been formed, who have been working for A. M. A. schools, hospitals, the missionary homes, and Ellis Island. The work is varied, some units furnishing linen for dining rooms, dormitories and hospital beds or making surgical dressings, layettes and providing toys for sick children.

It was voted to form a unit and Mrs. Haworth Collins was elected as chairman.

During the program Miss Elizabeth Collins sang in a pleasing manner, Baby's Boat and When the Roses Bloom, accompanied by Mrs. Saxton.

After tea was served by the committee, Miss Alice Coggswell chairman, Mrs. W. M. Eastwood, Mrs. R. F. Smith and Mrs. E. J. Graham, with Mrs. Humphrey Almy and Mrs. James M. Morten at the tea table.

VAUDEVILLE ENTERTAINERS AT STATE HOSPITAL

The patients and staff at the Norwich State Hospital were royally entertained Friday morning, when, largely through the efforts of Gerald Griffin, the international singing star at the Palace theatre, the several acts now playing at the theatre were shown in the hospital theatre auditorium.

Mr. Griffin's songs and stories were greatly enjoyed, his accompanist being William Conway, the Australian concert pianist. Mme. Naree and Mme. Merle of the Fehnova Dancers gave beautiful exhibitions of dancing and Officer Hyman entertained with songs and stories. Gladys Delmar and her troupe of star players, William Russ, leader; Joseph Roberts, violin; Fred Maier, saxophone; Gordon Davis, traps, were extremely well received.

The hospital staff deeply appreciated the work of the several players and spoke in praise of their most pleasing entertainment for the patients. The success of the entertainment was indicated by the insistent demands for encore numbers.

GAVE SURPRISE SHOWER FOR MISS ALICIA HAGGERTY

At the home of Miss Evon M. Broadhurst, No. 22 Fairmount street, Saturday evening, Miss Alicia Haggerty was given a surprise miscellaneous shower, in honor of her approaching marriage to Albert Van Wagenen. There were about 20 present and the evening proved a most delightful one. Games, music and dancing were enjoyed and sandwiches, coffee, fancy cakes and ice cream were served at a prettily decorated table. Valentine decorations were attractively arranged.

Miss Haggerty received a number of pretty gifts. Miss Broadhurst was assisted in serving by her mother, Miss Irene Broadhurst and Miss Louise Higgins.

COURTLAND WHITNEY HAS LEAD IN COLLEGE PLAY

The cast chosen to play in the Middlebury Junior play, Three Live Ghosts, was announced Saturday by the junior play committee. The leading parts of William Foster and Rose Gordon are to be taken by Courtland Whitney of Norwich, Conn., and Mary Broomell of Chicago, Ill. Jimmy Gubbins, an important character role, is to be played by Louis Lebowitz of Bridgeport.

Courtland Whitney who is to play the leading role is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy in the class of 1921. At Middlebury he has won his varsity letter in both baseball and football for two seasons. He is a member of the Chi Psi fraternity.

Commissioner Bradford at Meeting.

George H. Bradford, of Montville, county commissioner and republican state central committeeman from the 20th district, was able to attend the weekly sessions of the county commissioners at New London last week after an illness of several days. The inclement weather of the early part of the week brought on a slight attack of pleurisy that caused Commissioner Bradford considerable discomfort.

Commissioner George H. Fellows is confined to his home in Norwich, suffering from a very severe cold. He has been ill for over a week. County Commissioner Charles H. Smith of Noank, thus remains the only member of the board of commissioners who has escaped illness.

Special Information In Regard to Cost of Feeding Poultry and Price of Poultry Products

When grain prices advance there is sure to be a certain number of poultry keepers, both small and large, who throw up their hands and say that there is no money in poultry

Keep your hens and raise more chicks this spring. The increased cost of feeding is not cutting down the profits. The increased price of eggs and poultry more than takes care of the extra cost of feed.

The following shows the cost of feeding per hen one year ago and also the cost of feeding at present prices.

Hens consume about 80 pounds of Feed per year, 45 of Scratch and 35 of Mash Feed.

JANUARY (1924) PRICES
45 lbs. of Scratch, at	$2.75	$1.24
35 lbs. of Mash, at	$3.15	$1.10
Cost of feeding 1 hen 1 year		$2.34

45 lbs. of Scratch, at	$3.60	$1.62
35 lbs. of Mash	$3.50	$1.23
Cost of feeding 1 hen 1 year		$2.85

It costs only 51 c more to feed a hen one year on present high prices or a fraction over 4 c per month, or 1 c a week.

Now let us compare the prices of eggs and poultry this year with last, as compiled by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which are official figures.

January 1925—Average price nearby hennery eggs—64¾c
January 1925—Average price roasting chickens—34½c to 39½c

Take the highest price of eggs in 1924 and you will see that the average price this year is 16½c per dozen higher than last year, or approximately 1.4c per egg...If a hen averages to lay 10 eggs per month, the extra profit based on the selling price of eggs would amount to about 14c per hen, whereas above stated, the extra cost of feeding is 4c per onth, leaving a net profit of 10c per hen per month more than last year, notwithstanding the higher price of Grain.

POETRY

THE TWILIGHT HOURS.

The pilgrim clouds wayfaring through the sky
Have met for evening's grave and solemn rites
Upon the altars of the hills; an glowing heights
The sacrificial fires are flaming high.
No more down ways of earth the great winds cry;
Across the quiet miles the tender lights
Of home call weary feet, and love smiles
Day-sundered hearts in love's dear hearthside tie.

Teach us, O twilight hours, to pray like thee
That we may thy serene contentment know;
Upon our hearts thy consolations lay;
Reveal to us the lovely mystery
Of hills at dusk, that we who toil below
May dream of things that shall not pass away!
—Arthur Wallace Peach, in British Weekly.

LOVE'S CALENDAR.

That gusty spring, each afternoon
By the lvied cot I passed,
And noted at that lattice soon
Her fair face downward cast;
Still in the same place seated there,
So diligent, so very fair.

Oft-times I said I knew her not,
Yet that way round would go,
Until, when evenings lengthened out,
And bloomed the may-hedge row,
I met her by the wayside well,
Whose waters, maybe, broke the spell.

For, leaning on her pail, she prayed,
I'd lift it to her head.
So did I; but I'm much afraid
Some wasteful drops were shed.
And that we blushed, as face to face
Needs must we stand the shortest pace.

Then when the sunset mellowed through
The eras of rustling grain,
When lattices wide open flew,
When ash-leaves fell like rain,
As well as I she knew the hour
At morn or eve I neared her bower.

And now that snow o'erlays the thatch
Each starlit eve within
The door who waits, I raise the latch.
And kiss her lifted chin;
Nor do I think we've blushed again,
For Love hath made but one of twain
—William Bell Scott.

The extinct moa of New Zealand lived largely on tough twigs of bushes. For the grinding of such food the bird required especially hard gravel. When the bird finally died the pebbles endured even after its bones had disappeared and today the lucky finder is rewarded by an occasional precious stone.

With a handful of nuts, William Krause, Wilmington, Del., grocer made a friend of a squirrel which came down a telephone pole. It came back daily for its handout by way of the telephone wire. Curiosity led Krause to follow the squirrel and he found its home was more than a mile away in some timber through which the wire passes. The squirrel comes and goes daily on the wire for its daily feed of nuts.

The last year in copper was marked by the ascendency of a new producing area outside of the American interests. The great property of the Union Miniere du Haut Katanga, Belgian Congo, Africa, has forged into the first place as a copper producer its monthly output now ranking greater than that of any other single mine. Future production will be still heavier if present metallurgical plans are carried out. Other new African deposits of copper are also reported.

Two live sponges, the largest six inches in diameter, were attached to the anchor rope of the mine tender Le when drawn from the water recently near Chichagoff, Alaska. One sponge was of bright yellow and of fine texture. Captain Cedric Davis dropped a gauge overboard and discovered the temperature of the sea twenty fathoms down was 18 degrees warmer than that of the surface. The condition of the floor of the ocean nearby is believed ideal for the development of sponges. News of the sponge discovery aroused almost as much excitement as did the old-time gold craze. Scores of fishermen are seeking diving outfits to explore the submerged rock for sponge beds.

WHEN FOUND, COLLINS HAD BEEN DEAD OVER 24 HOURS

Announcement Made by Physicians—Body Was Found Pinioned by a Boulder at 2.45 Yesterday Afternoon—Floyd Collins' Legs May be Amputated Just Above the Ankle in Order to Hasten Extrication of the Body—Consent Has Been Given by Collins' Father—Adjutant General Kehoe Collapsed in Sand Cave Rescue Camp.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16—(By the A. P.)—The long struggle is ended. Mother Earth, after clinging grimly, in life and death to Floyd Collins for more than 17 days, finally surrendered at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon, and, without warning, opened a tiny hole between a rescue shaft and the natural tomb of the cave explorer.

Peering down this tiny fissure into Sand Cave, the brave workers who had waged an informal combat with the natural forces of the earth, saw that what they had fought so hard for had been lost.

Collins was dead.

But they will reclaim his body, to restore it again to the rugged hills he roamed as a youth and explored as a man.

"Thank God, they've found him." This was Lee Collins' single statement after his boy had been found.

A terse statement, signed by the three men who had led scores of others in the long fight, told of the result and paid tribute to their assistants.

After describing the break through the roof of Sand Cave and the preliminary investigation of it by Albert Marshall, the statement said:

"His game little partner, Ed Brenner of Cincinnati, whose work has been very conspicuous and of untold value by reason of his small stature and great strength and iron nerve, went down head foremost into this hazardous pit and with a light closely examined the face and position of the man who we understood is Floyd Collins, and called up to Mr. Carmichael, five feet above him, that the man was cold and apparently dead."

The Bulletin was signed by Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt, H. T. Carmichael, an M. E. S. Posey.

Dr. William Hazlett of Chicago, and Dr. C. E. Francis of Bowling Green, Ky., announced later that from information they had obtained, Collins had been dead more than 24 hours.

Floyd Collins has been a cave explorer since he was a boy. He was born on a farm five miles from Sand Cave, where the Collins family lives, and as nearly as his father can remember, Floyd has seldom been away from the Cave country.

When just big enough to handle a plow, the mule one day sank to his knees in what has since been known as Mule Cave and Floyd's cave enthusiasm was started. Mule Cave never developed into anything which would attract tourists, but Floyd was determined to find a cavern which would.

Three times before this experience, Collins was caught in caves. Once while exploring new crevices in Crystal Cave he was wedged in a crevice and Johnnie Gerald pulled him out. When he was first exploring Crystal Cave, an earth slide cut him off from the outside but he dug his way through. Earlier in his cave explorations he was held half the night in a crevice in a cliff along Green River, but managed to work himself loose.

A few years after Mule Cave was discovered, Ed Turner, a civil engineer from New York, spent eight to ten months exploring the cave country and taught Floyd the elementary geology he found useful. Between them they located an Onyx Cave, which also was inconsequential, and in Salt Cave, they found an Indian moccasin, one of the prized souvenirs of the region.

By this time, he had started spending his spare time after farm duties in cave hunting. Lee Collins, his father, had taken up trapping and in the bitter winter of 1917, Floyd saw a ground hog disappear into a "sink" on his father's farm.

Floyd spent many days working in the snow enlarging the opening down which the ground hog disappeared, and finally opened the tunnel sufficiently to permit access in comfort to the main cavern. Long afterwards, he found inside the entrance his trap with the foot of a ground hog still fast in it.

"Floyd kept me scared stiff all the time," his father said. "I told him that some day he would be buried deeper than ever I could bury him, but he kept on exploring."

For three weeks Floyd had been working on Sand Cave, his father said. At first there was nothing but a small crevice, but Floyd enlarged it into the present entrance, about six feet high.

Evidences of fires built in Sand Cave by Floyd were found by the first rescue parties, showing he had tried to dry it out as he worked. The knowledge that he was working on Sand Cave led to his discovery about 24 hours after he was trapped by the fall of a boulder on his foot. Otherwise, buried 60 feet under ground, he might have remained hidden forever.

On his last trip down Sand Cave, he had taken along 72 feet of rope with which to lower himself into the huge cavern he said lay behind him.

Some of those among the early rescuers who talked with Floyd said he described his new found cavern as "the most beautiful I have ever seen."

Geological experts and old residents say Floyd's Sand Cave tunnel is the remnant of a greater cavern which once occupied the spot where the little ravine leads down into the mouth of Sand Cave. Many years ago it collapsed.

TO AMPUTATE LEGS JUST ABOVE ANKLES

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16 (By the A. P.)—Floyd Collins' legs will be amputated just above his ankle in order to expedite his delivery from Sand Cave, if officials in charge of the rescue work decide further lateral operations are too dangerous to workmen who already have risked their lives to secure the caveman's release.

This was made known tonight when Lee Collins, aged father, signed a sworn statement to the effect that if Mr. Carmichael, director of actual rescue operations, determined further work too hazardous for his men, he had his signed permission to resort to amputation.

Collins was found firmly pinioned by a boulder which fell on his foot as he was emerging from the cave.

COLLINS HAD BEEN DEAD MORE THAN 24 HOURS

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16.—(By the A. P.)—Floyd Collins is dead. The long race with death ended suddenly at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon in defeat for rescue workers who have been striving for more than two weeks in an effort to rescue the entombed cave explorer.

Physicians after thorough examination announced that Collins had been dead more than 24 hours.

Collins was trapped by a falling boulder in Sand Cave at 10 o'clock Friday morning, January 30. His plight was discovered 24 hours later and there then began a great fight against nature to rescue him.

Heart breaking disappointment the workers encountered repeatedly as nature dumped one hazard after another into their paths.

At last however, man's perseverance won and the limestone roof of Sand Cave collapsed under the weight of the miners and dropped them into the natural passage between where Collins was trapped and a "squeeze" which closed the natural passage some ten days ago. But their indominatable struggle to save him was in vain.

It will take many hours to release his body, from the grip of a rock vise. Physicians were unable to reach his body but Mike Brenner, of Cincinnati, applied their medical tests and found the rescuers came at least 24 hours too late.

There, his eyes sunken, Collins lay. Brenner plunged head first into the narrow crevice, made the hasty examination, and so reported to the physicians who announced the fight had been lost.

TO BE BURIED ON HILLTOP OVERLOOKING MOUTH OF CAVE

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16.—(By the A. P.)—Funeral services for Floyd Collins are planned for Crystal cave, his greatest discovery, and he will be buried on the hilltop overlooking the mouth of Sand cave and the shaft down which the heroic band of volunteers raced with death to reach him, it was decided today by Lee Collins, aged father of the cave explorer.

In Crystal cave, which Floyd discovered in 1917, on his father's farm a few miles from Sand cave, is a huge crystal auditorium, 250 feet high, and this will be Floyd's burial chapel, Mr. Collins said.

Twice he was trapped in Crystal cave, the first time by a dirt fall near the mouth, when he was enlarging the fissure through which he crawled to discover its beauties. Again, later he was caught in a narrow crevice while further exploring the cavern, and was pulled loose by John Gerald, who worked so hard to free him from Sand cave.

The simplest of formalities, in line with the plain, simple lives of the Collins family, will mark the funeral service. After 18 days, Floyd's aged father admitted his hopes for his son's rescue were growing faint and he began to talk of plans for the last rites of his son.

Even then he always added there were always conditions "in case they don't get him out alive."

Almost constantly Mr. Collins and his wife, Floyd's stepmother, have waited within sight of the cave mouth, and then the shaft mouth, hoping against hope, praying aloud, and thanking sadly those friends who came to bring him words of cheer. Homer, Floyd's youngest brother, was for a time permitted to work in the shaft but when the hour of rescue drew near, he was replaced by a more experienced miner and once had to be forcibly restrained from joining the squad being lowered in the bucket.

ADJT. GEN. J. A. KEHOE COLLAPSED IN CAVE

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16.—Adjutant General James A. Kehoe, collapsed in the Sand Cave rescue camp at dusk tonight while talking with a group of men. The adjutant general, prostrate on the ground, was hurriedly given first aid medical attnention and removed to a tent adjoining the Red Cross hospital unit.

A few minutes later it was announced that his condition was not serious.

At Malchensee the roof of a hotel was torn off by the tornado and 1500 square metres of forest destroyed.

At Ehrwald five houses were burned to the ground.

WIDESPREAD STORM IS RAGING IN EUROPE

London, Feb. 16 (By the A. P.)—For the past 36 hours a large section of Europe including the whole of Italy, the Bavarian Alps, and portions of Austria, France, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain and Morocco, have been visited by snowstorms and gales of an extraordinary character, approaching tornado force. These have been responsible for a vast amount of damage to property and crops, and unusually heavy delays in the reception of telegraph despatches, especially from Italy, and the consequent breakdown of telegraphic and telephonic communications.

Only the briefest descriptions of the havoc caused by these storms have yet reached London, and it is feared that when the full tale is told the damage will prove to be exceedingly heavy.

The disturbance seems to have centered in the Mediterranean. The British Isles have been little affected. Italy apparently has been the worst sufferer, the wind strangely resembling an African sirocco, styled by the natives "earthquake weather," presaging possible earth disturbances.

Even the Riviera has not escaped. Everywhere trees have been uprooted and houses unroofed.

Gales, accompanied by torrential rains and hail are reported from the whole Marseilles district, where the river Rhine is rising with alarming rapidity, from Appenzell Canton, in Switzerland, and from the Salzkammergut region of Austria, where a train on the Salzburg-Ischl line was blown over an embankment, many persons being injured. All of these districts suffered much damage, and similar gales have occurred in the eastern zone of Morocco. A steamer was wrecked at El Arich, with some loss of life.

SENATE SENDS POSTAL BILL TO CONFERENCE

Washington, Feb. 16.—The senate today substituted its postal pay and rate increase bill for that passed by the house.

This action was taken without a record vote, and placed the two measures, varying widely on the proposed rate increases, into conference between the senate and house for adjustment of differences.

The senate bill already had been approved once by the chamber, but the house refused to consider it on the ground that it was revenue raising legislation and, as such, could originatt only in the house. Its rate section, it is estimated, will produce little more than $30,000,000 additional revenue, while that of the house bill is said to carry about twice that amount to meet salary increases aggregating more than $60,000,000 a year.

Before readopting its bill as a substitute for the house measure, the senate today struck out, on motion of Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, a provision calling for a one-cent service charge on parcel post packages.

The senate bill also would make the pay increases effective as of July 1, 1924, instead of Jan. 1, 1925, as provided by the house measure, and it carries as a "rider" the corrupt practices act limiting the campaign expenditures of congressional candidates as recommended by the special senate campaign expenditures committee.

Aerial Stunts as Treatment of Deaf

Patient's Hearing Was "Markedly Improved" in First Experiment.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Aerial rough riding was partially successful as a hearing restorative to a man totally deaf for more than two years, United States army officials reported today, after Herbert R. Olstead, of West Orange, N. J., had completed a flight designed to shock him back into hearing.

For the first time since he was stricken deaf, Olstead, a trooper of the New Jersey state police, said when he stepped from the plane that he could distinguish tones of human voices. Army medical men, although not committing themselves as to the efficacy of the experiment, declared that the patient's hearing was "markedly improved." They were sufficiently impressed to order a continuation of the experiment, and Olstead will have another treatment tomorrow.

Olstead's condition is considered psychological and the result of a fear complex, indirectly due to a fracture of the skull received in March, 1922. They said the flight cure attempts were predicted on the theory that sudden dips and unexpected swervings at great altitudes would so shock the mind of the patient as to draw his subconscious attention from his affliction, causing him to forget it completely and thus remove the primal cause of the disability. Olstead was said to have often expressed a dread of receiving a skull fracture before he was injured.

Captain L. N. Knesling took Olstead to a height of 11,000 feet, and then began a rapid descent, unexpectedly spiralling, looping and going into two tail spins on his way earthward. On alighting the patient was rushed to the field research laboratory, where Captain D. I. F. Peake, psyciatrist, examined him. Olstead, excited, immediately announced that he could distinguish tones of the voices about him, but said he could not grasp the words spoken.

His head had "quivered inside," Olstead reported, when Captain Keesling went into his first loop, and the patient added that his ears felt more sensitive."

Tomorrow's treatment will be started at a height of 16,000 feet.

WOULD RESTORE CONFIDENCE IN FINANCES OF FRANCE

Paris, Feb. 16 (By the A. P.)—Premier Herriot made an earnest effort in the chamber of deputies this afternoon to re-weld the "Sacred Union" of parties for the single purpose of restoring confidence in French finances. The opposition appeared to remain insensible to his appeal, while murmurs from the right and the right center that greeted his somewhat pathetic request for a truce indicated there was little chance of the head of the government disarming his adversaries so long as he remains under the influence of the radical-socialist coalition.

Marcel Heraud, one of the opposition deputies, just before the premier spoke, han declared that all parties could accept M. Herriot's assurances with confidence, and that they were well meant, but that so long as M. Leon Blum, leader of the socialist party, was one of the government's most appreciated counsellors, there were grave duobts as to whether the premier would make those declarations good.

The whole chamber approved M. Herriot's vigorous assurance that, cost whatever it might, France would neither inflate nor allow her signature to go to protest. The opposition, however, seemed to make clear that it held a distinction between France and the present government.

The socialists showed nervousness whenever the premier touched on points affecting their doctrines, particularly when he intimated strongly there could be no thought of a capital levy.

SUSPECT FIREBUG AT WORK IN MEDFORD, MASS.

Medford, Mass., Feb. 16.—Working on the theory that a firebug is operating here, state and local police tonight were investigating three tenement house fires which occurred within a few minutes of one another late today. Two of the fires were extinguished without serious loss, but in another a mother and four children were trapped on the third floor and had to be carried down ladders by firemen.

All of the houses were three stories high and of wooden construction. In all three instances the fires started in rubbish in the basement. Doors customarily locked were found open.

Mrs. J. C. Mallory, living on the third floor of the house most badly damaged, was unable to make her way down the smoke-filled stairway with her four children, ranging in age from 1 month to 5 years. An unidentified hero climbed up the outside of the house to the third floor tenement and remained with the family on a rear porch until the arrival of the firemen, when he assisted in the rescue. The interior of the house was badly damaged.

MUSSOLINI SUFFERS AN ATTACK OF INFLUENZA

"Signor Mussolini," said Dr. Bastianelli, "has an iron constitution. This is the first time since he became premier that he has been obliged to take to his bed, and he perhaps might have avoided it in this instance if he had taken care of himself a little earlier."

SENATE CONFIRMS FRANK B. KELLOGG AS SEC'Y OF STATE

Action Was Taken Unexpectedly Without Consideration of the Nomination by the Foreign Relations Committee—To Succeed Charles E. Hughes—Both the Senate and House Have Begun Night Sessions to Endeavor to Clear Calendars—House Has Voted to Reward World Fliers.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The nomination of Frank B. Kellogg, of Minnesota, to succeed Charles E. Hughes as secretary of state, was confirmed today by the senate.

Action was taken unexpectedly and without consideration of the nomination by the foreign relations committee. Chairman Borah had expected to take up Md. Kellogg's appointment in the committee tomorrow.

No opposition was offered to confirmation, Senators said, and senate action came with practically no discussion.

When Senator Kellogg was nominated to be ambassador to England, senators fro mthe northwestern states affiliated with the LaFollette insurgents interposed objection and some of them voted against confirmation. Their objection was not pressed again since Mr. Kellogg's appointment was a personal one to the president's official family.

Immediately after the senate went in executive session, Chairman Borah, changing his original intention, obtained unanimous consent for the consideration of Mr. Kellogg's nomination without its reference to committee. Senator Swanson of Virginia, the ranking democrat of the foreign relations committee, said the minority would offer no opposition to confirmation, and a favorable vote followed without a roll call.

Senator Borah's request for immediate consideration, it was explained, was in line wth the onyl established precedent in the senate of acting on the nominations of former senators without reference to committee.

The senate still has to act on two other cabinet nominations those of William M. Jardine, of Kansas, to succeed Howard M. Gore, of West Virginia, as secretary of agriculture, and Charles B. Warren, of Michigan, to be attorney general. The nomination of Mr. Jardine was sent to the senate last Saturday along with that of Mr. Kellogg, and has been referred to the agriculture committee. Administrator leaders said there would be prompt action on it.

Mr. Warren's nomination is before the judiciary committee, which probably will give it further consideration later in the week.

HOUSE AND SENATE BEGIN NIGHT SESSIONS

Washington, Feb. 16.—Both the house and senate drove forward today in an effort to clear their calendar and each held a night session.

The senate passed and sent to conference the postal pay and rate increase measure and disposed of the other bills before constituting itself into a board of aldermen to consider laws for the city of Washington.

The house cleaned up 30 measures during its day session and leaders had as the objective before adjournment tonight the passage of approximately 100 bills on its unanimous consent calendar.

Most of the measures given house approval were of interest only to certain localities, several were of wide importance. These included a senate resolution extending for two years from next June 30 the arrangement where by press dispatches are transmitted to Wawaii, Alaska and the Orient by navy radio, and house bills providing for restoration of the historic Fort McHenry, Md., and the old Fort Vancouver stockade in Washington state.

FIRE IN TEST ROOM OF NEW ENGLAND T. & T. CO.

Boston, Feb. 16—Fire tonight in the toll test room of the Main office here of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company completely suspended the New England toll service and caused damages of $125,000 which will require weeks to repair. The boards which handle an average of 56,000 calls a day were dead tonight with little likelihood of service tomorrow.

Although all New England toll lines were broken, the long distance lines did not suffer, and until repairs are made emergency calls will be re-routed over long distance to the capacity of the cables. Mesides the regular toll service, the burned sections housed leased wires of the Associated Press, and three other news organizations.

These lines were re-routed out over long distance and inside of an hour fairly consistent service was being maintained between the Boston headquarters and members and subscribers throughout New England. Another type of service hard hit were the special wires of New England broadcasting radio stations. Several programs were halted by the fire damage.

PROTESTS SURRENDER OF ARMY TRUCKS TO STATE

GOVERNMENT VICTORIOUS IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

London, Feb. 16 (By the A. P.)—The government was victorious in the house of commons tonight against the first opposition attack on its general policy, when by a vote of 335 to 146 it defeated Ramsay Macdonald's resolution declaring that the method the government proposed for reviving the safeguarding of industries duties must lead to a system of general tariffs.

The whole discussion was rather unreal, because it turned on the mere question of procedure, not of principle. The government had originally intended to introduce an entirely new bill for the purpose, but later decided as the safeguarding of industries act had never been formally repealed, to resort to the insertion of necessary clauses in the budget bill and deal with each differing industry as occasion arose.

The labor and liberal opposition argued that this method would deprive parliament of effectual control over the imposition of duties, but the real purpose of the opposition attack was to represent the government as being on the declivity leading to protection.

Premier Baldwin in his defense reiterated that he intended to abide loyally by the country's decision in the general election a year ago against protection, and had no idea of trying to introduce protection by the back door. The debate revealed a curious divergence of opinion as between Ramsay Macdonald and Lloyd George. The former declared there were many signs in America, Germany and France that protectionism was beginning to be found out. Mr. Lloyd George could not agree with this view. He declared that certainly the last elections in America gave no sign of this.

The suits rose out of the bankruptcy of Charles Ponzi after he had received several million dollars from New England investors on the promise to pay 50 per cent interest in 45 days.

LABOR TROUBLE IN THE NEW HAVEN CLOCK PLANT

New Haven, Feb. 16.—Conflicting claims were made tonight regarding the strike of skilled workers at the New Haven Clock company plant here. While it was reported that many additional skilled mechanics will leave their work tomorrow, company officials said the strike was of little consequence and that work would continue. It is said that a 15 per cent reduction in wages for skilled workers was responsible for the strike.

While many of the workers were forced to remain outside the hall for lack of seating and standing room the vote in favor of the movement was carried by an overwhelming majority. THIS WOMAN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Entirely Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Forest City, Iowa.—"My first child lived only a short time and I was sick for a year after. When I bent over and raised myself again I could almost scream with pain in my back. One day I was so bad that I had to leave my washing and get ready to go to the doctor. He gave me medicine but it did no more good than if I drank just water. Once when we had been ill town a little book telling about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was left in our car. I have taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound now and I do all my housework, and help with the milking and taking care of chickens and garden. Besides I have a fine baby girl eight months old, just the picture of health and I am feeling fine myself. You may use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. OSCAR F. BORGELIN, Route No. 5, Forest City, Iowa.

Three Generations Kept Healthy and Happy

"Beecham's Pills were always considered indispensable by my parents during sixty years of married life and I am lost without them in my home as they are used when required by myself (aged sixty-one), and wife and children. This covers a period of over eighty years.

My wife and sons also believe there is no remedy for constipation and biliousness equal to Beecham's Pills.

So many so-called "cures" for biliousness and kindred troubles leave after effects that are certainly injurious, but Beecham's Pills give prompt relief and leave one in a healthy and happy condition." N. J. M. Bramley, N. J.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

At his home on the West Side Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock funeral services for George E. Prentice were conducted by Rev. H. E. Conklin of the Methodist church. There was an attendance of many relatives and friends. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Frank Waters, J. Henry Milligan, John Wescott, Edward Allen, Howard C. Russ and Arthur F. Russ. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements. There were very beautiful floral remembrances.

At the chapel at Westfield cemetery Sunday afternoon funeral services for Mrs. Ida C. Logee, wife of William Logee of North street were conducted by Rev. Walter B. Williams of the Westfield Congregational church. Four sons of Mrs. Logee were bearers, burial being in Westfield cemetery. A. F. Wood had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Logee died Friday at midnight at a Boston hospital where she had been undergoing medical treatment for an ailment that had afflicted her for a considerable period. Mrs. Logee was a native of this town an dwas born October 20, 1873, a daughter of Chas. D. and Maria E. Hammett James. Her education was obtained in the schools of Danielson, where she had lived her life.

Within the past few days, numbers of reports have come in to the effect that pheasants appeared to have wintered very well and are to be seen in numbers in territory hereabouts. There was an ice period when getting food was difficult for all protected game birds, but that is over. An effort is being made by the Danielson Rod and Gun club to obtain consignments of male pheasants for distribution in this area, but it appears that they are very scarce, such is the demand for them. Numbers of male pheasants remain in this territory, a particularly large and beautiful specimen having been seen within a mile of the borough on a recent afternoon.

What is to be set down here may not be unique, but it certainly is more or less novel hereabouts and adds another to the many that boys espouse for endangering their precious lives. A pair of youngsters was observed riding two cakes of floating ice on the Quinebaug river, just below the dam at Wauregan. The cakes of ice looked as if they were about a dozen feet in length and nearly that length in width. The boys were equipped with poles and appeared to be having a wonderful time floating around the river. There was not the slightest evidence that they realized that they were in any danger. The boys appeared to be about ten years of age.

There is some talk about town in favor of a general clean-up week for Danielson during the months of April or May. The suggestion is that the community as a whole concern itself over some given period with cleaning up yards and generally tidying up premises after the winter season in which ashes and mutch other waste matter has accumulated into unsightly heaps. Some years ago Danielson become very much interested in a clean-up week and the results were so fine that it is thought that it would be well to duplicate it during the coming spring. Co-operation along this line is certain to bring splendid results.

The boys in Danielson have taken to playing marbles, something that many take as an unfailing sign of spring. Scores of boys are getting much pleasure out of the pastime, being engaged with the game daily. May be there will not be much more snow to interfere with their pastime, but one never can tell.

Harvey J. Koons, 51, is dead at his home in North Foster, where he had lived for a number of years. Mr. Koons is survived by a son, Frank, and by a brother.

Men have been engaged in clearing away brush along what is known as the old stony road from Dayville Four Corners to a point near the Killingly Center school. This is to be part of the route of the state highway that will be built from Dayville to the Connecticut-Rhode Island border at East Killingly, following an old stoge coach route.

Parents are given these days to issuing warnings to their children to be careful about going onto the rivers to skate after all the thawing and rain of the past ten days. There may be places where it is safe to skate, but there is a real hazard in getting on to lakes or rivers, which may be safe in some places and not in others.

Automobile guide books for 1925 are likely to be the means of producing more tourist travel through this section, especially over the Willimantic-Providence route. This route is steadily gaining in popularity with motorists cutting across Connecticut on trips to northern New England and this year's guide books stress the point.

Fox hunters are making the most of the time remaining for pursuing a favorite winter sport. Foxes are quite plentiful in all the country hereabouts, so the interest of the hunters is maintained.

The degree in which the state highway between Elmville and Morin avenue is worn and battered is very evident in these days when frost is coming out of the ground. A state highway crew is giving it attention, spreading gravel over the rough places.

The Crystal Water company has distributed pipe for a line of new mains to be run through Judd avenue when the season opens.

Governor Trumbull will find it impossible, on account of prior engagements and the attention that his duties at the capitol entail upon him with the legislature in session to come to Danielson to the military ball, it is announced.

Some Danielson boys already are engaged with an effort having to do with their plans to spend a vacation next summer at the county Y. M. C. A. camp at Black Pond in the town of Woodstock.

Douglass Fuller, son of Raymond B. Fuller and a grandson of Lucius H. Fuller of Putnam, has become associate editor of "Guard and Tackle" the High school paper in Stockton, California. A Stockton paper prints the following about the appointment of the new assistant editor:

"Douglass Fuller has just been appointed associate editor on the 'Guard and Tackle' weekly, as the staff list now shows. He has been promoted to this important position because of the quality and amount of work he has been doing for nearly three quarters to make every issue of this paper a success.

"In the news writing class, the beginning of most 'Guard and Tackle' scribes' careers, he was a straight 'one' pupil. Because of this he was seriously considered as a candidate for editorship this year, but because he is now a post-graduate, he cannot hold that position, according to the school constitution.

"Serving quietly but capably in the office of news editor for the greater part of this quarter, he has written all types of news from the serious to the cleverly humorous, a vein in which he quite excells. He was news editor of the 'Homo or Boys' edition last year, and wrote the main bulk of news for that issue. He will be remembered by the readers of this paper as a writer of a good many 'boxed' feature stories, of a number of thoughtful editorials, and lately as the writer of instructive 'History of Hallowe'en' which appeared on the front page of the special Hallowe'en number."

Quinebaug Chapter G. A. R., is to meet in the High school auditorium Wednesday at 3.30. There will be refreshments and an entertainment.

At the meeting of Putnam Lodge of Elks officers were nominated as follows: Exalted Ruler, James E. Murray; esteemed leading knight, A. Newton Vaughn; esteemed loyal knight, John H. Bulger; esteemed lecturing knight, Keyren H. Cotter.

Miss Elizabeth Rafferty of the office of John A. Macdonald, state highway commissioner at Hartford spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Rafferty, of Grove street.

In the closest and most exciting game of basketball played here this season, Putnam High defeated Woodstock Academy Saturday night 18 to 17. Both teams were well matched and at the beginning of the last quarter Woodstock was one point ahead, but the local team was one point in the lead when the whistle blew at the end of the game.

Mrs. Andrew V. Frost, chairman of the general committee in charge of the Valentine tea, announced Monday that after paying all bills there was a balance of $711.82. This is the largest amount ever realized from this annual affair.

The body of Mrs. Juliet McGavitt, 72, who died Feb. 12 at Mary Point, Va., was brought here for burial, and funeral services were held Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. H. A. Calhoun at local undertaking rooms. Mrs. McGavitt had been a resident of Putnam nearly all her life. She left here in 1918 to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Helena Nickerson. She also leaves a son, John A. Joiner, of Jersey City.

The Knott Knotes, the monthly publication of the Knott chain of hotels which operates the Wauregan house at Norwich, has the following about the Putnam inn, which the company has just taken over, the seventeenth of the hotels that it owns or controls:

"The latest addition to the Knott hotels is not a large one, but in the locality which it serves it is a very important one. The Putnam inn is THE hotel of Putnam, Conn.—that 'hub city' of the eastern part of the state. Not only does it loom up as practically the only stopping place there, but it passes under 'Knott' control a metamorphorized hotel from what it has been in the past.

"The owner, and, by the way, the operator since 1905, is Earl C. Rogers, one of the most prominent citizens of Putnam. Mr. Rogers is just completing work on extensive alterations which has changed the inn completely. He has built an addidtion doubling the room capacity, has put in extra baths, a new elevator, reconstructed the lobby and has refurnished and renovated many of the original rooms. An entire new brick front has been installed and the sides and rear walls are finished in gray stucco. As the Windham County Observer states, 'it is easily the most impressive looking structure in the city, and also the most attractive.

"Into this new structure our management enters confronted with the task of living up to Mr. Rogers' reputation as an innkeeper, gained over a period of twenty years' successful operation in this place. Mr. Rogers believed in 'hominess'—in creating a true feeling, among his guests, of hospitality.

"In his present lobby there is a fireplace whereon is carved the line 'As we journey through life let us live by the way.' That sums up Mr. Rogers' attitude, although perhaps a little better still does the verse which is inscribed further up on the brickwork above the fireplace:

"Whoe'er has traveled Life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
The warmest welcome at the inn.

"Not only does this house cater to a large number of commercial men, but in the summer many tourists find their way to this eastern Connecticut city. It is a beautiful country hereabouts and many there be who explore in the summer its many excellent roads—which radiate out from Putnam in different directions to Providence, Hartford, Springfield and New London—Putnam being, as we stated before, a veritable hub.

"There are many mills round this section—it is one of our great industrial sections, and we are happy to become members of the business life of the city. We hope that we will have the support of the local people, and we promise to do all we can to merit that support. We are going to operate the Putnam inn to the very best of our ability. We feel that we owe our very best efforts toward perpetuating a business that Mr. Rogers has built up so well by his twenty years of proprietorship.

"With this house we now have three hotels within the borders of this state, and all in the eastern part —serving practically the same section. The Crocker house at New London and the Wauregan at Norwich are the other members of our Connecticut family."

WILFRED BREAULT IN JAIL IN DEFAULT OF $3,000 BONDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Feb. 16.—Wilfred Breault of West Warwick, R. I., was taken over to the county jail at Brooklyn Monday, to await trial in the superior court on a charge of burglary, after he had been presented before Deputy Judge Chares S. Francis in the town court. The case was adjourned to March 3, at which time the superior court will be in session for consideration of cases on the criminal list, and it is not unlikely that Breault will be taken direct to that tribunal. He was unable to furnish bonds of $3,000 required for his release.

Breault is a burglary of the Ballouville store is alleged to be the third member of a trio made up inclusively of his brother, Henry Breault, of Putnam, and Arthur Fournier. At the last session of the superior court Henry Breault was sentenced to from 5 to 8 years in the state prison and Fournier received a sentence of one to three years.

The sentenced men were involved in upwards of a score of burglaries committed in communities at widely separated points points in this section of eastern Connecticut and in Rhode Island towns. When Henry Breault was arrested last fall, goods said to have a value of $2,000 were recovered from his home in Putnam and since have been for the most part identified by their owners. Other stolen goods were recovered from the home of Wilfred Breault at West Warwick, but he managed to elude the officers and remained at large until Sunday, when he was taken and brought here to be held for a hearing.

It is understood that the complaint against Wilfred Breault, alleges only one count for burglary. Efforts to bring his arrest have been underway for several months. It is believed that he would have been arrested a long time ago had he not obtained advance information through some source that officers were coming to West Warwick to get him, giving him an opportunity to get away. The ownership of a watch that Breault was carrying when arrested is to be investigated, it is said.

AN ALLEGED BANDIT ARRESTED IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 16.—Joseph Cole, of Amesbury, Mass. said by the police to be wanted in that town in connection with an attempted hold-up and shooting on the night of January 25 was arrested here today. After several hours questioning the police say they succeeded in getting a confession from him.

According to the police Cole told them he was in an automobile with John Freeman and Francis Reedy, both of Amesbury, on the night of January 25, and that the trio attempted to hold up Earl Simmons, proprietor of a pool room in that place.

Simmons, the police say Cole told them, shot Freeman in the head, but the three managed to make their escape in the automobile. Cole, in his story, to the police, said that he left the other two men in Haverhill, Mass., and went to Boston where he remained a few days. Discovering that his comrades had been captured, Cole told the police he went to New York and came to this city last Tuesday. He was traced to this city Saturday and the arrest was made today as he was leaving a lodging house.

Cole, it is said, also goes under the names of Joseph Sharbaneau and Frank Colby. He gave his occupation as a painter. The man is being held as a fugitive from justice, awaiting the arrival of a police officer from Amesbury.

PROBLEMS CONFRONTING THE JEWS IN EUROPE

New York, Feb. 16—Jews in Europe are facing "the greatest and most serious problem in all their checkered history," Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the world Zionist organization, said tonight at a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall to welcome him to America.

Post-war economic readjustments in Europe, irrespective of anti-Semtism, Dr. Weizmann asserted, have deprived the Jews of their former subsistence. In Russia, he said, 9,000,000 Jews who were merchants and small artisans have "no economic place under the soviet regime and have been economically uprooted and dislocated from the life of the country."

"In Poland," he continued, "by virtue of the government policy of levying the brunt of its taxes on the cities, its 3,000,000 Jews, who cannot establish themselves in the country because the Poles own all the land, find their means of livelihood practically taxed away by the government."

The only hope of solving the problem confronting the Jews in Eurone, said Dr. Weizmann, lies "in the ability of Palestine to absorb far more immigrants than it is now able to admit."

Dr. Weizmann said Jewish immigrants have been coming into Palestine at the rate of 2,000 a month.

LEFT PAYMENT FOR GAS USED TO COMMIT SUICIDE

New York, Feb. 16—August Meier of Philadelphia, a mechanic, committed suicide in an east side room after bequeathing $2.38 to his landlord to pay for the gas required to take his life, and $6 to the children's ward at Bellevue hospital.

Meier engaged the room last Friday.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Official word was recieved from Jenny Lind in 1850 that she would accept the offer of P. T. Barnum, to come to America for 75 concert appearances, but not for any operas. The offer also held good for an additional 75 concerts if a profit were shown after the first 75 concerts.

News of interest taken in part from the columns of the Courier of 1850 is as follows:

Tuesday, February 12, 1850—Messrs. Howard & Son of New York, well known to people of this city are understood to be concerned in the enterprise of organizing a $500,000 company in San Francisco for the purpose of establishing a new line of ocean steamers to run between San Francisco and Panama.

Hovey was one of the delegates from Norwich.

Mr. Barnum has definitely announced that Jenny Lind will come to America, leaving Europe for this country in August. Seventy-five concerts are called for in the contract, and if these bring a return sufficient to pay expenses Jenny Lind will appear in another 75 concerts to receive one fifth the nightly profits from these concerts. A letter signed by Jenny Lind, appeared in the Courier of February 16, 1850 bearing out the announcement of Mr. Barnum expressing her gratitude for the generous offer she had received for her American tour.

Authentic reports indicate the vast amount of gold dust being transported across the isthmus, a sum which is almost unbelievable. In the last two months of 1849 a total of $9,362,844.02 was carried across the isthmus, consigned to large eastern companies. This was the greater part of the dust carried over, but probably a million more was brought over by individuals who had made their fortunes in the gold fields.

The death list in the New York explosion has reached 67 and over 25 are reported injured, some seriously. A fund of $5,000 has been raised to aid the sufferers.

Have You Piles?

Then You Have Something to Learn

Thousands who have piles have just do the same for you. learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent, and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from Lee & Osgood today. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands of people, and should do the same for you—it seldom fails.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

APPLICANTS FOR INSURANCE OFTEN REJECTED

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

"The trouble lasted for months. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using I saw a little improvement so purchased more and in seven weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Fred Walker, 168 Weld St., New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 6, 1924.

THE COLLINS CASE.

Disappointment prevails of course that in the finding of the body of Floyd Collins in the Kentucky cave that those who have been engaged in the rescue work were unable to reach him before life was extinct. And yet considering the time that has elapsed since he was found and the period during which he has been without food and water in his tray, the outcome was not much different than expected. Conversation has revolved about such questions as 'How can he ever survive such an ordeal?" and 'Do you think they'll find him alive?" when the answers to those questions seemed almost apparent.

The finding of his body has not only put an end to the suspense but it has definitely served to eliminate those stories which inferred that he was not in the cave and never had been. It proves that the affair was not a fake, though it reveals what a frightful death he must have experienced.

Perhaps no case has served to attract any greater attention throughout the country for so long a time as this. It was because of the unusual circumstances that featured it, both as to the character of the exploration he was making and the difficulties that had to be surmounted in order to reach him.

Underground explorations are faced with many dangers. Chances have to be taken and are taken in the making of discoveries, and it was while taking just such chances that Collins was entrapped in a most unusual manner and at such a point as to defy the efforts of friends, community, state and experts to bring him to the surface alive.

Collins has made the supreme sacrifice in behalf of his hobby, his search for the unknown. He placed himself unintentionally in the class of those who have given up their lives in the interest of science, whether it was in the exploration of the polar regions, the scaling of Mt. Everest or the search for a cave in Kentucky that might rival others which have made that region famous and the attraction for a large number of scientists and tourists.

JARDINE FOR CABINET.

President Coolidge has taken his time in making his selection for secretary of agriculture in his cabinet after the fourth of March, but in forwarding the nomination of William M. Jardine of Kansas for that post he has picked a man who is not only fully in touch with the agricultural problems but who is in full sympathy with the president's policies.

The agricultural problem has been much to the front. It has received prolonged consideration and gotten no small relief from the operation of the law of supply and demand. It is not improbable that the farmers have gotten better results without legislation than would have come from some of that which has been proposed. Yet it is likely that much will be done in a remedial way as the result of the report of the agricultural commission.

The department of agriculture is an important branch of the government and in selecting Mr. Jardine for that office there has been taken into consideration the fact that he is thoroughly qualified for the duties of the office. This is to be gathered from the fact that he is president of the Kansas Agricultural college that he was a member of the agricultural commission and that he has the confidence of the president, whose responsibility in putting and keeping this department at the highest point of efficiency is not to be overlooked.

Mr. Jardine is known as a practical farmer, whose alignment is not with the radicals but with the conservative group who believe in constructive work for the farmers along with a proper amount of cooperation on their part. He believes that the farmer is entitled to such legislation as he needs but he also believes that the solution of most of his troubles rests with himself. That means that he is disposed to throw light on the real instead of the imaginary troubles and forms of relief. Throughly grounded in agriculture from experience and education, he is not only an expert but an executive of ability and the possessor of that much-desired, good, common sense.

PROMPT CONFIRMATION.

It is refreshing to note the prompt manner in which the senate has ratified the nomination of Frank B. Kellogg, ambassador to the court of St. James, as secretary of state to succeed Charles E. Hughes at the conclusion of the present presidential term. Was it because there were no objections that could be trumped up against him, or was it because he was a former member of the senate and therefore bound to get favorable consideration?

That the confirmation is deserved is thoroughly understood. Mr. Kellogg is well equipped to handle the responsible position and no better argument in his behalf could be advanced than the fact that his appointment had been urged by the retiring secretary. The loss to the cabinet in the retirement of Secretary Hughes cannot be overlooked, but when he endorses his successor it indicates his belief that the department's affairs will be placed in satisfactory hands.

What the senate has done in this instance it should have done in regard to Charles B. Warren, who has been named for attorney general. The longer the senate backs and fills on that appointment the more it reacts to its discredit. Mr. Warren is not only eminently qualified for the office, but he has already received the senate's approval on several previous occasions, inasmuch as he was confirmed for the various diplomatic posts to which he was named in the past few years and the service he rendered on those occasions were conspicuous and praiseworthy.

The president has named the man he wants for secretary of state. He has named the man he wants for secretary of agriculture and he has nominated the man for attorney general whose services he seeks. If the senate thinks that he is weakening his position and furnishing ammunition for the opposition, certainly there can be no objection from the administration opponents, and that is where all the obstacles are coming from that hinder confirmation.

Cabinet selections rests with the president and the senate does the right thing when it conforms promptly as it has done in the Kellogg case

A POLICE COMMISSION.

The general assembly is being asked to make a change in the charter of the city of Norwich in regard to the police department. According to the proposal police commissioners would succeed the police committee, and they would be appointed for a period of one year to be named apparently from the citizens at large and to have complete control over the department much the same as the members of the gas and electrical commission have over the light department.

Certain provisions are made for restricting the age limit for new members of the force and authority to remove or suspend policemen would be vested in the commission.

No restrictions are placed upon those to be named as police commissioners as regards political qualifications, but a penalty of suspension or dismissal could be imposed upon the members of the force if they engaged in any political activity.

Naturally the legislative committee will want full information upon this proposition, and it should be provided with it both as to the reasons for seeking such a change as well as for the objections to them. If the aim is to eliminate politics from police matters there have of course been good and sufficient reasons for giving the city the benefit of such relief, but before any step is actually taken it is well to be sure that the object sought will be obtained and that the remedy will not be worse than the disease.

Indications are that the proposed bill will get opposition as well as support before the committee.

DEALING WITH FLOODS.

Floods come and are expected during the rainy seasons, or the periods of the year when heavy downpours occur under favorable conditions for forcing the streams over their banks through the aid of ice or because of the inability to care for the volume of water delivered.

This means that there are times when a tremendous amount of water goes to waste that might on many streams be used in the development of electricity. For that reason and also for the purpose of restricting such high water, through the establishment of large ponds or reservoirs and through reforestation work, many experiments have been made. Could such large rainfalls be ponded for use when desired to offset the dry periods it would be possible not only to reduce the flood conditions but to provide against the water shortages which affect so many industries as well as power plants during seasons of drought.

Much of the water that rushes to the brooks and rivers following heavy rains flows over frozen surfaces at this season of the year. Later it might be possible for it to soak into the soil and remain there were there the forests of old to protect it and permit it to gradually feed the springs. It is for that reason that the recovering of the denuded hills with new growth is so ardently advocated.

Were there ponds to hold in reserve the product of heavy precipitation a better distribution of the supplies that feed the streams would be possible. The prevention of all floods is not likely to be accomplished right away but the means of partly curbing them seems available in some instances.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Chicago is crying for more water. But it is not the result of the prohibition amendment.

With a small inaugural parade those who do participate will show up more conspicuously.

How long will it be before traffic rules will be required to handle the lobbyist at the legislature?

Those who were wrong in their prediction about the end of the world can at least make other predictions.

The man on the corner says: Only a little of February is needed to bring out the soft spots in many of the highways.

Even if the president has a hobby, it is certain that it is not one that will result in an embarrassment to the nation.

There is nothing thus far in February that disturbs those who are obliged to remain away from Florida all winter long.

What are some of these fighting senators going to find to entertain themselves when congress adjourns in a couple of weeks?

Some of the heavy demand for dollar bills, which the government has trouble in filling, might be relieved by calling for silver dollars.

When the opium conference decided that efforts would be made to stop the use of opium in the colonies 15 years after China reduces production and stops smuggling, it is evident that nothing is going to be accomplished.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—The white house is the center of Washington social life. This winter the president and Mrs. Coolidge have restricted it to purely official functions on account of the death of their beloved son last summer.

But the obligation of rank forbids their seclusion. A white house reception is a very brilliant affair. It differs from all others inasmuch as the president must be protected from possible harm and so is closely guarded by military and naval aids and by plain clothes detectives. As the long line of guests file through the marble corridors and intervening rooms, to the blue room where the President and Mrs. Coolidge receive, military and naval aids in full uniforms stand at stated intervals; men from the ranks, holding the American flag, are at every door through which the guests pass; doors through which they are not to pass, are "manned" by soldiers or sailors holding cords of red velvet across the entrance; the Marine band in brilliant scarlet uniform plays magnificently in the great corridor; diplomats wearing the court costumes of their country are resplendent in gorgeous colors, knee breeches, with their breasts fairly covered with stars, crosses and other insignia of rank or orders, blazing with diamonds, rubies and other precious stones. Officers of army and navy are a glitter of gold lace; the women wear their finest, with jewels on hair and neck. And when they reach the end of the line, there stands the president in his plain black dress suit, a marked contrast to the uniform of his aids and diplomatic guests. Mrs. Coolidge is always beautifully dressed, but along simple lines and entirely without jewels. Formal presentation of each guest is made by the military aid. Both President and Mrs. Coolidge respond with cordial greetings. The guests pass from the blue room into the great east room, where palms, flowers and ferns bank colonial mantels of marble; the crowd surges back and forth, the shimmer of satin, the brilliant uniforms, the strange garb of the diplomats, the glitter of jewels, make the white house reception quite different from all others.

And in the midst of it all stand President and Mrs. Coolidge; well poised, as free from affectation, as dignified, yet frankly cordial, as though in the midst of the simple life of their little New England college home town.

An amusing thing about the so-called "hobby-horse" of the president is that it isn't a horse any more than is the proverbial saw-horse. It is the mechanical device that is installed in every well equipped gymnasium, college or preparatory school in the country.

It is a saddle mounted on springs worked by electricity. There is no animal outline, no head, tail or legs. Simply a set of metal bars and springs. So the would-be "funny man" who tries to depict the president astride a mock horse, is far afield, and evidently unfamiliar with the customary equipment of gymnasiums, that not only include such means of exercise, but also dummy boats for rowing.

The president goes right on giving breakfasts to senators and members of congress, regardless of their party politics. He treats them all alike and feeds them unstintingly on Vermont syrup, sausage and all the fixin's. A short time ago he entertained the entire Massachusetts delegation at breakfast, and it then developed that he is the first president to entertain a home delegation as "neighbors" regardless of party. Moreover, the president is a light eater, and although he sets a bountiful old fashioned country breakfast before his guests, he eats sparingly. Half an orange, half a glass of milk, one griddle cake and one cup of coffee is said to be his breakfast. After which he smokes one cigar. The president is in excellent health and keeps up daily exercises in form of a walk, and "doing health stunts" in his room. He has no time for other and perhaps more enjoyable forms of keeping in trim.

The outlook at the moment is that Connecticut will have the honor of furnishing the next house floor leader in the person of Congressman John Q. Tilson of New Haven. Tilson is not an announced candidate, but he is in the limelight. Although there are two other men prominently mentioned in regard to the floor leadership of the house, if Longworth wins the speakership the chances seem to favor the election of Congressman John Q. Tilson of New Haven under those circumstances. But it must not be overlooked that Tilson has not offered himself as a candidate; he is being put in line by his friends in the house, who believe he is the best equipped man for the place. Tilson of course would like the honor, but he believes the speakership should first be settled and then the vacancy of floor leadership filled. He will not announce any candidacy based on the provisional election of either Longworth or Madden, in fact Tilson is personally very friendly with both the candidates for the speakership, which becomes vacant on account of the retirement of Speaker Gillette on March 4th to assume his seat in the senate. To announce a candidacy at this time, Tilson would be openly taking a stand against one or the other of the candidates for speaker, and this he has consistently refused to do. But Tilson's friends believe Longworth will win out, and that Tilson will then be selected to step into the Longworth shoes as floor leader.

The other men mentioned for the floor leadership are Snell of New York, now chairman of the rules committee, and Lehlback of New Jersey. There are many members who believe Tilson is better equipped for speaker than either of the two contestants, and that if there should be a deadlock develop, Tilson would be the dark horse, but Tilson himself refuses to discuss such a possibility, nor will he comment on the floor leadership situation. If Longworth fails to win out, he will continue as floor leader; if he wins it certainly looks like Connecticut, through Tilson, securing the honor.

There seems to be some little confusion in the mind of persons not familiar with the workings of congress, as to a possible extra session of congress and the calling of the senate into a short session immediately after March 4th.

Neither can be called into being except by the president; but he can call the senate into session to confirm nominations and matters that do not come before the house, without including the latter body in his summons.

There seems no possibility of an extra session of congress. The president has made it known he does not intend to call one unless some unforeseen emergency should arise between now and December and there is no indication that such an emergency is likely.

He will, however, call the senate into a short special session on March 4th to confirm nominations for the cabinet, the supreme court, diplomats and other high officials, should he have a list then ready to submit.

THE HOSPITAL HELPED

The girl with the smooth, boyish bob speaks into the telephone receiver: "Say dearie, listen, I got sumpn' to tell you about me and a certain other party. I guess it's all fixed up between he and I, see? solitary di'mond and everything.

"Marvelous? I'll say it's all of that. And kinda comical, too, after he and I goin' together such an awful long time, and nothin' bein' said right out see?

"Oh, I don't know. Account of me having to go to the hospittle, or something, I guess. You see, a 'coupla months back my back ached me kinda, and some the things I ate talked back—nothin' you could put your finger on it, or anything, but ma she was kinda nervous, so she sends me to the doctor, and the doc sends me to the hospittle, see?

"I'll say it's comical. Only that's how these swell doctors does now. They puts your name down and then they asks you a coupla hundred questions, and then they writes a book about you, and then they says they can't tell nothin' about how to cure you, unless they puts you in the hospittle and gives you the double D, see?

"And say, dearie, listen. The comicalest part of it is that's how me and George come to fix it up together, see? Listen and I'll tell you.

"It was awful down there to the hospittle. You see the first day I come there I didn't have nothin' but some bread and water to eat until they could — you know — try some their stunts on me, see? Makin' me swaller rubber toobs and everything, see?

"And, say cutie, lookut! The second day come and I didn't have nothin' but them rubber toobs to eat yet and when the doc that sends me to the hospittle comes to see me I says to him how I was just about to pass out starvin' to death, and he acts kinda surprised and then he tells the young doc and the nurse to see that I get some eats. But the next time they come instead of food they give me more toobs.

"Well, I says to myself, I guess it's their game and they knows how to play it,' so I didn't say nothin' Then no parson come until along in the afternoon, and then the nurse come, and I say how about me havin' some eats and she says she'll get me some. Then she goes away and don't come back. And then the young doc comes and I says to him how about me havin' some eats and he says sure, he'll have the nurse get some. And then nothin' doin' for another coupla hours. And then the two of em come along and the doc he says, 'How's the patient?' he says.

"Well, say kid, was I sore? What do you mean patient?' I hollers. 'I been patient in this place too long!' I says, 'I sure have done my stuff,' I says, 'swallerin' every toob in this blamed hospittle,' I says. 'Now you beat it and get me some eats,' I says.

"Sure, they did. And, say, dearie, listen. After that the young doc he kidded me quite a bit about them forgettin' to give me something to eat and so when I gets home from the hospittle here's a bokay of flowers he sent me and on the card he says he's tryin' to make up for how he tried to starve me in the hospittle, see?

"And, say, dearie, listen. When George comes over here's the bunch of flowers and I guess I talked quite a bit about the young doc and how cute he looked in his white clothes and everything and I guess George he got kinda thin' in and he kep alludin'—

"And, say, dearie, lookut. It's all fixed up—maybe we'll get married around Christmas time, see?

"Marvelous? I'll say it is.

"Me? Fall for the doc? Fade away, kid! Any time I fall for a fellow that ain't got nothin' to do but run around huntin' up old auto tires for me to eat!

"Sure! But I guess it was a kinda good thing—I mean about me and the doc and George and everything—after he and I goin' together such an awful long time and nothin' bein', you know said or anything. Sometimes a fellow gets kinda thinkin' maybe there ain't no other person but him, see?

"Well, so long, kid. Bye-bye. You give me a ring tonight and I'll tell you some more about it."—Chicago News.

Gorgas Had to Convince Scoffers

After many years of study, Dr. William C. Gorgas slowly accepted another's theory of the cause of yellow fever, then after he had found that the idea was right he had his biggest task in convincing others.

Born in Mobile, Ala., he spent his early years in many military camps as his father, a military man, was transferred from place to place. The lad was six when the Civil War started and had to undergo many hardships in Richmond during the conflict. His home burned, he and his mother and sisters had to flee to Baltimore, where William, now 11, arrived ragged, barefooted and without funds or food.

Making his way through the University of the South, he was graduated at 19, and from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York University, at 25, then was an interne at Bellevue until appointed surgeon in the United States Army at 26.

Sent to Fort Brown, Texas, where yellow fever was raging, he was caught while dissecting a fever victim and was arrested for having disobeyed orders to not enter the ward. Released from arrest he studied the disease and attended a young woman suffering from the malady, and later made her his wife.

Appointed major surgeon and sent to Havana at 36, he tried to eliminate yellow fever there by thoroughly cleaning the rotting, filthy city, but the toll of the disease continued to mount. Keenly disappointed, Gorgas continued to hunt for the cause. Finally accepting the theory that yellow fever was carried by the Stegomyia mosquito, he devised the method of killing the larvae by pouring kerosene over the breeding places, and eliminated the disease that had been the curse of Cuba, for which act congress made him surgeon general at 49.

Now with the rank of colonel, his request to take charge of sanitary work in the Panama Canal Zone was granted, disease and the ignorance of scoffing officials before he could show that his methods were correct and banished the peril from that district.

Other nations asked his aid, he was awarded honors by many countries and now a movement is under way to establish a memorial in the Panama Canal Zone to commemorate his deeds.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Leland O. Howard, who is fearful thatkind may yet lose to the insects in the battle for possession of the earth, probably knows more about insects and their ways than any other man in America. For more than 30 years he has been chief entomologist of the United States department of agriculture. His reputation as a technical investigator and expert, more particularly in the difficult and obscure realm of parasitology, is almost world wide. In Washington he is known as an encyclopedia of his own branch of science and a living directory of every other branch. He has the widest personal acquaintance among scientists of any man in America, and his acquaintance extends far beyond the borders of his own country into Europe, Asia, and the remote corners of the earth. For many years he served as secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, an office which kept him in close touch with every phase of scientific progress.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

PARAGUAY AND ITS INLAND PORT

Paraguay has sent a minister to Washington the fact that she is able to do so is good news for shoe dealers and perfumers' shops.

A bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society points out that this diplomatic representation, after a lapse marks Paraguay's "come back" from a war so disastrous that only a generation ago there were twelve Paraguayan women for every man.

"Paraguay suffered from the conquest dreams of a would-be Napoleon, who began a war just sixty years ago which cost the lives of more than two-thirds of his countrymen," the bulletin says.

"When this militarist died, in 1870, Paraguay began her rejuvenation by beating her swords in broadaxes and cutting down quebracho trees which yield an extract used in tanning leather. The United States is a heavy buyer of the yearly export of thirty million pounds of bark and tannin from this tree. The quebracho's outstanding characteristic is that its wood is one of the heaviest and toughest known varieties, hence its appropriate name, a Spanish appellation meaning 'break axe.'

"One species of the tree, the white quebracho finds a place on the pharmacist's shelf—it is a specific remedy for asthma and croup.

"Paraguay also grows a peculiar type of orange and extracts from the leaves thereof an oil, petitgrain, which supplies the base of the perfume which the American 'flapper' is alleged to deposit behind her ears when she goes a-dancing. The country's crop of the more familiar varieties of oranges is exceedingly heavy; a native will eat two dozen or so a day, and even then a large part of the tremendous crop goes to waste.

"A principal agricultural crop is the yerba mate, known as Paraguayan tea, which consists of pulverized leaves of a scrubby species of holly. Yerba mate is unknown to European or American tables but it is universally used in south America. It has more 'kick' than the tea we drink and counteracts the baneful effects of a steady meat diet.

"Paraguay is an inland country—the only South American country which never had a seaboard—and its capital, Aguncion, is a fairly busy port. This sounds like a sort of 'Swiss Navy' paradox until one recalls that nature has compensated our neighbor continent's paucity of salt water harbors by giving her the greatest ready-made waterways system in the world. Aguncion is 600 miles due east of the Atlantic coast and some 700 miles due north of Buenos Aires.

"Ships land their cargoes at a riverside custom-house which looks like the entrance to a Venetian hotel after entering the broad La Plata at Montevideo, turning up the Parana, and then into the Paraguay.

"For a time on the up-river trip, after passing Corrientes, Paraguay lies to one's right and the Argentine province of Formosa to the left. Formosa forms the southern boundary of the area in dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia, and though Formosa is the size of Pennsylvania it has a population of only 19,000 people.

"The traveler ascends the Paraguay with a growing admiration for the bold Spanish adventurers who pioneered in search of gold and silver. And he receives an impression of great age when he lands at Asuncion, a city founded nearly 400 years ago, the capital of a vast, rich region generations before the Pilgrims came.

"The city conjures the picture of stirring events; Spanish intrigues, the inquisition, the rise and fall of Jesuit power, the overthrow of Spanish rule, then the tyrants, dictators, revolutions, wars with neighboring nations—and one marvels that out of this historic welter comes today a country which seeks peace, learning, trade and development of its marvelous resources.

"Paraguay now is the third smallest country in South America, and the smallest in population. Its tale of tragedy which is unsurpassed in national histories occurred in a setting which has won for the region the nickname of the Riviera of South America. Its undisputed territory, some 75,000 square miles, lies between the Parana and the Paraguay rivers; its claim against Bolivia is the title to 100,000 square miles spreading, edgelike, between the Paraguay and the Pilcomayo.

"The country now has a million people, among whom the women still outnumber the men 3 to 1, and these people have a smaller admixture of European blood than any others of their continent. They are proud of their Guarani Indian ancestry and, outside the towns, the Guarani language is more generally spoken than Spanish."

CHILD TRAINING

Child Culture
Lena E. Bliss

I sped a poem into the air
"It fell to earth I knew not where
For who hath sight so keen and strong
That it can follow the flight of song?"

Years, years afterward from a dream,
Again I dwelt upon my theme.
But the lines my first thought had beguiled
I found again in the heart of a child.

Little do we realize the value of beautiful sentiment, rightly taught to the growth of a child's mind. Alice Freeman Palmer with her quick, almost intuitive understanding of a child's need, gave to the children of a mission school in the heart of a dirty city three rules for happiness—everyday happiness.

First:—Commit to memory every day something beautiful.

Second:—Look at something pretty every day and pause before it long enough to say: "Isn't that beautiful."

Third:—Do some kind act every day for another.

To most of us in our pleasant environment it would seem a comparatively easy task to keep these rules, but to those children surrounded by the sordid and bitter conditions of life, it was no easy task to find happiness in beauty. How much happier we might make the life of every child if we brought into it a little more of loving thought, beauty and kindness! This is got a new idea to the kindergarten movement nor to the Montessori system, yet it is sometimes a marvel how little of spontaneous enjoyment of beauty for its own sake and how little of the pure untrammeled joy of living come into the modern child's life.

We have today the two extremes: the little savage with no home training and no ideals of beauty or even cleanliness, and the over-pampered, sophisticated child who is looking always beyond the present for a "thrill" of some kind. Hemmed in by rules and the "discipline" of school life, compelled to digest whatever material is offered him and to do it gracefully, he goes through the wearisome leveling process and were it not for his elasticity of spirit and his wonderful power of adaption, would come out of it with all originality crushed out or suppressed.

A professor in one of our colleges recently said: "A child's sense of rime and rhythm is nearly always accurate. It shows itself in his every motion. A child's feet instinctively dance to the joy of life."

So a child's heart instinctively throbs to the joy of song, to the rhythmic pulsations of poetry, and to such a degree that a teacher finds great difficulty in eliminating the singsong effect in a recitation of poetry by a child.

The sympathetic teaching of good poems, therefore, is one of the highest forms of child culture. Children will soon detect the difference between a good poem and a poor one, for their taste is naturally good. They are very good critics also as to the correct interpretation of a poem. Beauty as memorized in poems will prove a constant source of joy as well as uplifting of soul and character, and in many instances may be the determining factor in a good choice at some crisis of later life.

Stories, too, should be carefully chosen and well-told. One of the most potent devices today for the good or ill being of childhood is in the radio bedtime stories. I have found that children usually appreciate most the stories they know are true. In relating stories to a group of children I know, I often begin with:—

"Once upon a time, years and years ago, when I was a little girl like you," and they will listen long past the hour.

Truth, originality, beauty—these appeal to childhood as to the maturer mind. It does not need a creative artist, but it does need an artist-soul to awaken these responses in childhood and when awakened, they are among the highest factors in child development.

Stories That Recall Others

Battle of Curiosity.

Six year old Mary and Nig an inquisitive black cat were watching Aunt Mary dye a hat. Nig looked on for a few minutes and decided to find out what the bottle contained. Knowing Nig thoroughly and not wanting any of the dye spilled on the table or floor Aunt Mary stopped him with a swing of her hand and said: "Now Nig, get out of here. A cat once was killed by curiosity."

Mary looked up with round bright eyes and asked: "Is that what that is in the bottle?"

MURDER CONVICT COMMITS SUICIDE IN SING SING

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 16.—William A. Ford, sentenced to be executed on March 19 on a charge of murder and arson, hanged himself tonight in his cell in the death house at Sing Sing, while his keeper was gone for two minutes to carry off the dinner dishes. Ford was still alive when cut down, but died soon afterwards despite the efforts of the medical staff of the prison.

On October 15, 1923, a frame house in Brooklyn was burned and six persons, including Ford's son-in-law, George Kelm, a playwright, were burned to death. Later Raymond Anderson was arrested, and, following an alleged confession that Anderson had driven Ford and a companion to the house and that Ford had started the fire, the latter was arrested.

At his trial Anderson turned state's evidence and testified that Ford had plotted for weeks to kill Kelm. Ford was convicted by a jury in 55 minutes.

He had hanged himself from a bar on his door by means of a sheet from his bed. He left 36 letters, two of them addressed to Warden Lewis E. Lawes, two of them to Father McSheffery, prison chaplain, and the others to New York newspapers and to his attorneys.

CONTROVERSY SETTLED BY OPIUM CONFERENCE

Geneva, Feb. 16 (By the A. P.)—The international opium conference today disposed of a long controversy by adopting a resolution whereby the central narcotic board shall be chosen by the league council sitting as an electoral body, but with the understanding that both the United States and Germany shall be invited to form part of this party.

Germany created a sensation by announcing that unless she were assured a place on the central board she would not sign the convention except with reservations. No other country made such a request.

The conference adopted the entire draft convention in its first reading and sent it back to the drafting committee for re-touching. The second and last reading will be held Wednesday, and it is expected that the delegates will affix their signatures on Thursday or Friday, and then adjourn.

After a strong denunciation by M. Sugimura, of Japan, the conference took no action on the Finnish proposal linking opium production in China with the arms traffic.

MOTOR BOAT SEIZED WITH 200 CASES OF ALCOHOL

Boston, Feb. 16—A motor boat loaded with 200 cases of alcohol was seized 25 miles off this port today by a coast guard rum chaser and the crew of four were brought here on the charge of conspiring to smuggle liquor. It was said to be the greatest distance from shore that the dry navy has pushed its warfare and unofficially was said to be an attempt to determine how far the limit might be extended.

The four men arrested, all of Boston, said they picked up floating cases of alcohol while on a fishing trip.

Still More Evidence That Allen's Lung Healer Prevents Pneumonia

Mrs. W. H. Walker of West Lynn gratefully adds her testimony to the many which have been published:

"Allen's Lung Healer is the most effective medicine I ever used in my life. It seems to work like magic. My daughter was so badly broken up with a cold that she had to give up work and go to bed. Her cough was hard, dry and distressing, her lungs were sore and breathing difficult, and she seemed on the verge of having pneumonia. I was told of the Lung Healer and decided to give it a trial. She had taken but a few doses when she began to improve rapidly and in a week's time she was entirely cured and back at her work. You can be sure I was surprised and delighted with the way the medicine worked, so quick and thorough.

"Yours gratefully,

"MRS. W. H. WALKER.

POLICE ARE OPPOSED TO PROPOSED BILL

Members of the Norwich police force are reported to be strongly opposed to proposed bill that would put control of the force into the hands of a board of three police commissioners who are to be given autocratic power under the terms of the bill. A hearing on the proposed bill is set for this (Tuesday) afternoon at Hartford before the legislative committee on cities and boroughs.

"Such a measure ought never to be passed," said one officer Tuesday, expressing what he said was the feeling of the men on the force. "We would rather have our affairs in the hands of 12 men (the common council) than under three who would have the power this bill gives them. We don't need that kind of a bill to govern the police force in this city."

BOY SCOUT CAMPAIGN MAKES GOOD START ON FIRST DAY REPORTS

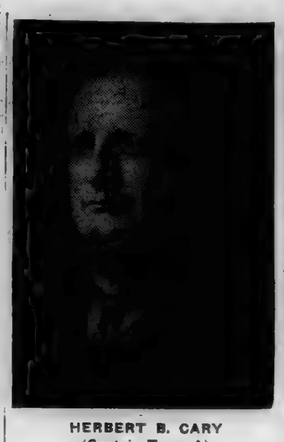
At the get-together supper at Odd Fellows' hall Monday evening the five teams in the Boy Scout campaign for $5,000 reported a total of $1,662.50 raised to date. The team captains and members met around the dining tables at 6.15 and were served a delicious menu by the Hope Rebekah lodge committee. Campaign Manager E. A. Harris acted as toastmaster for the evening. The teams reported subscriptions as follows:

Team.	Captain.
A	H. B. Cary	$758.50
B	E. W. Perkins	92.00
C	C. A. Gager	317.00
D	E. Taggert	251.00
E	L. M. Crandall	134.50
F	W. A. Anderson	119.50
Total to date		$1,662.50

James L. Case, campaign adviser, was called on and gave an inspiring talk on the campaign. Mr. Harris also spoke to the captains and members. He said the people of Norwich should realize the value of the Boy Scout movement in character building and in the excellent training it affords the boys of Norwich and vicinity. It has been tested and proven here and everywhere. It is non-sectarian, non-partisan and non-political. It offers the boy opportunities to do the things he wants to do better than he can do them by himself.

Theodore Stavrae, who has been a scout less than a month, gave a knotteiing demonstration and Frederick A. Benton, Jr., gave a demonstration in signaling.

Scout Percy Browning, who carried Mayor Milo R. Waters' message to Governor Trumbull Saturday in the scout relay from Norwich to Hartford, gave an account of the trip to the Capitol City. Five Boy Scouts started from the town hall at 9.30 in the morning, relaying the message in half mile runs. In his account of the trip Scout Browning said that traffic hindered the running somewhat until the scouts got out of the city. He told of the meeting with the New London scouts at Colchester about 12 o'clock. He had the honor of presenting Mayor Waters' message to the governor, this being one of 32 messages received by the governor from as many communities in the state.



HERBERT B. CARY
(Captain Team A)

Scout Browning told of the various runners enjoying dinner at the Y. M. C. A., of the sightseeing trip afterward. After spending an enjoyable day in Hartford, the local scouts returned home by way of New London.

This (Tuesday) morning the teams will start out for more subscriptions to swell the fund and will meet at the dining tables again this evening at 6.15 o'clock.

SIX INJURED WHEN TRUCK HITS SEDAN

Six people were injured shortly before 11 o'clock Monday morning when a Buick sedan carrying three passengers and a Reo truck carrying a like number of men, crashed together on the Hartford turnpike near Salem. Two of the accident victims are now patients at a hospital in New London.

The sedan, driven by L. B. Fairbrother, Jr., was proceeding in the direction of Hartford at a moderate rate of speed when the truck, driven by Feiden carrying, besides the three men, two live cows, came in from a side road and crashed into the left side of the sedan just behind the front seat. So great was the impact that the sedan was turned completely around and then forced 150 feet ahead, turning over three times as it was hurled forward. The truck turned upside down so that the three occupants were pinned beneath the wreckage. One of the cows in the truck was rendered unconscious by the impact. The other escaped uninjured.

The two Fairbrother young men, who are twin sons of Judge Fairbrother, were occupying the front seat and Cheseboro was in the back seat at the time of the crash. Cheseboro had to have 38 stitches taken to close the wounds in his leg. The party had left Stonington about 9 o'clock to attend the water hearing at Hartford.

THE DIAMONDS' EXECUTION IS SET FOR MARCH 16TH

Because Joseph Diamond served a term in Brooklyn, Conn., jail for threatening to shoot up a Woodstock farmer whose fruit he was stealing, there is interest in the following:

Ossining, Feb. 16.—As Miss Sally Diamond visited her brothers, Morris and Joseph Diamond, in the Sing Sing deathhouse yesterday, prison attendants announced that there is a big rush of applications from persons who are morbidly curious to attend the execution of the two brothers and John Farina.

The execution of the three young men accused of plotting the murder and robbery of William McLaughlin and William Barlow in Brooklyn while they carried $47,000 belonging to the West End bank, is set for March 26. However, there is a likelihood of a reprieve because the fourth defendant, John Farina, is to be tried again in Brooklyn.

If either the defense or the state seeks to call either of the Diamond boys or Farina as a witness, which is liable to happen, reprieves may be granted in all three cases.

CHARGES POOR MANAGEMENT BY MYSTIC WATER CO.

Hartford, Feb. 16.—Inefficient and uneconomical management was charged against the Mystic Valley Water company by Henry B. Noyes, president of the Mystic River National bank and a former director of the water company, at a continuation of the hearing on the company's petition for permission to increase its rates to consumers today before the public utilities commission. He said he had resigned as a director because of the system of management. Dividends had been paid he declared, when sound business judgment would have shown the amounts should have been spent for development of the company. He was opposed to the increases.

Chief C. R. Donath, of the Mystic fire department, also appearing in opposition to the increase in rates, intimated that if they were put into effect, the fire district, by adding more equipment to allow pumping from the Mistuxet river, might supply its own protection, eliminating that given by the water company.

Lewis P. Allyn testified that the water supply at his home on the New London road is very poor and he was opposed to an increase in rates. P. C. Potter, postmaster at Mystic, declared that the majority of residents in his town were in favor of the establishment of a meter system for private homes, as now supplied to commercial users.

The company is asking to be allowed to increase rates on a proposed graduated scale based on a charge of $10 a year for each faucet, or about $4 more than the present charge. Reasons given are that expenses have increased much faster than revenue during the past few years and that present contracts are at a rate which will not allow proper functioning of the company. Benjamin M Hewitt, of Groton, for the opposition, and Edward M. Day for the company, are to submit briefs to the commission.

This bulletin on Commercial Fertilizers, No. 261 is free to citizens of Connecticut and to other applicants as far as the edition permits.

POLICYHOLDERS PAID $3,193,463.78 IN TAXES

Policyholders of the state of Connecticut paid in insurance licenses, taxes and fee, for the year 1923, $3,193,463.78, of which amount $47,371.76 was used for the expenses of the state insurance department, according to a bulletin issued by the insurance department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The remainder of the amount collected in the form of insurance taxes went into the general state funds.

The practice of making the policyholder bear the burden of taxes, the greater proportion of which are expended for general purposes, is growing among the states. The federal government abolished the tax on insurance premiums, which was devised as an emergency war measure, in 1921. But the trend in the states has been in the contrary direction.

"The upward trend of state taxation is clearly seen by a comparison of 1923 statistics with those from the years 1915 to 1922," says the insurance department in its bulletin. "The total of licenses, taxes and fees collected in 1923, $59,248,527.35, is greater by $6,726,052.11 than the sum collected in the same states in 1922. The increase was practically universal among the states, since 40 out of 47 jurisdictions received more in 1923 than in the previous year. On the contrary, the expenditures for insurance department service during the same period decreased in 23 states and the District of Columbia."

For the year 1923, of the total amount collected by all the states in the form of special insurance taxes, 96 per cent. were used for other purposes than the maintenance of insurance departments.

"When policyholders are singled out for special taxation," the bulletin continues, "the amounts collected should be used for their benefit. Actually this is not the case. The amount collected for insurance department service in 1923 was less than 4 per cent. of all collected. In other words, out of every dollar paid to the states by policyholders, more than 96 cents was used for general purposes, none of which was so closely related to insurance as to justify special taxation of policyholders for its support."

COMMISSIONER LANDIS TO CONSIDER THE REINSTATEMENT OF COZY DOLAN

New York, Feb. 16.—Commissioner Landis today intimated he would "consider very carefully" an application for reinstatement from Cozy Dolan, former coach of the New York Giants, who was banished from baseball, along with Jimmy O'Connell, after the bribery scandal of last fall.

Landis made this unexpected revelation following a conference earlier in the day with District Attorney Banton on the results of the latter's recent investigation into the bribery scandal. After the district attorney announced that his inquiries would be continued and also that Landis had offered to produce any major league player desired for examination, as well as defray all expenses involved.

Dolan's status, the commissioner indicated, was proved a knotty problem, inasmuch as the former coach has denied consistently any connection with the attempt to bribe Heinie Sand, Philadelphia shortstop, although O'Connell, in his confession of the attempt, accused Dolan of instigating the deal. In addition, no evidence against him other than his alleged evasiveness on the subject, has been found.

Landis was reluctant to discuss this feature of the case but said he was giving Dolan's position considerable study.

He intimated he would give every consideration to an application for reinstatement from Dolan.

On the occasion of a recent visit to the New York Giants, Dolan reiterated his plea of innocence and declared he would pursue his case personally with Landis at an early date. At that time, Dolan said he would not resort to any legal action, as he previously threatened to do, but seek his reinstatement through regular channels.

Landis commended the inquiry made by District Attorney Banton and declared he was convinced everything had been done to unearth further evidence. He will leave tomorrow for Chicago, and plans to leave shortly for Florida, where he will tour the southern training centers.

BIG GAMES COMING FOR COAST GUARD CADETS

New London, Feb. 16.—An effort to bring some college quintets to perform in this city to oppose the Coast Guard Cadets which is unquestionably the strongest five in the city, and measuring up to the standard required of college teams has partly succeeded to the extent of two permanent bookings of games being made. The first of the teams to oppose the local cadets is the Yale Junior varsity five which comes here on March 4 for a game with the Cadets. Three days after the game with the Yale Junior varsity, the Springfield Y. M. C. A. five will come to this city to oppose the brass button players. This date is March 7.

It is hoped that favorable replies are received to the letters which have been sent to some of the leading institutions in the east requesting a game to be played either at New London or at the college's home battle ground. The late start may retard the spark of ambition which the manager of the guards has instituted in his attempt to bring better basketball to this city.

The reason for the late start is the unusual rapid improvement which was made by the Coast Guards who now easily hold the city title as the result of clean cut victories which includes the Sub Base among her victims. The success while expected, as the players are all former high school stars and in some cases members of a college team previous to their joining the ranks of the Coast Guard have rounded out a fine smooth working quintet which has yet to taste defeat. The ambitious programme which is now under way will be properly appreciated by local fans in their effort to secure better basketball.

For Deep River the lineup is as follows: O'Brien and O'Leary forwards, Murelle center and Mazzacki and Bowen guards.

ALDI AND MORIN BEAT CHARTIER AND McKENZIE

The two "Mikes", Aldi and Morin of the Palace alleys proved too strong for Chartier and McKenzie of Moosup, Monday night, when the two man team from up-state invaded the Palace alleys in this city, and sent them home with a beating of 77 pins.

Chartier and McKenzie were not bowling their usual game if the figures tell the story for neither man was able to hit over 100 for four of the nine strings. Tough breaks also had something to do with the low scores made. On the other hand Aldi pegged out for an average of 99.5 to equal the average and score made by McKenzie, both men getting 396 pins in nine strings.

Morin was hitting the wood pretty during most of his game and the 77 pin margin that which he piled up over Chartier of Moosup. Morin fell beneath the 100 mark only three times while Chartier fell under it five times, sinking to a low 77 pins in the initial string of the match.

Although Morin took high total for the match with 948 his 128 for a single was 5 less than the 133 chalked up by McKenzie of Moosup, for high single for the match. Aldi and Morin counted for 1844 pins in the match and Chartier and McKenzie took 1767 for the evening. The scores:

Palace—
M. Aldi—116, 99, 103, 95, 94, 103, 85, 106, 101—396. Ave. 99.5.

Philadelphia, Feb. 16—(By the A. P.)—Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola the outstanding Finnish track stars, tonight established four world's indoor dirt track marks in a meet held by the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy in the 103rd cavalry armory. Nurmi placed marks on the board boys in the mile, mile and three quarters and two mile events, while Ritola put up a low mark in the three and a quarter mile race.

Ritola's performance was more remarkable than Nurmi's in that he lowered a mark made on the indoor track by more than 30 seconds and that has stood on the books for more than eleven years. Those present believe Ritola has lowered the 3-mile record but the timers failed to clock him at this point.

Ritola won the three and one quarter mile invitation event from Nurmi of three starters, all Finns, lapping his rivals four times and being clocked for the distance in 17:35 flattening by 31 and 3-5 seconds the indoor mark for the same distance made by Hannes Kolehmainen, now a citizen of Finland, in New York city.

Ritola's mark, while it broke Kolehmainen's time will not go down on the record books as an outdoor record but will be given a new classification that of a world's indoor dirt track record.

Nurmi was timed for the mile 4:33 2-5, the mile and three quarters, in 8:17 2-5, which is four fifths of a for the same distance made by W. D. second better than an outdoor mark for the two-mile in 9:30 2-5.

Day in New York City in 1920 and Nurmi's time will go down as a world's indoor dirt track mark as the books fail to reveal any records made under similar conditions on an indoor dirt oval. He completely out-distanced the field of four starters, lapping every man at least once and passing Gunnar Nillson, countryman, twice on the 11 lap track.

James J. Connolly, former Georgetown athlete but now running unathalf behind the flying Finn. Nillson tached, finished second, a lap and a was third, more than two laps behind Nurmi.

PLAINFIELD A-N CLUB CHALLENGES TAFTVILLE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Plainfield, Feb. 16—The wires between Taftville and Plainfield were hot when Manager John H. Murphy of the Taftville Army and Navy club refused to play the local Army and Navy club at the Community House, Friday, Feb. 27. Manager Murphy states that the local club has been using his players in games this season. The local fans wonder where Mr. Murphy gets his stuff and have a good idea backed with money that the local boys can whip the Taftville quintet any time. Lesser Salisbury, manager of the Local Army and Navy club challenges the Taftville club in a three game series for the championship of Eastern Connecticut. Plainfield lays claim to the title having defeated five leading Connecticut teams, losing but two games. If Murphy is willing accept the challenge, Mgr. Salisbury says, he can do so by answering through the columns of this paper.

LAFAYETTE MAIN DEFENDS NO. STONINGTON RESIDENT

(Special to the Bulletin)

Westerly, Feb. 16.—Before Justice Ledyard S. Anthony, in a special session of North Stonington court, Monday, John Cavandes, a resident of the town for ten years, was tried on complaint of Grand Juror Martin Maine that on the 13th day of February he sold to William Pelch and Aleck Platt one gallon of liquor; also with keeping liquor for sale, maintaining a place where liquor was for sale and manufacturing liquor.

In spite of the services of three attorneys, the witness was finally found guilty on one count, that of a sale, and was fined $50 and costs. He took an appeal to the higher court.

Martin Main, grand juror of North Stonington, acted as prosecutor, and the case was started shortly after 10 o'clock.

Cavendez pleaded not guilty and then fun began. Lafayette Main, North Stonington, and Shea and McGarry of New London all acted as counsel for the accused. Mr. Main was the first on his feet, and he said that his client must be tried on the original complaint. He got no further than a few sentences when he was informed by the justice that unless he spoke in a conciliatory manner he would be debarred from acting as counsel in the case. Mr. Anthony admitted that the original papers in the case had been lost, but said a copy had been made Monday morning.

There was much argument over the legality of such proceeding but the case was finally resumed.

State Policeman Henry J. Albright told of marking a $20 bill and sending Platt and Pelch into the Cavendez place to buy the liquor. After the jug was brought out to him, he went into the house and took the bill away from Cavendez.

Under cross-examination he admitted he had no search warrant but that the arrest of Cavendez was made on what is called "speedy information." He also produced a half-pint bottle which he said he picked up on the table in the kitchen of the house. It was offered as evidence and once again was passed the rounds while all took a smell. He gave lengthy testimony on being behind the wall while the sale was being made and looking in a window to see Cavendez hand the jug to Platt.

State Policeman Fred T. Caron testified to knowing that the $20 bill was marked.

Lafayette Main, who took a hand in the cross examining referred to the taking of the $20 away from the defendant by the state policeman. He said it was nothing but highway robbery and delivered a tirade about the methods being used by the state police to get evidence. He was interrupted in the midst of his speech by the justice and was forthwith debarred from further argument in the case. However, he was allowed to sit at the counsel table and advise the other two lawyers handling the case for the defendant. This he did with great gusto.

Aleck Platt, the first witness called by the state, said he was employed as a gardener at the Groton state police barracks and that last Friday, Feb. 13, he bought a gallon of liquor from the defendant and turned it over to State Policeman Henry J. Albright, who was hiding behind the wall near the home of the accused. He said that he saw a still and a barrel of mash in the cellar of the place.

Under cross-examination Attorney McGarry accused Platt of being a stool pigeon for the state police and made him go all over his story again. He testified that he had paid Cavendez with a marked $20 bill, which was later taken by the state policeman when he entered the house. The gallon jug alleged to contain the liquor was then introduced by the state police and after all around the table had taken a smell the cork was put back. No evidence was offered to show that it contained liquor, the prosecution evidently thinking that it was enough to let all have a smell.

The defendant was found guilty on one count, that of sale, and fined $50 and costs. He appealed, and bond of $200 was furnished by Lafayette Main.

When Lafayette Main took the stand for the defense, he said he was proud of his name, had never drunk, smoked, chewed or lied, even in his own behalf, and that he knew the defendant was a good man. He said he visited his place on the night before the raid, had delivered some beef to him, and gone down into his cellar with a lantern. He saw no still and no evidence of liquor.

Her Wonderful Teeth

Remove the dingy film that's clouding yours and you'll be surprised that your teeth are just as white and charming as any one's—make this unique test.

HERE is a simple test that proves the truth that most of us have pretty teeth without ever knowing we have, or ever revealing it.

This is the reason:

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film. A film which absorbs discolorations and hides the natural color of your teeth.

Remove it and your teeth take on a new beauty. Maybe you have really beautiful teeth without realizing it.

Film is charged too with most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

So, besides loss of tooth beauty, film is a serious danger to healthy teeth. You must remove and constantly combat it. It is ever present, ever forming.

Old-time dentifrices were unable to combat it successfully. And tooth troubles were a serious problem.

Now modern science has discovered a new way. A new-type tooth paste called Pepsodent that acts to curdle film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap or chalk, no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

The W. W. G. rally of New London county was held Saturday in the First Baptist church, Stonington. About 200 were present as delegates from the various Baptist churches in the county. Miss Wing, the state secretary for the guild, made an address to the members present. She told of guild work to be done and asked that different guilds try to do "White Cross" work. She explained this work in detail. Churches represented at the rally were Waterford, Groton, Westerly, New London, Stonington, Mystic, Central Baptist and First Baptist, Norwich. Miss Helen Whiton of New London, a missionary from China, gave a short talk on China, following Miss Wing's address. After Miss Whiton's talk all assembled in the lecture room of the church while each chapter performed a special stunt. Westerly's stunt was very funny and most of the audience thought the best given. However, the others were very good also. At 6 o'clock a supper was served in the church parlors, in charge of the Stonington guild and the Ladies' Aid society of the church. Cheers were heartily exchanged across the supper tables. Miss Elizabeth Browning, head of the Stonington guild requested that the heads of each chapter give a report on that chapter's present work, which all did. Miss Wing expressed herself as pleased with all of the reports read.

The committee in charge of arrangements was Miss M. Hagberg of Norwich and Miss E. Browning of Stonington. Decorations were in blue and white. The local guild worked very hard during the past two weeks to get all in readiness for the rally. Miss Wing and Miss Whiton were each presented a bouquet of white roses and at supper by Miss Browning of Stonington.

Rev. E. E. Gates of Hartford occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church, Sunday morning. His sermon was on the Horoscope of the Christian Church. A large audience was present to hear him. In the evening Rev. C. F. Eldredge of Niantic preached on Jesus Knocking Outside the Door of People's Hearts.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Jumper Does a Bold Thing

A saying true, though it be told:
Success most oft attends the bold.
Jumper the Hare.

Jumper the Hare was panting as he ran. There were few days since he could remember when he hadn't had to run for his life, or at least hadn't been badly frightened. But never had he been quite in such despair as he now was. He knew he couldn't run much longer, and he knew that Old Man Coyote would surely catch him unless he could find a safe hiding-place. But in his fright he had been heedless. He hadn't paid attention to where he was running and now he was far from his familiar hiding-places. He didn't know what to do.

"I can't run much farther. I just can't do it," he sobbed. "I'm tired enough to drop right in my tracks this minute. If it were not for this hateful crust I could get away from that fellow. If only the snow was soft I wouldn't worry a bit. But there isn't any soft snow anywhere. Old Man Coyote can run on this crust just as easily as I can. What shall I do? What shall I do?"

Jumper was in Buster Bear's bedroom!

It was at that very moment that Jumper spied an opening under a great mass of rock. Jumper seldom goes into holes. But this wasn't exactly a hole. He knew that that opening led into a sort of little cave under the rock. The snow had partly filled the opening, but it was still big enough for him to enter. For that matter, it was big enough for Old Man Coyote to enter also. Jumper gave a frightened look back. Old Man Coyote was nearer than he thought for. With a little squeal of sheer fright Jumper turned and darted through that opening under the great rock.

Old Man Coyote saw where he was heading and did his best to catch Jumper before he could get there. But he didn't succeed. At that opening Old Man Coyote stopped short. He could have followed Jumper in there, but he didn't. No, sir, he didn't. He poked his nose in and sniffed once, twice, three times. Then he backed away and the long hair along his back and on his neck began to rise. He growled softly to himself. There was some one in there besides Jumper the Hare. It was Buster Bear! Jumper was in Buster Bear's bedroom, where Buster was sound asleep!

Do you think that Jumper was frightened when he found himself in Buster Bear's bedroom? He was and he wasn't. He had known that that was Buster Bear's bedroom and that Buster was in there. He had also known that Buster was asleep. He was frightened at being so close to great big Buster Bear, but at the same time he knew that Buster was asleep for the winter and that there really was nothing to fear from him.

Old man Coyote knew the same thing. But Old Man Coyote has so much respect for Buster Bear's great strength that he feared him even when he was asleep. You see, Jumper was trying to save his life. It was better to take a chance with Buster Bear asleep than with Old Man Coyote very much awake. But Old Man Coyote wasn't trying to save his life. He was simply trying to get a good dinner, and to his way of thinking even a good dinner wasn't worth the risk of a room. So he sat outside and growled and snarled and then finally turned and trotted away.

Jumper had done a bold thing, a very bold thing. But he had saved himself from Old Man Coyote by venturing into Buster Bear's bed—his life.

Here's the enemy to skin disorders!

RESINOL—a gentle, healing ointment that soothes its way into the pores and attacks the source of the trouble.

The first touch relieves the itching, burning and soreness and the skin usually gets well quickly and easily unless the trouble is due to some serious internal disorder. It is nearly flesh color so can easily be used on exposed surfaces. It costs little and goes a long way.

When the skin is once restored to its normal condition, the daily use of Resinol Soap is generally sufficient to keep it healthy. Ideal for the complexion, bath and shampoo.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The Palace Theatre management announce another big program of vaudeville and pictures for the last half of the week. Jimmy Connors Radio Entertainers from W T A B will be the feature attraction and will be surrounded by four other excellent acts. The feature picture will be Inez From Hollywood with Anna Q. Nilsson, Mary Astor and Lewis Stone in the cast. Lewis Stone has another big role in this picture to add to his list of motion picture triumphs.

A brief outline of the silver haired lovers career was published recently in one of the leading magazines and we quote from this article:

Evidence that a fine stage schooling and a constant adherence to the highest ideals of the acting profession is not unappreciated in motion pictures is furnished by the career of Lewis S. Stone, now playing in First National's "Ines From Hollywood," as a co-star with Anna Q. Nilsson.

Stone was born in Worcester, Mass., and attended the public schools before going to Bernard Military Academy in New York City. He entered the army at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, and began his stage career immediately upon his return from service. Although he scored his first stage success in New York, he later gained nation-wide fame as the leading man of the old Belasco Stock company in Los Angeles.

After six years of this he returned to New York with the premier company of "The Bird of Paradise." After that he played leading roles in "The Misleading Lady," "Inside the Lines," "Bunny," with Charlotte Walker in "Nancy Lee," "Where Poppies Bloom," with Marjorie Rambeau and "The Brat."

In 1917 he became an infantry instructor at Plattsburg training camp. It was during the World War that he made his first picture appearance, a war play, "Held by the Enemy."

More recent appearances include "Milestones," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Trifling Women," "Scaramouche," "Why Men Leave Home," "Husbands and Lovers," and "Cytherea."

In Inez From Hollywood, Stone touches the heights of acting brilliance, bringing to his interpretation all the ripe skill gained in his years of experience and study of his art.

Breed Theater

Every now and then comes along a motion picture that contains so much of ability and beauty and lavish expenditure that every one that pretends to know anything at all about the films must see it as a matter of duty, if nothing else. Even more seldom comes a film combining all these qualities, which possesses also the rare attributes of beauty and charm and romantic flavor that make it the pleasurable necessity of every one to see it. Such a picture is Cosmopolitan's Janice Meredith, starring Marion Davies, which is the current attraction at the Breed theater.

It is one of those things that every one must see for the sheer delight of of it, and that every one also must see to know anything at all about achievement in motion picture making. Miss Davies outshines even herself in this film.

Janice Meredith was adapted from Paul Leicester Ford's novel by Lillie Hayward. It was directed by E. Mason Hopper. The settings were by Joseph Urban. It is a Metro Goldwyn release.

Hope Hampton in McCall's Color Fashion news, a Van Bibber comedy, the Pathe news and a cartoon make up the remainder of the bill. Two shows daily at 2:15 and 7:30 P. M.

Broadway Theater

You can prepare yourself for a real picture and vaudeville treat when you visit the Broadway theater the first half of this week. If there ever was a double show in this city before, this tops them all. The picture alone is worth the small admission charged and with the Keith vaudeville program, we cannot praise the show too high.

Jordan and Esmeralda, opened the program with Tunes and Steps. It is a fast bright snappy offering that went over with merit.

Cook and Loren, the millionaire tramps, are two satirical humorists. They cause laughter to run riot.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you" so the motto of J. Burke Morgan and De Forest Woolley assisted by George B. Morris and Co. in a joyfest of merriment labelled, Oh, My Goodness. It is a very clever company of five laugh makers and we tell you to forget your troubles, put on your laughing shoes and laugh.

To those who want more laughter that rotund travelling salesman, Ben Smith will supply it with a new line of laughs. Some good songs supplement the offering.

The Four Jansleys, world's renown risley experts, are all and more than they were claimed to be.

The final showings of the Paramount picture, North of 36, which is the feature at the Broadway, the first half of this week will take place tomorrow. It is an Irvin Willat production, an adaptation of Emerson Hough's novel and features Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery.

At the Strand.

"Those Who Judge" starring Patsy Ruth Miller and Lou Tellegen, which has pleased large audiences since Sunday will be seen for the last times today at the Strand theatre. This super feature has added to the patronage of this popular theatre and has maintained its fine record for purveying good screen entertainment. The theme of the above is one that will appeal to the average theatregoer and is filled with everything that goes to make up a good picture. The co-feature on the same programme is Rex (Snony) Baker in a sensational story of the prize ring, "The Fighter's Paradise." One of the fastest four round boxing exhibitions ever thrown on the screen is shown in about the fourth reel of "The Fighter's Paradise," and the word action just about explains Snony Baker's latest effort. The comedy at the Strand which will also be shown for the last time today is a Chaplin comedy and from the way this comedy has pleased it would seem as though this screen comedian's humor will live forever. Great preparations are being made by the Strand management for the Tryout night Friday night and already several of the local amateurs have entered their names to compete with the vaudeville tryout acts and this form of amusement will no doubt become popular in Norwich as the whole show has been laid out for laughing purposes only.

POETRY

IN FEBRUARY.

A vast desire of Spring
Is quivering in East and West,
It makes the sunshine fling
Around Earth's cold and naked breast
More scintillating veils—
Those lucent touches lab
The trunks, the leafless limbs, of trees
And warm the sluggish sap
Of the roystering revelries
Of March-bemaddened gales.

Bluebirds begin to flock
And streak with shreds of sky the fields;
And where the great pine boughs rock,
Their swaying aroma yields
That quickens blood and pace—
I paint me caravans
Of gypsies starting their vague road—
Those strange, swart nomad clans
Who take the rain and wind's harsh goad,
As hounds take to the chase—

They pass through waste and mart,
Dropping patrins along the way—
The roamer's furtive chart
For kindred folk who lag, or stray
From the advancing bands—
And then the twilight halt,
Camp, and savory supper fire,
And tales beneath the vault,
Whence stars chant, in silvery choir,
Legends of magic lands!
—William Struthers, in Boston Transcript.

SEA BIRDS.

On lonesome sea-gull, floating far
Over the ocean's icy waste,
Aimless and wide thy wanderings are,
Forever vainly seeking rest—
Where is thy mate, and where thy nest?

'Twixt wintry sea and wintry sky,
Clearing the keen air with thy breast,
Thou sailest slowly, solemnly;
No fetter on thy wing is pressed—
Where is thy mate, and where thy nest?

O restless, homeless human soul,
Following for aye thy namaness quest,
The gulls float, and the billows roll;
Thou watchest still, and questionest—
Where is thy mate, and where thy nest?
—Elizabeth Akers.

While gathering oysters in Yeocomico river, Virginia, A. T. Muir caught with tongs an oyster dish. What is believed to be the world's first tidal power station is in the process of construction in France at Aberwrack, north of Brest. Due to the tidal variation at this point the power will not be constant. The present plan is to use it for the operation of an electro-chemical factory. This experiment will be watched with especial interest because of the recently proposed American exploit of harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy.

The sea gull's habit of carrying clams in their talons to a considerable height and dropping them on a hard surface to break so that the bird can feed on the bivalve nearly proved disastrous to Abe Loche a former policeman at Atlantic City recently. NEW LONDON CITY COUNCIL AWARDS $425,000 BONDS TO BOSTON FIRM

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 16—The city council this evening voted to award $425,000 of city improvement and water works improvement bonds to Brown Brothers & Co., of Boston, at a price that yielded 4. per cent. The Brown Brothers were the highest bidders among a dozen for the bonds last Saturday.

The council also voted to purchase through the city manager 1500 feet of cotton fire hose rubber lined from the Murray Rubber Company of Boston, as the lowest bidder. The purchase will require an expenditure of $921 or of $805.50 if advantage is taken of 2 per cent. discount in ten days. Councilor Fox raised some objection to the purchase of the cheapest hose that could be bought, on the ground that such hose was not always the most economical to buy, as the city had learned in the past, but Manager Holt overcame the objection by stating that this hose were bought by specification and that the hose would be subjected to the test of the Underwriters' laboratory in every respect. He said the Underwriters' laboratory was the only one of its kind in the country and that it was established by the fire insurance companies, that cities might get satisfactory hose that would stand usage and that the fire departments would get what they paid for. The hose to be bought would be warranted for three years and any defective hose would be replaced.

Mayor Clarke inquired as to the care that fire hose received in this city and was informed that in the past two or three years just passed that the hose had been better cared for than ever before. It was the plan in contemplation now to secure a hydraulic water pump that the hose might be tested at intervals as to its strength. Councilor Fox replied that the council in years past had decided to buy the higher priced hose and it was his opinion that the city acquired better hose and such as stood the wear by so doing. He said the city should not buy the cheapest hose. "We want assurance that on the test at fires we had something that would stand, such as could be depended upon. The fact that we can get good hose for the defective lengths did not give the city assurance of protection in case a disastrous fire when all the hose we had was needed." On a vote the contract went to the Murray Rubber Co.

A petition for an electric sign at 43 Bank street was referred to the city manager with power to grant it, if he saw fit to do so.

The fire alarm at the submarine base was sounded at 3.15 o'clock this evening, giving belief in New London that a fire was in progress there. Investigation, however, revealed that the alarm was sounded for the purpose of further drilling the sailors stationed there in combatting flames, for no fire existed.

William H. Long, residing at 10 Robinson street, was fined $100 in the police court this morning, for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Long was short of funds after he was convicted, but he succeeded in raising them before the afternoon was over and thus escaped a term in jail. He was driving from Howard street and went in to Woodbridge, going thence to Shaw street. His course was so much like a sort of automobile snakedance that State Police Officer Bobnick followed him in a motorcycle and observed that other autoists were dodging Long. Finally the Long car went upon the sidewalk and against a stone wall. There the chase ended and Long was arrested. He had no excuse to make. He simply admitted that he had been drinking booze.

There was a sort of epidemic of booze fever Saturday night and Sunday. Fred Niles was in the alleyway along side the Rialto theatre where he was with Joseph L. Wilson engaged in a bottle party. Niles lost his watch and accused Wilson of having taken it. Both were locked up. When Niles had overcome the booze he said that Wilson did not take the ticker. He accused another man, but in a way appeared uncertain that what he said was not taken seriously. Niles was fined $5 for his drunk and the charge against Wilson was declared not proven. He was acquitted.

Victor Frederick didn't like the way Policeman Courtney ordered him to obey traffic regulations on State street as he, Frederick, crossed from Bank street to North Bank street, so he obeyed very reluctantly—so slowly that he got in front of a truck and held up traffic. When he reached the other side he returned to the officer and started an argument, telling the officer to watch his own step. He was ordered away and not going he was summoned into court for his conduct.

Both men told their stories and then Judge Prince reached the conclusion that Frederick was not a law breaker in that he intentionally interfered with traffic, so he decided he was not guilty of the charge brought against him.

Dante Occhicania of Norwich Town getting into traffic in a busy city was halted by Traffic Officer Tom Cavanaugh at Bank and Howard street. Dante, in the excitement attending his operation of the car ran against the police officer in that his machine got beyond his control. He admitted that he was excited, but he denied that he was reckless and as that was what he was charged with the court was lenient and decided that Dante was excited but not reckless.

Edward Foley, a young man who took a letter containing $5 from a mail box on Brewer street at a house where he was rooming was fined $1 and ordered to pay the costs of the prosecution. At The Strand, Today

Entrance to the house was gained by forcing a rear window and it is believed that the crook had knowledge of the existence of the valuables and where they were secreted. The burglary was discovered by De Cailis about 7.30 o'clock this morning following the finding of the window forced.

Charles Bronstein was arrested this afternoon by Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Edward Daniels, charged with violation of the liquor law. Bronstein will be presented in the police court Tuesday morning and he is at liberty until that time having furnished Is Louis Elfenbein a surety on his bond for $500. The arrest of Bronstein took place when the oicers visited the Nest Grill, a restaurant at 17 Main street for the purpose of warning the operators of the place to obey the law, for it had been reported that the place was a blind for the sale of liquor. As the officers entered they were met by Bronstein, who declared that he was the proprietor of the establishment. The officers in looking around the several rooms finally came upon undisputed evidence as to what the nature of the business was that was conducted at the place, for several dozen bottles of beer, empty liquor and beer bottles, a quantity of whiskey, gin and alcohol was found in various places of hiding. These were taken as evidence against the place, together with a keg of wine.

The place has been under the present management but about six weeks but ever since that time the police have maintained a watch of the place because it was reported that liquor could be obtained there.

Miss Harriet Emmerich, clerk in the probate court left this evening for New York, from which city she will said Wednesday on a steamer for the West Indies. Miss Emmerich will be absent from New London about a month.

Injudicious eating causes acute indigestion, gas, acidity, heaviness and sour stomach—sometimes the distended stomach causes that dreadful feeling of near suffocation.

Isn't it worth something to know of a remedy that will stop this distress in a few minutes—quicker than anything else you can think of.

This is no common stomach remedy for it took years of time to combine Pepsin with Menthol and the other effective agents that make Dare's Mentha Pepsin so good that the worst cases of indigestion and gastritis and other chronic stomach ailments are speedily overcome and the most badly deranged stomachs are made clean, strong and healthy.

You can get one bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin and if after you take it you do not say it did your stomach more good than anything you ever used before, your money will be waiting for you. This is a straightforward offer and is so understood by Lee & Osgood Co. and every druggist everywhere.

This delightful and effective elixir not only gives instant relief from gas, fullness, acid stomach and distress after eating, but taken regularly for a short time will turn your weak, run down stomach into a strong, healthy one able to perform its duties without help.

It ends indigestion, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach and does it in a surprisingly short period of time.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

A TEN-FOOT KITCHEN GARDEN

A ten-foot sunny corner of a back yard will furnish a considerable quantity of vegetables during the course of a year, if properly handled. It will supply sufficient tomatoes to eat raw all summer and for canning for the winter supply. Before it is time to put in tomato plants it will give a liberal supply of early radishes, leaf lettuce, young onions or spinach.

Among the tomatoes during the year a few plants of Swiss chard will give a supply of greens all summer.

The same plot, after the early spring harvest, may be used for beans all summer, planting it at intervals in succession. It may furnish a supply of green peas planted early and followed by turnips, cabbage, cauliflower or a few stalks of Brussels sprouts to furnish a delicacy for the Thanksgiving and Christmas tables. This vegetable is always expensive, but as easy to grow as a cabbage.

The small plot, after the radishes and young onions, may be planted to eggplants and green peppers. It might also be put into a few cucumber vines if that vegetable is specially relished. There is the widest variety of choice to which a small plot may be put to furnish vegetables of quality for the home table. Even so small a plot would furnish several messes of the delicious Golden Bantam corn, the real quality of which is never found in the market.

A plot of only ten feet square lends itself to intensive culture. It can be so easily and heavily fertilized that it will produce greatly increased crops, and it is an easy matter to keep so small a plot well watered during dry periods. "It is too small to do anything with," is not a good excuse for neglecting to plant a few vegetables this year. It is a simple matter to sit down with a pencil and paper and figure out the possibilities of a small plot and look over the catalogues and order a few packets of seed to plant it.

CROPS TO CHECK NEED OF WESTERN GRAIN

Farmers are asking more and more each year, "What can I grow on my own farm that will decrease the necessity of buying so much western grain?" This is indeed a question which the dairyman has to face if more profits are to be received from the production of milk under present conditions. For him, probably the best that can be done is to grow more legumes and corn silage. Unfortunately, much soil is sour or acid in reaction. Most legumes need just the opposite type or sweet soil to reach their best growth. To correct the acidity of the soil an application of lime is necessary. To properly correct the acidity of most soils so that alfalfa will grow, it is necessary to apply two or more tons to the acre. As lime costs about $8 a ton, this would mean expending from $16 to $24 an acre. As the average dairyman has from 20 to 30 acres of land, the initial additional expense prevents him from planting a legume even though he knows of its superior feeding value.

There is one consideration, however. If a good stand of alfalfa is once secured it will last several years and the land will not need much more expense during that period. If each year one or more acres were thoroughly limed and a good alfalfa stand secured, the soil would not need much additional lime in future years to keep it sweet. If this program is carried out, in a few years legumes can be grown on a number of acres and the first cost will not be felt as much as would be the case if 10 or 12 acres were limed in one year, but the productivity will gradually be increasing and the cost of grain will be lessened.

POULTRY FLOCKS NEED PLENTY OF LIME

Many rations fed to poultry under present conditions lack a sufficient quantity of lime to supply the needs of the fowls, with a result that a drain is imposed on the reserve supply of their bodies with a consequent dropping off in egg production and an impairment in the development of young birds, says the poultry specialist at the New York state agricultural experiment station at Geneva, where feeding experiments with poultry have been conducted over a number of years. In these tests an effort has been made to substitute other minerals for calcium, but so far no other element has been found which will take the place of calcium in the ration, and the birds have drawn on the lime stored in their bones and muscles. The experimenters also found that both lime and phosphorus were taken from the bones of the living animals more easily than from dead bone ash fed to the flocks.

"In many cases rations fed to poultry under present conditions contain much less calcium or lime than is required by the body for its proper functioning," says this station authority. "Poultrymen should meet this demand by adding lime to the ration in the form of oyster shell or other inorganic lime compounds for mature birds and in the form of vegetable foods rich in lime for growing chicks, such as young clover, alfalfa, etc.

"Most grain foods and some other foods are deficient in calcium and neither the hen nor duck can consume enough of the bulky foods to meet the calcium requirement of the laying period. The mature fowl, however, can use lime in an inorganic form without much difficulty, but the young fowl cannot so freely supply its needs from this source. For this reason, it is highly desirable to provide a regular supply of vegetable foods rich in the lime for young birds. While it is very unlikely that the birds will ever lack the small amount of calcium required for certain normal functions of the body, such as maintaining the heart action and imparting the necessary properties to the blood, it is unwise to allow the reservoir of the important mineral elements to become much depleted especially during periods of growth or egg production."

PRE-LAMBING LOSSES OF EWES PREVENTABLE

Heavy losses of aged ewes which lamb early in the spring under shed conditions are due chiefly to faulty nutrition and lack of sufficient exercise, and can easily be prevented. According to observations by Dr. W. T. Huffman, veterinary inspector of the federal bureau of animal industry, and Dr. J. S. Dade, inspector in charge for the Idaho board of sheep commissioners, these losses which in the past have been especially serious in Idaho—where many early lambs are raised—are likely to occur in other states. The ailment is of peculiar nature not fully understood even by some sheepmen of long experience or by many veterinarians.

In recent years sheep owners in Idaho have lost from 10,000 to 20,000 sheep some seasons, the losses being scattered in such a manner as to prove conclusively that the system of management rather than any infection is the cause. Moreover, the mortality occurs almost entirely among ewes five years old or more, and about 90 per cent of these are carriers of twin lambs, the remainder carrying well-developed single lambs. The losses of lambs added to the mortality of the ewes make a heavy drain on the resources of the average outfit.

Losses in Idaho have occurred chiefly during the latter part of February, beginning about the 20th, until the middle of March, by which time most of the early lambs are born. The early symptoms are loss of appetite, impaired vision, staggering gait, twitching of muscles of head and ears, drooling, and a desire to be alone. Later the ewes develop paralysis and coma, probably the result of autointoxication. Affected animals present a pitiable condition and even after the advanced stages are noted may live for several days. The heaviest losses have occurred in years of poor hay crops and formerly were attributed to poisoned hay.

The present knowledge of shed pre-lambing losses indicates the cause to be close confinement coupled with too heavy feeding. The remedy is exercise and the feeding of a balanced ration, with an ample water supply, of course, all practiced for at least 30 days before lambing.

NEW DORMANT SPRAY FOR APPLE TREES SUGGESTED

The use of miscible oils as a dormant spray for apple trees is coming back into favor once more. The principal use of the dormant spray is for the control of scale insects. Lime sulphus has been used with very effective results and without injury to the trees. The oil emulsions if made properly and applied carefully will give the same good results and no injurious effects. The United States department of agriculture has recently completed some thorough experiments in regard to the use of a home-made oil mixture called red engine oil emulsion. The Massachusetts Agricultural college orchards were sprayed with this home-made emulsion last year. The reports are all very favorable; a good control is secured, and the spray has these advantages; it is more comfortable to apply than the burning lime sulphur; it costs less per tree for the material; it gives the most effective control of European red mites of any spray. Experience with this home-made oil emulsion shows that applied as a delayed dormant spray it kills early hatched broods of the apple aphis.

Because of these advantages the use of this red engine oil emulsion is recommended by the county agents for the dormant spraying of apple orchards. The formula for making this emulsion is simple. Two gallons of red engine oil, one gallon of water and two pounds of potash fish oil soap are put in a container and brought to a boil. A brown scum which disappears just as the solution comes to a boil is the indication that the oil is ready for emulsion. Boiling should continue about 3 minutes. Then the solution should be pumped while hot at about 60 pounds pressure into another container and back again or into a third container. It should be pumped twice. A bucket or barrel pump can be used for pumping. Old hose is best used as the solution is strong and must be pumped while hot. The above formula when added to 97 gallons of water will give 100 gallons of spray material and is of the required strength—a 2 per cent solution. Further information regarding the use of this oil emulsion will be given gladly by the county agents on application.

Woman may be a conundrum, but she always has a ready answer.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

BREAK IN THE MARKET

New York, Feb. 16—Stock prices collapsed today under a deluge of selling orders for both accounts, net losses in the active industrial and railroad issues breaking one to 7 1-2 points, with even sharper declines in some of the high-priced specialties. It was the most drastic decline since the beginning of the post-election bull movement. Total sales, which fell just a little short of two and a quarter million shares, were the largest of any session since January 5.

Selling was inspired by the publication of several unfavorable 1924 earnings reports, unofficial predictions that the 1924 report of the Baldwin Locomotive requirements would show earnings sufficient to cover dividend requirements and stiffer money rates. While a reaction had been widely predicted because of the weakened technical condition of the market and the recent decrease of public participation today's decline was rather startling in its suddenness.

Bear traders threw thousands of shares into the market soon after the opening, their offerings being augmented by heavy profit-taking. Withdrawal of pool support resulted in such substantial recessions that scores of stop-loss orders were touched off, adding to the flood of liquidation which continued right up to the close.

U. S. Steel common broke 2 1-2 points to 122 1-2 on total transactions of about 125,000 shares, closing just above the low figure of the day. Baldwin was hammered down 3 points to 111. American Can, which had recorded a sensational advance in the last fortnight broke 7 3-8 points to 168, closing at the bottom. Studebaker showed a loss of 2 5-8 at 42 1-2. Du-pont dropped 3 points to 146 despite an increase in the quarterly dividend from $2 to $2.50.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe broke 17 points to 207 and then rallied to 211. Nash Motors closed 14 1-2 points lower at 130. Commercial Solvents A and B fell back 8 1-4 and 11 1-2 points respectively. Mack truck dropped 7 -3 points to 135 3-4.

Among the many other industrials to show losses of 3 to 6 1-2 points were American Express, Air Reduction, Allis-Chalmers, American Sumatra Tobacco, Atlantic Refining, Colorado Fuel, Famous Players, Foundation Company, General Asphalt, General Electric, General Petroleum, Houston Oil, Independent Oil & Gas, Marine preferred, International Paper, Maxwell Motors A and B, Ludlum Steel, Maracaibo Oil, Pacific Oil, Pan-American A and B, Pressed Steel Car, Republic Steel, Sears-Roebuck, Stewart-Warner, Radio Corporation, Texas Gulf Sulphur, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Universal Pipe & Radiator common and preferred, and Worthington Pump.

Rails declined with the industrials although the recessions were not as large. New York Central, Missouri Pacific preferred, Southern Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie First preferred, Delaware & Hudson, Kansas City Southern and a few others fell back two points or so. Atchison showed independent strength, closing more than a point higher at 118 on buying influenced by unconfirmed reports that the road was to distribute its oil holdings.

Call money opened at 3 1-2 per cent, but advanced to 4 in the afternoon, closing at the high figure. The time money market was slightly firmer. 60 to 90 day loans being quoted on a flat 3 3-4 per cent. basis. The lower maximums were unchanged but offerings were moderate in volume. A slight easing also was noted in commercial paper rates, prime names being quoted at 3 1-2 to 3 3-4 instead of on a flat 3 1-2 per cent basis.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the recovery in French francs, which moved up about ten points, around 5.25 cents, following a somewhat similar advance in the London market. Demand sterling ruled slightly higher around $4.77 1-4 and substantial improvement also was shown by Italian and Belgian exchange. Other European rates moved within narrow and irregular limits.

NORWICH TOWN

The final rehearsal for "Tommy's Wife," the farce comedy to be presented by the Girls' Friendly society, of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, was held Monday evening in the First Congregational church, included among the large congregation were several clergymen, representing New London, Hanover, Taftville, Fitchville, Bozrah, Norwich and Norwich Town.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church, closed its membership contest at this meeting, it being informally announced that the reds, Miss Marion L. Bailey, were the successful contestants, having won out over the whites of whom Miss Rose K. Durr was the leader. The contest proposed and arranged by Miss Elizabeth Avery, chairman of the Lookout committee has been running for the past four of five weeks. At the meeting Sunday February 1st, the reds and whites were tied for honors and all through the contest there has been close competition. The attendance has been large at all meetings.

In his sermon at the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached from Luke 8:45. And Jesus said, who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him said Master, the multitude throng Thee and press Thee and sayest Thou, Who Touched Me? the last three words being the theme of the sermon.

The session of the Sunday school was held in the church auditorium.

The women of the First Congregational church, have been invited to attend a meeting Friday afternoon at the Hugh Henry Osgood Memorial, to hear Miss Hall Wood, of New York an unusually interesting speaker.

"Raising Up Christian Leaders," with Scripture references in Isaiah and Matthew, will be the theme at the mid-week prayer service of the Congregational church, on Thursday evening.

The Thank Offering meeting of the Home Missionary society of the Congregational church, is to be held Friday afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. Gurdon F. Bailey, at the parsonage on Elm avenue.

The bi-monthly meeting of the executive committee of Norwich Christian Endeavor Union, was held Monday evening at the home of Miss Jessie E. Hyde, of Washington street.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday morning, Rev. James B. Ahlfeld preached from Matthew 2-1 Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, The Birth of Christ was the theme.

There were no evening services at this church. The Young People's C. E. society was represented by a good delegation at the union meeting at the Congregational church.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Smith and son Albert Smith of Brooklyn, Conn., former, Norwich residents, motored to Norwich Town Sunday and were the guests for the day, at the home of Mr. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Smith, of Town street.

A former Norwich Town young man, Frank Durr, returned Monday afternoon, to his home in Bellefourche South Dakota, following a visit of four weeks at the home of his mother and his sisters, Mrs. Mary Durr, the Misses Durr of Town street.

EMPHASIZES MORAL GRANDEUR OF LINCOLN

At the noon meeting of the Richmond Radiator company, Monday, the Rev. Charles H. Ricketts addressed the men on The Moral Grandeur of Abraham Lincoln, the meeting being under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. The following is a brief synopsis of the speaker's remarks:

1. This moral grandeur is seen in his refusal to let poverty keep him down. Both poverty and wealth are neutral as far as character is concerned, but the extremes of both are not conducive to the highest development. The old notion that Lincoln was born into abject squalor is now exploded. His early home was the average of those in the primitive life of the early nineteenth century. It was hard, rough and full of dangers, but was neither abject nor squalid. But he knew that he must lift himself out of those limitations, if he was to succeed in life and he did.

2. His moral grandeur is seen in his refusal to be classified with incompetents and non-entities. He had more to fear from ignorance than poverty; most men have. He had a strong innate desire for knowledge and a resolution to get it; such a combination usually succeeds. Our sympathy for his lack of early facilities for learning is entirely wasted, because that burning thirst for knowledge was his intellectual salvation.

3. His moral grandeur is seen in the depth and extent of his patriotism. He was not a profound general scholar like many of the men he met in Washington. But he knew America, past and present, as few men did. His patriotism was an incandescent flame that helped him see democracy as the last word in the form of human government, and that the American people ought to make it the most perfect desire for the administration of law.

4. His moral grandeur is seen in his exposition of real freedom. All men are born politically free and equal and the color of a man's skin has no more to do with his political equality than the color of his eyes. Hence if he was to make democracy a logical fact he must emancipate the slaves.

The speaker concluded by saying that we needed a revival of this idealism if we are to keep this country true to democratic principles.

A COUGH REMEDY WITHOUT OPIATES

Many cough preparations contain some one or more harmful drugs which are added to take the place of opiates. None of these narcotic substitutes have ever been used in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The name of every ingredient is plainly printed on every carton. You know what you are taking when you take Foley's. It clings to the throat. Good for old and young. You have a cough, why not try it? Refuse substitutes. Lee & Osgood Co.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Pingree of Goodyear were week end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Pingree and family of North Third avenue.

A number of the members of the local boy scout troops are to take part in the stunt night in Norwich Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Erwin G. Crowdis is in charge of a committee from the Taftville Congregational church school which is to meet with delegations from other churches of the United Congregational church in Norwich next Friday evening.

Emile Belleros of Southbridge Mass., a former resident of this village spent the week-end in town.

Norwich music lovers who attended the concert given by the choir of St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox church, in Union hall, Saturday evening, were well repaid by the program of Russian music, including provincial airs and folksongs. The choir was under the direction of Professor Andreyeff, and showed the results of his careful and expert training, by the wonderful harmony and blend of the voices, unaccompanied, as eastern music usually is, by any musical instrument. In fact at times, the voices resembled the swell of a mighty organ. Professor Andreyeff possesses a rich baritone voice, and he gave several solos, accompanied on the piano by Alfred Bruckesch, organist at St. Andrew's church. His duets with Mme. Sokoloff, wife of the rectory of St. Nicholas church, were most enjoyable. Mme. Sokoloff has a contralto voice of great range and power, and in the opinion of those who attended the concert, she is one of the best contralto singers who have appeared in this city. The singers wore the Russian national costume. Under the leadership of Professor Andreyeff, the choir has become one of the finest musical organizations in the city. The proceeds of the concert were added to the church treasury.

NORWICH RESERVOIRS CONTINUE TO MAKE GAIN TOWARDS FULL POND

Some slight rain in the last month and the assistance of the Trading Cove brook pumping station have enabled the two Norwich reservoirs to make some progress towards accumulating water and eventually reach the stage of full pond again with March and April ahead, the two best months for water.

Fairview reservoir was 15 feet down from full pond Monday holding at that level 130 million gallons, and Stony Brook reservoir was down 12 feet, 6 inches from full pond, holding 124 million gallons, giving a total present supply of 254 million gallons, which is about 63 days supply. One month ago the supply on hand was 125 million gallons so that the gain has been 129 million gallons.

February has given a rainfall of 1.77 inches so far, of which .38 inches was in the storm of Sunday.

This fiscal year for the water department, from April to April, promises to be one of the dryest on record unless we get more than the usual rainfall in March and April. For nine months of this year the rainfall has been 25.38 inches and for 10 months 27.98 inches which indicates that there must be generous precipitation in March and April in order to bring the year up to the average.

Twelve years ago in December when the gate of Stony Brook reservoir was first closed for the accumulation of water it took 83 days to fill the reservoir to full pond of 388 million gallons, no water being drawn from it while it was filling. The gates were closed Dec. 4, 1912 and the pond was full on Feb. 27.

Superintendent John J. Corkery is keeping the pumping station going and will continue the pumping until it is certain that the reservoirs will be filled by the natural flow from the watersheds. The water board, however, is recognizing that the pumping station should not be depended entirely for the future and that the only reliance for an increased supply of water should be by increasing the acreage of watershed. With this end in view, the board is looking around for possible additions to the water sned.

The expense of operating the water shed is from $75 to $100 a day, of which the greater part is for electric power for running the 150 h. p motor that runs the 2,000,000 gallon pump. For operating the pump for 40 days the bill for electric powar was $3,022, making this the largest item in the expense of maintaining and operating the station.

OLD-TIMERS IN EMPLOY OF U. S. FINISHING CO.

The second issue of "Finishing Facts," the plant publication for the several branches of the United States Finishing Co., has made its appearance this week, its make-up and material maintaining the creditable mark set by the first number issued a month ago.

In the "Norwich Notes" is given a picture of the old-timers in the employ of the Norwich branch, whose total period of service with the company equals 332 years. In the group are: Charles W. Evans, yard, 31 years; Patrick Casey, can, 32 years; James Purdon, office, 33 years; Thomas Sullivan, singe, 35 years; George Benson, box shop, 31 years; Ernest Haden, grey, 31 years; William McClinon carpenter shop, 37 years; William J. Banfield, print, calendar room, 36 years; Alexander Sutthill, shade room, 35 years; James W. Fraser, color shop, 31 years.

Of these veterans, Finishing Facts says:

Norwich branch is justly proud of the number of old timers in its employ. These overseers and assistants have been with us for over thirty years and may well be proud of their records as is the company. They are our "Old Faithfuls," tried and true, efficient in the management of their several departments, just and loyal to their men and the company alike and deeply conscious of their responsibilities. It is the willing cooperation of men of this sort that maintains the reputation of Norwich branch in the finishing industry and gives us our standing in The U. S. Finishing company. Best wishes to you, old timers, may your shadows never grow less.

"It is the seemingly impossible that American ingenuity usually overcomes. An excellent example of this is shown in the above picture, which also shows how The United States Finishing company helped win the war. It is not a view of "K. P." or a barrage in France, but a battery of sulphur dye kettles "behind the lines" somewhere in Sterling.

"Before the war sulphur dyes had always been bought in Germany, so when the United States entered the war in 1917 and suddenly called upon our company to supply millions of yards of khaki for uniforms and other military supplies, we were stuck. How and where were we going to get the sulphur dyes?

"Thanks to the enterprise and chemical skill of Henry B. Crowell, a resident of Sterling, a sulphur dye plant was set up on his farm. Here rain or shine, winter and summer, for many months excellent dyes were made under extreme difficulty and inconvenience and The United States Finishing company was able thereby to meet the enormous requirements of the government."

VALENTINE DECORATIONS FOR BIRTHDAY PARTY

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION OF JUDGE GREENE

New London learns with regret of the passing away, on Tuesday, after lingering illness, of former Superior Court Judge Gardiner Greene, a member of the county bar for more than fifty years. He was much respected here, and justly, for he represented a type and quality of citizenship now becoming all too rare for the nation's good; a type common enough, particularly in southern New England, when Mr. Greene was a boy, but that seems to be going out of fashion rapidly, says Frederick P. Latimer in the New London Day.

Judge Greene had the manner, presence and character of the "old school," not in perfection, for no one is perfect, but markedly, so as to give him a distinction in his community, a place that he himself revered, as others admired, because it was a conviction with him that a man ought to gain distinction not merely for the money he might get, or the good things he might do, but for self-respect's sake, and in the way of advancing in the world the prestige of probity and personal worth.

In school and college Judge Greene was utterly faithful, taking his opportunities for scholarship with seriousness and notable credit. He began his law work as dutifully and always maintained it so. By natural course it took him to enviable success. His demonstration was as commendable, in politics, the church, in charitable and educational interest, and in the welcome place he had in cultivated society.

So it came to be that in maturity the tall, dignified, courteous and immaculate figure of this man was as a landmark in Norwich, a personality almost institutional. He was "looked up to," and relied upon thoroughly. He had amassed no fortune. He had attained no extraordinary fame. But he was upon all hands regarded as a leading, exceptionally creditable gentleman of the town. His promotion to the bench was a natural, appropriate thing, rounding out and crowning a most meritorious local career. But it is not so much as a judge that we will miss him. We think rather of the Norwich that used to be, but never can be again. It may be more populous. It may be richer, more famous, or brilliant. But it, and our state, and our country, for that matter, no longer produces, typically, men who can take with them to a position in the courts—or anywhere, just the same kind of chivalrous conscientiousness as shaped the life of Gardiner Greene. The rising generation is not careful of punctilio. It derides "respectability." It is slip-shod and reckless, moving dangerously away from the intelligent decorum of the past.

FIRST MARLIN SWORDFISH LANDED BY MRS. REGGIO

A Miami, Fla., paper says:

To a woman angler and the charter boat Gloria S., go the honors of bringing in the first marlin swordfish of the season. Mrs. A. Reggio of Ridgewood, N. J., caught the fish yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Reggio were out with Capt. Bill Fagen on one of their regular fishing jaunts. Mrs. Reggio caught a record sailfish while fishing with Captain Fagen last season, and on the last day she spent here, lost a marlin after a hard fight. She promised then that she would come back this season and land one.

Yesterday's trip had little more than started when, just off the bell buoy opposite the mouth of government cut, something took Mrs. Reggio's line. Remembering the incident of last season, she said: "Captain, here's that marlin I promised last season." In a moment, when the fish broke water, her prediction was verified, and both Mrs. Reggio and the fish settled down for a long fight.

Efforts to land the fish only resulted in long runs and circling by the boat, until in three hours and eight minutes, the Gloria S. was 18 miles at sea, opposite Fulford. The fish was then landed, and estimated to weigh 90 pounds.

Not content with the catch, Mr. and Mrs. Reggio continued fishing, but they were far off the best fishing grounds and much time had been taken by the long struggle with the marlin. Four bonito and a dolphin were landed, however.

Mrs. Reggio was Gena W. Ives, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Ives, of Norwich, and has shown exceptional skill at fishing.

SAY NEW BRITAIN MAN SHOT MRS. J. VERDI

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 16.—The would-be assassin, who attempted to kill Mrs. Joseph Verdi, 18 Brewer street, shortly before last midnight, when he fired a .32 calibre revolver, the bullet missing Mrs. Verdi's body because it struck a corset steel, was revealed today to be Michael Madonna, 76 Shaw street. Madonna's wife and family moved to New Britain three weeks ago and are still in that city, and it is not known whether the man now being sought by the police will go there or will remain in hiding.

At the Verdi residence this forenoon and again this afternoon Sergts. Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh interviewed the intended victim, Mrs. Verdi declared that no words were exchanged other than in a most friendly manner by Madonna and Mrs. Verdi and that no cause for Madonna's act could be advanced. However, the police are informed that although Madonna was brought to the Verdi house last night by Verdi and his wife's father, Madonna was given to understand that his visits to the house must cease, and that he was not wanted there, after last night. It is also stated that just prior to Madonna's attempt upon the life of Mrs. Verdi Madonna informed the woman that she "would die tonight," and immediately following the utterance Madonna is alleged to have gone to the kitchen, procured his coat and returning to where he left Mrs. Verdi opened fire on her and then fled.

Mr. Dennis is to speak on the subject over radio from WGBS at 2:30 Thursday afternoon, February 17, in the hope that by reaching a large audience he can warn millions of the danger.

MacDONALD HAS VISION OF CONNECTICUT PARKWAY

As a solution of the ever-increasing traffic problem on the Boston Post road, a plan for the construction of a parallel route from Bridgeport to the New York state line near Greenwich that could eventually be made a scenic parkway, was outlined before the Bridgeport Chamber of Commerce on Monday afternoon by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. The project, he said, was yet only in the process of development, but plans contemplated its possible connection with the new Hutchinson River Parkway, which the Westchester County Park Commission plans to build as a parallel road from New York City to Connecticut.

"It is our thought," said the highway commissioner, "that with the present widening of the Boston Post road to thirty-six feet from Bridgeport to New York, trucks and local traffic, and such other traffic as would care to use the Post road, would be amply taken care of for many years to come.

"What we desire is an express highway from somewhere in the vicinity of Bridgeport west and parallel to the Post road, connecting into some system in New York state which will give easy access for passenger-carrying vehicles to intermediate points and to New York City without delay."

The Westchester County Park Commission has projected three parkways running north from New York City, approximately parallel and about two miles apart, he said. The first, or the most easterly one from the Connecticut border, known as the Saw Mill River Parkway; the second known as the Bronx River Parkway and the third, which is nearer the Connecticut line is the Hutchinson River parkway.

"The Hutchinson River Parkway," he said, "is the one with which we are at present most interested, as it will strike the Connecticut line north of Greenwich in the vicinity of the village of Glenville. It may be, after the plans are provided, that it will be more convenient for this state to consider a connection with the Bronx River route, but at present it seems that the Hutchinson River plan is the most desirable. However, the possibility of any parallel route through Connecticut hinges upon the availability of a connection at the New York line."

Commissioner Macdonald expressed the opinion that it was impossible to see any limit in the growth of traffic between Connecticut and New York City through Fairfield county. He said that it would be necessary to look far ahead into the future, as failure to do so would cause hardship within a few short years.

"We must adopt some plan," he said, "the execution of which will only be a matter of time. Have no fear of over-development, as history shows that our failures have been not for over-shooting the mark, but for under-estimating the traffic requirements. The highway department has no hope at the present time of ever catching up with traffic on the Post Road. Our only hope is to keep not too far behind it.

"Up to the present time, this state has built no purely scenic roads. All have been economic and have been justified on the amount of passenger car traffic and commodities which they have carried. This state has not yet reached a position in highway construction where it is possible to consider any other type than an economic road. Any parallel road which we will build, therefore, or which we have projected, will be based solely upon the economic principles and we can take into consideration only traffic requirements.

"Now in the building of such a route which I should like very much to call a parkway, it is to be our object to relieve congestion on the Post road first, if, in the process, it is possible to provide for future beautification, we, of course, will take this into consideration, although it must necessarily be secondary. Benefit to traffic will be our main consideration.

"The roadside development that will be possible on this road is necessarily a matter which will have to be considered after the road is constructed, and after such time as the state has been able to perfect its whole highway system to such a degree that it can afford to spend money on other than necessities unless funds are forthcoming from other sources."

He said that a road of this kind must have lateral connections to all the centers of population along the shore if it is to be of greatest value. He said that an appropriation to make a survey of the route had been requested of the legislature.

He expressed the opinion that such an express route would do more to develop Fairfield county and to remove a serious traffic problem than any other plan yet devised.

WARDEN SAYS WETHERSFIELD IS BAD FIRE TRAP

The main administration building of the state prison at Wethersfield was termed a serious fire trap by Warden Henry K. W. Scott while taking the legislative appropriations committee about the building on a tour of inspection. An appropriation to replace it without delay with a fireproof structure was requested. Contractors have estimated that the work would cost about $175,000, but, by the use of prison labor, the cost could be kept to a considerably lower figure, in the opinion of prison board officials.

It was pointed out to members of the committee that the lives of 400 prisoners would be in jeopardy if fire should get well started in the main building, the three upper floors and principal construction of which, except for the walls, are of wood. Two barriers of great steel bars stand between the cell blocks and the front entrance of the prison, which would be the only practical exit by which prisoners could be taken out to safety in the event of a serious fire. There is a small back gate at the rear of the prison through which a small percentage of the prisoners could be liberated.

The cell blocks themselves are fire proof, but it was explained that a seething fire in the administration building with the accompanying suffocating smoke would make the cells uninhabitable. Nothing stands between the main administration building and the cell blocks but bars and a thin frame partition with many windows. The assembly hall and the officers' quarters are in the upper stories of the administration building, all built of combustible material.

Prison officials said they considered it their duty to acquaint the legislature with the condition. Governor Trumbull has already studied the situation, in connection with a visit to the prison with the Society of State Executives.

Col. Norris G. Osborn of New Haven, president of the board of directors of the prison, addressed the committee briefly. He made it clear that he and his associates had abandoned plans for a new prison, in view of the fact that the state, "legislatively, financially and sentimentally," appeared to be in no mood to authorize the expenditure that would be required. Therefore it was the duty of the prison management to make the present prison as safe and healthy as possible.

Other directors present at the prison to receive the committee were Frederick M. Salmon of Westport, C. William G. Cheney of Manchester, Edwin P. Root of New Haven and Isadore Wise of Hartford.

BREAKS KNEECAP IN FALL ON STAIRWAY

Henry Eugene Morgan, an employe of Church and Allen, broke his kneecap in a fall on a stairway Monday afternoon about 4.30 at the undertaking rooms at 15 Main street. Mr. Morgan was on his way downstairs to answer the bell at the Water street door when he stepped off two stairs instead of one and went down in a heap. He was crippled by the injury and was found by Mr. Allen who went to see why he had not returned from answering the bell. Mr. Allen got the injured man into bed and then sent for the hospital ambulance which took Mr. Morgan to the Backus hospital where he is a patient.

NO VOICE IN SENATE RAISED AGAINST INCREASE IN PAY

Voted Without Record Vote Its Approval of Salary Increases for the Vice President, Cabinet Officials and Members of Congress—Salaries of Vice President, Cabinet Members and Speaker of House Would be Increased From $12,000 to $15,000 a Year, Senators and Representatives from $7,500 to $10,000.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Without discussion or a record vote, the senate tonight gave its approval to a pay increase for the vice president, cabinet officials and members of congress.

The proposal is embodied in a measure by Senator Bell, republican, Delaware, which was offered by Chairman Warren of the appropriations committee as an amendment to the $15,000,000 legislative supply bill, passed tonight and sent to conference.

If approved by the house, the pay increases would become effective March 4, when the 69th congress comes into being. Under the terms of the amendment, which Senator Warren explained had the approval of the finance as well as of his own committee, the salary of the vice president, members of the cabinet and the speaker of th house would be increased from $12,000 to $15,000 a year while those of senators, representatives and delegates from the several territories would be advanced from $7,500 to $10,000.

With the passage of the legislative bill, the senate has to act on only one other of the annual supply measures, that appropriating money for the Washington city government. All except one amendment to this bill was approved tonight, and leaders planned to have it passed before the end of this week.

RIVER SAND HARBORS BILL REPORTED IN THE SENATE

Washington, Feb. 17—A rivers and harbors bill carrying authorization for projects and surveys for which appropriations aggregating $41,738,120 will be required was reported favorably today by the senate commerce committee.

The bill, as reported, calls for about $2,000,000 more in expenditures than it carried as passed by the house, although a number of items approved by that chamber and proposals forward by senators were reduced to bring the total of authorizations as close as possible to the $40,000,000 limit set by President Coolidge.

The committee approved provisions for important links in the inland waterway from Maine to Texas, including the Louisiana and Texas intracoastal waterway for which $9,000,000 would be appropriated; expenditure of $6,500,000 for the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbor project and $275,000 for a survey of the St. Lawrence waterway project by an agency to be designated by President Coolidge.

TESTIMONY OPENS IN THE CASE AGAINST W. E. D. STOKES

Chicago, Feb. 17. (By the A. P.)—Six witnesses, five of whom said they had been acquainted with the Everleigh club, a notorious resort 15 years ago, were introduced today in the prosecution of W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, accused of conspiracy to defame his estranged wife, Helen Elwood Stokes.

All told of being approached by Stokes or an agent of Stokes for identification of pictures of Mrs. Stokes as those of a former inmate of the club.

"Mr. Stokes showed me some old time pictures," said Alice Bynum, negress, who said she had been maid "on the door" at the Everleigh club four and one-half years.

"I said, 'I don't know her.'"

"He tried to make me remember her."

Defense counsel objected, and the witness was instructed to confine her testimony to what was said.

Lucille Harrison, negress, the only witness who said she had had no associations with the Everleigh club, smiled sweetly as she pointed out Mr. Stokes, exclaiming:

"Why, he's cut off his mustache!"

Charles F. Rathbun, counsel for Stokes, in cross-examination, read to her the following statement which she acknowledged as her own:

"I've heard about Mrs. Stokes in Denver, and she's a clean cut woman. She ought to work that man Stokes. I'd like to break that scoundrel!"

"You meant that, didn't you, and you mean it now?" asked Mr. Rathburn.

"I certainly did, and I certainly do," replied the witness with snapping eyes.

Max Rathburn tried to show on cross examination that the witness' husband had been employed by Stokes in his purported investigation of Mr. Stokes' alleged life before her marriage, had made an unsatisfied claim upon Stokes for money, and had gone over to Mrs. Stokes' camp.

Lucille admitted that she had heard something about such matters, and understood her husband had done some work for Stokes, but declared with spirit that she "didn't know all about her husband's affairs."

HELD AS A MATERIAL WITNESS OF MURDER

New York, Feb. 17.—Four men were held today as material witnesses in the police investigation of the murder of James Ricardo, 44, a prosperous truck farmer, of Mount Vernon, whose body was found last night in the deserted Colonial house on his ten-acre Bronx farm, near the Mount Vernon line. Ricardo was shot in the back of the head. Near his body was a double-barreled shotgun.

Marando Delano, 60, a grocer, of Mount Vernon, from whom the slain man purchased the farm seven years ago, according to his widow, was one of those held. A search of Delano's home, the police said, revealed a double barreled shotgun that had been discharged. Delano, they said, asserted he had not touched the gun since he fired it New Year's eve.

Others detained with Delano were three men who found Ricardo's body at the farm. Police are also looking for an unidentified man with whom Ricardo is believed to have had trouble recently.

TOM-CAT TOOK KINDLY TO NEW YORK POLICEMAN

New York, Feb. 17.—A white Tom-cat, walking leisurely abroad on lower Broadway today, was suddenly amazed. A whistle blew—friendly traffic melted away—and in the great open spaces of the street corner there was only Tom; and an approaching officer of the law.

Then there was only the officer; for Tom scooted to safety under a surface car and lodged himself under the motor box near the wheel. Patrolman Daly pursued. A crowd gathered. Patrolman Charles Collins came up from the corner below.

The patrolmen exhausted their cat vocabulary in an effort to coax Tom out. The crowd of about 7,000 exhausted its advice. Tom was adamant. Traffic piled up.

"Get a board and shove him out," somebody finally advised.

Tom dodged the board. Patrolman Collins abandoned his dignity and crawled under the car. Tom scampered out as the multitude cheered. He affectionately rubbed the leg of Officer Daly.

Traffic moved on and the crowd dispersed; then Officer Daly carried his feline friend to a parked car and sent for milk. Tom lapped the milk, crawled under the automobile and went to sleep.

COLLINS' FUNERAL SERVICES ON HILL ABOVE CAVE-TOMB

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 17 (By the A. P.).—On the hill above Sand cave this afternoon his family and friends held funeral services for Floyd Collins. There was no casket, no corpse, no grave, and no marker.

Sixty feet underground in the Sand cave trap which closed upon him 18 days ago lay the body of Collins, discovered a few days too late by the rescuers. Rather than risk the lives of any of the tireless volunteers, his family chose to leave him in the cave for his last sleep.

Physicians, his friends and officials of the rescue party crept down into his narrow tomb today to gather the legal evidence that Floyd was buried there and that he was dead. None of his family could take a last look, but the thought that Collins would have chosen such a spot, among his beloved caves, comforted them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Collins were there, silent in the last earthly rites for their son, the aged couple sat side by side in small chairs near the edge of the same limestone ledge under which Sand cave disappears.

Behind them, grouped on large boulders overlooking the valley below, were a dozen members of a choir gathered from among residents of Cave City. Mr. and Mrs. Collins listened with bowed heads while chords of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," drifted over the hill as the service opened.

The aged father looked often toward the mouth of Sand cave, 125 feet away, as the words "though like the wanderer, the sun gone down," floated away in the distance.

Sand cave, naked in the absence of its sheltering canopy, yawned silently as he gazed. Rev. Roy H. Biser of Glasgow, a neighboring community, climbed to a stump to open the scriptural service, and a motion picture camera started to whirr. At the outer fringe of the group stood a sentinel with his rifle. Huge rocks were the benches of the outdoor chapel.

Men who had spent days in the struggle, unshaved and muddy in appearance, bared their heads in the chilling breeze. The prayer was offered. The little gathering of one hundred and fifty men and women heard Dr. Biser tell them they were "standing on this precipice in the midst of death" and listened to him give thanks "for the brotherhood of man as manifested by those who have risked their lives on this site." Mrs. Ira Weathers of Cave City sang a solo.

Newspaper telephones, but recently installed all over the hillside, rang unanswered from various tree stations. A soft wind rustled the dried brown leaves and carried the song off down the valley.

The story of Floyd Collins, uncertain in its outcome, uncertain even from day to day, Dr. Biser referred to as paralleling the romance of mankind itself. No other incident within memory, he said, had brought so many prayers from the brotherhood of man for one fellow man trapped underground.

"Floyd loved the caverns and the caves; loved them as some of us love flowers and the birds," he said. "Now he is enshrined in his sarcophagus of stone where his body lies in peace."

"It was Floyd's wish to be buried in a cave," the speaker added, and then related a dream which Mr. Collins said his son recently experienced, a dream that angels came and took him away from a cave where he was imprisoned.

"Heroic deeds have laid a permanent monument for the whole country in the exhibitions of courage and stamina revealed for 18 days at Sand cave," Rev. C. K. Dickey of Horse Cave said.

J. F. Van Cleve of Glasgow spoke in a voice so low that the trickling of water down an opposite hillside only emphasized the solemnity of the occasion. Faint clicks from cameras were audible as Van Cleve told softly of how men emerging from the rescue shaft had dropped like dead on their cots night after night.

The remainder was short. Dr. Dickey conducted the committal and A. F. Pearson, a Glasgow undertaker, dropped a piece of ash, a tiny fluttering fern and a bit of earth as Floyd's unseen remains were committed to his Maker.

Fifty-five minutes had elapsed when the final "Amen" brought the closing of the services. Such was the last hour of spiritual tribute to Floyd Collins. A few more hours and his body will have been sealed in its tomb deep in the earth below. A block of concrete will be permitted to solidify in the lateral leading from the rescue shaft, while the shaft proper will be filled with rock and earth from the vicinity. The entrance to the cave will be closed with heavy timbers and Floyd Collins henceforth will rest undisturbed.

A city wide search is underway in Bridgeport for four bandits who held up and robbed Jacob Harinstein, owner of a meat market at 294 Brewster street, Monday and robbed him of $235 in cash and three checks.

Remains Isolated in Husband's Apartment

Mrs. Budlong Entreats to be Left Undisturbed — Servant Throws Doubt on "Hunger Strike."

New York, Feb. 17—Mrs. Jessie Margaret Budlong, self-imprisoned in the eleventh floor apartment of her husband in East Seventy-Second street, was the innocent precipitator of a battle between newspapermen and a force of private detectives in her husband's employ when she got into communication with the outside world today.

The fight, which ended only with the arrival of police reserves, had its inception in efforts of the private operatives to obtain a note sent to the newspaper men by Mrs. Budlong. When the police succeeded in ending the melee, they found the newspaper men victorious in that they retained possession of the note.

Mrs. Budlong appeared late today at husband, Milton J. Budlong, vice president of the window of the apartment, where she imprisoned herself several days ago, presumably to forestall a possible attempt of lodge a divorce complaint against her for alleged desertion and motioned to a throng of newspapermen eleven stories below.

"Be sure and get this," she shouted.

Newspapermen and the detectives rushed forward as she threw a package from the window. A newspaperman came out of the heap bearing the package aloft. Then the fight started and continued furiously until police arrived in answer to a neighbor's telephone summons. No arrests were made.

Inside a dress shirt bearing the initials "M. J. B." the property of her ident of the North Central Texas Oil Company, the following note was "I do not want anyone to try and take me out of the apartment. I am locked into my room. If they try to break in, I will open the door voluntarily, which I will have to do Thursday, Friday or Saturday. Any opiate would kill me. I am all right, but I could not stand a drug or opiate. Also I have no weapons and shall not resist if they attempt to eject me which they threatened to do last night. I was afraid last night of where they might take me. I am safe at present, however, and do not wish anyone to try and get me out. Please notify the newspapers and (Attorney) Max D. Steuer."

No one could be found who could explain Mrs. Budlong's reference to opiates.

Attendants in the Budlongs apartment today said Mrs. Budlong continued to refuse food from them. Although Mrs. Budlong has maintained that she was on a "hunger strike," subsisting on nothing but water, a servant said she knew that the woman had $11 worth of cheese, caviar, anchovy paste and crackers at the time she imprisoned herself.

Repeated efforts to have Mrs. Budlong leave the apartment have failed although her daughter and an attorney were said to have joined their pleas with those of representatives of Budlong.

Mrs. Budlong entered the apartment two days after a Newport, R. I., court had denied her plea for separate maintenance and had denied her the continued custody of her children.

To War on Salacious Plays in New York

Investigators Have Returned a List of Thirteen Questionable Productions on Broadway.

New York, Feb. 17.—Broadway's list of plays against which complaints have been preferred—most of them said to be doing a "standing-room only" business—grew to 13 today.

This developed at a conference between District Attorney Banton, Chief City Magistrate McAdoo and Police Chief Enright. Mr. Enright entered the meeting with reports on 13 plays obtained by police detectives and stenographers after citizens had complained to him against the productions. The name of none of the investigated plays was made known, but it was no secret that William A. Brady's production of "A Good Bad Woman" was one of the list.

Mr. Banton announced he would detail his own men to investigate the plays already reported upon to the police head, and would then determine if they were to be proceeded against with the aid of the grand jury.

The district attorney still awaited the return to town of Mr. Brady before making a decision as to his course concerning "A Good Bad Woman." This will be some time this week. Mr. Banton said he believed the play should be withdrawn altogether, as he did not consider it could be sufficiently remedied by deletions. One of the other plays complained against, he said, was "even worse," than the Brady play. Mr. Banton didn't name it.

The war on objectionable plays has stirred wide interest among ministers, producers, actors and civic leaders. An actors' protest meeting against unclean productions is to be held Thursday, and the Rev. Charles K. Gilbert of the Episcopal social service commission has called a meeting of producers, managers, actors and reform organization representatives for the following day.

PLAN LINKING OF 18 BROADCASTING STATIONS

New York, Feb. 17.—Plans for linking eighteen broadcasting stations east of the Mississippi river, with a combined range of 12,500,000 homes, were revealed today by John A. Carty, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, were speakers, was broadcast to an audience estimated at 1,000,000 persons.

Mr. Holman urged that this cooperative movement among broadcasting managers be carried further, so that the whole country be linked. He said that at present 20,000,000 persons in United States "listened in" daily, and that 3,750,000 persons owned radio sets with an average of five and four-fifths listeners to each set.

Fans no longer insisted upon "jazz" in their programs he added, but preferred symphonic dance music.

Brigadier-General Carthy, discussing work in a wire broadcasting, said the radio has now taken its place beside the submarine cable as a means of transoceanic communication.

FINANCIAL DEBATE IN THE FRENCH CHAMBER

Paris, Feb 17—(By the A. P.)—The financial debate, when it was resumed in the chamber of deputies today, appeared to suffer considerable embarrassment from Premier Herriot's unsuccessful efforts yesterday to unite all parties on the single question of financial restoration.

When M. Clementel, the finance minister, took the floor today he seemed to have in mind the premier's failure to secure the co-operation of the opposition. It would be a long operation to bring the franc back to its real value, he declared.

"We cannot stabilize the franc," he said," "while we still are unaware how the negotiations now in progress with our allies will terminate. These we expect to bring to a favorable issue."

CONGRESS MAKES ISSUE OF RAISE IN GASOLINE PRICES

Senate Debated Resolution Calling for a Federal Trade Commission Investigation—Senator Trammel Asserted the 1923 Report of the Commission Showed the Oil Industry Was Monopolistic and Paid Unwarranted Dividends—House Committee Questioned Bureau of Mine Officials in an Effort to Ascertain Causes for Recent Higher Prices in Washington.

Washington, Feb. 17.— Increased gasoline prices today developed into sharp issues in both houses of congress.

In the senate a resolution by Senator Trammell, democrat, Florida, for a federal trade commission investigation was debated for an hour without action, while in the house a committee examined bureau of mines officials in an effort to determine causes for recent higher prices in Washington.

Senator Trammell asserted there was no justification for increases of from four to six cents a gallon for the commodity in recent weeks. Senator Harreld, republican, Oklahoma, however, contended crude oil production had fallen off, and that the price boosts were the natural outgrowth of the law of supply and demand.

Before the house committee, F. B. Tough, bureau of mines expert, said he did not have any information to lead him to believe the price of gasoline in Washington was unfair, adding that he spoke as an individual.

"If we have an increase in the production of crude oil," he said, "then we may expect a decrease in the price of gasoline."

Chairman Zihlman declared interior department figures had shown the largest rate of crude oil production in December, at which time the price increases started, and Mr. Tough replied that formerly stocks started to increase in October and November, but that this year they did not begin until December.

Senator Curtis, Kansas, the republican leader, thought the Trammell resolution should be referred to the senate interstate commerce committee, inasmuch as prosecutions had been started or were pending as a result of the federal trade commission's report of 1923.

Senator Trammell asserted the 1923 report of the commission showed the oil industry was monopolistic and paid unwarranted dividends.

SECRET INFORMATION GIVEN HOUSE AIRCRAFT COMMITTEE

Washington, Feb. 17.—Confidential information on the preparedness of the army and navy to defend the nation against attack from the air was given the house aircraft committee behind closed doors today, and although members would not disclose the plans, it was learned that they were not thoroughly satisfied with the adequacy of the air services.

Hines, chief of the army general staff, and his aide, Major F. B. Wilby, represented the war department. They were designated by Secretaries Wilbur and Weeks, at the request of the committee, to represent those departments.

Representative Perkins, the committee examiner, announced after the meeting that the confidential information had "thrown a flood of light upon the question of general defense, especially in regard to aircraft," and that the request for this information had proven "highly practical."

One member of the committee is understood to have said that, after hearing the army statement, he could appreciate the reason for the position taken by Brigadier General Mitchell, assistant army air chief, whose testimony before the committee has stirred up considerable controversy.

Upon the conclusion of the young woman's plea, Judge E. S. Thomas who at one time in the past had sent Dowd to Atlanta for a similar offense, declared that "faith such as she had could do more for the well being of the accused than any prison term."

DEFENSE TESTIMONY IN ATLANTA PRISON CASE

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 17.—(By the A. P.)—With the testimony of L. J. Fletcher, former deputy warden at the Atlanta federal prison, completed in United States court here this afternoon, all three defendants had testified. A. E. Sartain, former warden at the penitentiary, ended his testimony after the luncheon recess. Laurence Riehl, the third defendant, testified yesterday.

The defense, it was announced, will have several more witnesses to offer tomorrow and the government is expected to present evidence in rebuttal with sur-rebuttal to close the case.

Fletcher in his testimony denied all charges of acceptance of bribes made against him by government witnesses.

"Not a penny," was his answer to questions as to acceptance of money from prisoners in exchange of appointment to "easy jobs". He declared that he had never been approached by anyone with offers of money in return for use of his influence.

He also denied that he went to the station with Father Hayden and Laurence Riehl, when they made a trip to Savannah and said he knew nothing of plans for such a trip. He described his wealth at this time as less than $5,000.

He testified that Carl Haar was assigned to Father Hayden at the chaplain's request, as was "Mannie" Kessler. He also said that C. C. Tuten, was made chauffeur for the prison physician at the request of the physician, Dr. W. F. Quillian.

A. E. Sartain, former warden, said in his testimony that he formerly was sheriff of Franklin county, Ohio, and had not served as warden of a prison until appointed to the Atlanta post in November, 1923. He was questioned as to the $5,000 stressed in Riehl's testimony sent by L. B. Williams, of Savannah, to Riehl in Columbus, O.

The case of Arthur Boyer, 23, a resident of South Coventry, has again come before the public with the rescinding of a 210 day jail sentence imposed on the young man in the New Haven city court Jan. 28 last on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Mr. Boyer was placed under arrest Jan. 24 by officers of the Stafford Springs barracks. He was returned to New Haven by Detective Darwin. The case was in connection with the arrest of Robert Campbell, timekeeper for the C. W. Blakeslee & Sons Construction company of New Haven. Boyer was employed by the company and was under the supervision of Campbell. At the trial Campbell introduced evidence to the effect that Boyer was cognizant of the fact that the pay envelopes were being padded by himself, and the young man was found guilty and committed to the New Haven county jail. A few days later C. W. Blakeslee returned from a stay in New York and caused further investigations to be made of the cases. It then developed that Boyer had been wrongly accused and convicted. Judge Chambers of the New Haven court immediately nolled the jail sentence, and Feb. 13 Boyer was granted his freedom and exonerated of all blame. It was concluded that Campbell had attempted to frame the charge against his associate in order to be relieved of part of the consequences. Campbell, who is middle-aged, is now serving a sentence of 660 days in jail.

Albert B. Smith gave his biography orally and Principal George H. Shafer delivered an address on The Scientific Classification of Life at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held Tuesday noon in the Y. M. C. A. President Harry W. Standish presided. A communication relative to the spring conference in Pittsfield April 16 and 17 was read and for an "On to Pittsfield committee" President Standish appointed Prof. Richard E. Dodge, chairman, J. E. Sullivan, Dr. Michael D. Riordan, Maurice L. Leonard, and Charles W. Hill. The committee will also attend to the matter of securing a home-manufactured gift for the principal speaker of the conference, John R. Bentley, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Secretary Hill passed around a box of fine cigars sent direct from Havana, Cuba, by John C. Tracy, the club's traveling member, who is visiting points of interest on his way to the west coast for a visit. Roland B. Jordan, who was attending his first meeting as a club member, was given a rousing welcome and extended the hand of Rotary by his father, Fred D. Jordan. Guests were two Putnam Rotarians, Thomas M. Rawley and John M. Dean, Jr., who traveled here to make up a 100 per cent. meeting. A letter of appreciation from Mrs. Sarah L. Lavery, wife of District Governor Al Lavery, was read for gifts sent her at the time of the annual visitation of the governor here. President Standish stated that he had sent the club's congratulations to the new member of the Rotary family, the baby club born in Middletown recently. President Standish lamented the low attendance percentage of the club during the past month and asked for a better showing in the future. He complimented Putnam on its fine report of four 100 per cent. meetings dring the period. Next week is Anniversary week in Rotary and Valentine Gregory will have charge of the local program, so far unannounced. With a loud Yes! on the part of the good-lookers the club voted to have a group picture taken at an early date. Jim Suth was then given charge of the meeting. He called for the weekly drawing and Everett Harrington won the coveted privilege of giving his life history at the next meeting. Al Smith was then called upon for a verse of the 50 odd chapters of his life and carefully placed a set of boxing gloves and a baseball bat within easy reach before his talk. He gave a fine history and dropped several useful hints while narrating his personal experiences. Principal Shafer's address was listened to with eagerness and he was warned that he might be asked to continue his scientific discourse at a future meeting. The meeting adjourned at 1.30 o'clock with singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

The old William H. Armstrong umpen factory in South Coventry has become involved in a civil suit brought by Rivkin & Co., real estate brokers, of New York, to recover a commission of $800 for the sale of the plant from Charles and Barnet Will, also of New York. The names of the New York parties to whom the place was sold could not be learned upon this investigation. The brokerage firm alleged that a customer for the Armstrong factory was secured Jan. 29 and the commission agreed upon, and it is further alleged that the defendants failed to deliver the deeds of the property to Rivkin & Co. and refused to do so when demanded to. Since the alleged sale the property has been transferred in the name of Barnet Will on the Coventry town records, this having been done Jan. 19. An attachment was placed on the rights, title and deed of the Witts' interests in the property Tuesday forenoon by Deputy Sheriff A. L. Brink of Tolland county for damages of $3,000. The Armstrong property has been in disuse for several years.

Edwin Floyd of Norwich notified the local police late Monday night that he believed his Ford sedan had been stolen from the vicinity of the Willimantic State Normal school on Valley street. The registry plates on the car bear the number 14-264. Day officers on the force could not state whether or not the machine had been recovered.

With only five feet in the rear and side walls of the rear of the building remaining to be completed to the roof line, the new Capitol theatre building gradually nears exterior completion. Every fair day has been taken advantage of during the winter to lay on more bricks. The tapestry brick front of the building is now completed and with the setting of cut stone on the coping along the front the scaffolding will be removed. The roof over the central part of the structure is being tarred and carpenters have already undertaken the work of erecting the partitions for office suites on the second floor and third floor and a hall on the fourth.

M. Leslie Nicholes has tendered his resignation as manager of the Max Pollock Thread Manufacturing company at Groton, to take effect March 1. He plans to enter into business in this city. The meeting of Willimantic Woman's club was held at the club rooms Tuesday afternoon, the president Mrs. Carl Alford in the chair. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. William A. Buck. Miss Chloe Owens, of the Social Hygiene society, New York, spoke on delinquency and its causes. Miss Owens is a graduate of Knox college and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She has been connected with social work in this country and abroad for a number of years. Miss Owens said that three things have to be taken into consideration, the fact that every human being is born with a different capacity for learning, that the condition in the home are always largely responsible and that it can not be expected that an underfed, insufficiently-nourished growing person will attain to normal development. Society, the community at large, has some control over conditions in the home, but no community can control the economic system in which the untrained worker gets barely enough wages to keep him alive. And it is from these homes that the largest proportion of delinquency cases come. Concerning conditions in Willimantic, where it was brought out that there is a largely foreign-born population with differences of ideas, it was brought out that work along social lines was being carried on actively by the Welfare bureau, the Polish church, the Catholic Welfare council and the Big Sisters. Miss Owens spoke of the work of the policewoman serving in New Haven, New London, and a few other cities, where her presence has been found to be a potent factor. She also spoke of the increasing movement for visiting teachers, whose problem is to study the home and to adjust the child who is found to be a misfit, to the school. She said that most of the difficulty in the whole problem is that people fail to understand it and that she always found people very ready to cooperate in an earnest idea to help each other, once it is thoroughly understood.

Tea was served by the civic committee.

Rev. Frederick C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, left Tuesday morning for Middletown, where he is to attend the period of conference and prayer held at Brkeley Divinity school Tuesday and Wednesday for the clergy of the diocese of Connecticut. Rev. J. W. Dwelly, M. A., canon of Liverpool Cathedral and special lecturer on Liturgics at Berkeley for the year, is to speak on the Adaptation of our Services in the Church to the Needs of the Present Day. The hospitality of Trinty church and the Divinity school is being extended to the visiting clergy. Rev. Theodore D. Martin, rector of St. Peter's church, Hebron, is also among those to attend.

In connection with St. Peter's church plans ar under way for the third session of St. Peter's school there this summer. St. Peter's church of Hebron is one of the oldest Episcopal churches in this part of Connecticut. St. Peter's school was organized three years ago by Austin Warren, M. A., of the graduate school at Princeton and Benjamin Bissell, Ph. D., head of the English department at the Southern Branch of the University of California. The first year the school ran for a week, with a faculty of three, Mr. Werren, Mr. Bissell and Dr. Herman Krappe of New Haven. It opened at nine in the morning with a very short service in the church, followed by a group of lectures at the public library, which was thrown open to the school's uses. Choral evensong was held at four in the afternoon, and a social gathering of some kind was arranged for every evening. The school was considered unusual because it offered a wide variety of studies, had no credits or examinations, and operated on the principle of "study for its own delight." The course the first year included Greek drama (The Orestean Trilogy), Dante's "Divine Comedy," the history of folk tales and the short story, personal soundness and a great deal of music. It was so enthusiastically attended that the second year the school ran for two weeks. Besides two recitals from Bach, Chopin and Tzkowski, Wellington Sloane, Mus. B., instructor in music at the University of Oregon, an addition to the faculty, arranged a variety show, The Hebron Follies, which was given on the last night that school "kept." The plans for this summer's session tentatively include a term of three weeks with a much larger faculty.

A party was given by about forty Social Corner members Monday afternoon at 472 Pleasant street, Willimantic, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Effie Weeks. Mrs. Weeks received a number of handsome gifts, including a birthday cake. The house was decorated with flowering plants, and the Social Corner colors were conspicuous in every room. A clam chowder was served at one o'clock, and the party sat down to a bountiful dinner of salad, cake, pie, doughnuts, fruit, coffee and ice cream.

It is so much simpler this way...
Give everything the benefit of Ivory safety!

A conclusive safety test for garment soaps

It is easy to determine whether or not a soap is gentle enough to be used for delicate garments.

Simply ask yourself this question:

"Would I use this soap on my face?"

In the case of Ivory and Ivory Flakes your answer is instantly "Yes," because you know that for forty-five years women have protected lovely complexions by the use of Ivory Soap.

NO matter how delicate the task, nor how fragile the article, whether it be your skin or your most precious chiffon gown—you know that if it is washable it can be trusted to Ivory.

But for the sake of their hands as well as all the things they clean, women who do their own work have learned to take advantage of Ivory's purity and safety all through the house.

In the first place, it costs very little more to give everything you wash the benefit of Ivory purity than it does to use the harsher soaps. And the final saving on the clothes alone far outweighs this small extra expense.

The same reasoning that leads doctors to recommend Ivory for your complexion and the baby's bath, that makes garment manufacturers and department stores recommend Ivory for washing silks and woolens, that has persuaded makers of fine linoleums to specify Ivory for cleaning them—that same reasoning should easily determine your choice of Ivory for every soap-and-water task in your home.

Don't forget, though, that your hands are the chief victims of harsh soap, because they must touch it five to ten times every day. They fairly cry out for relief and protection.

Ivory fulfills your every soap need—it is the real one-soap-for-everything, because—it is safe for your skin—it is safe for your clothes and their colors—it makes rich, lasting suds.

You can get Ivory in a convenient form for all these tasks. You need no other soap on your soap-supply shelf.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

Janice Meredith the current attraction at the Breed theater has so much beauty and romance in it, and so much glory and amazing land-that-never-was charm in it, that even a hardened reviewer is overcome by the sheer magnificence of this picture.

No one who, secretly, would like to take a trip to the moon, or who, much more to the point, would like to have the Revolutionary war done over again for his own delectation—the war being just a multicolored background for a heart-stirring love affair between the most beautiful girl in the world and a man whom she, at least, didn't think was the homliest of his gender—can afford not to see Janice Meredith, and Marion Davies, who is the astonishingly beautiful star of it.

Miss Davies, who has been recognized as one of the reigning beauties of the world since she first swam into public ken, is as irresistible in her acting as she always has been in her charm. Mr. Floyd might be the beau ideal of any girl. Holbrook Blinn might be the special scented villain of any one for all time.

Bennie Leonard in the third bout of Flying Fists, Hope Hampton in McCall's Color Fashion news, a cartoon and the Fox news make up the remainder of the bill. Two shows daily at 2.15 and 7.30 p. m.

Broadway Theater

The last half of this week will again see the excellent program of B. F. Keith vaudeville and pictures at the Broadway theater.

The vaudeville program will be as follows.

The popular musical comedy star Carl McCullough in Bright Bits of Travesty.

Hashi and Osei in their original contest.

Carl Drury and Olive Lane in Jack the Hugger.

Lew Ross and Co. consisting of seven people in a comedy variety offering.

The Oxford Four, animated youth in Music and Rhythm.

The Reckless Age, film version of Earl Derr Biggers Saturday Evening Post story, Love Insurance, and Reginald Denny's latest starring vehicle, comes tomorrow to the Broadway theater.

A lively story of comic complications surrounding the attempt of an insurance agent to protect the policy of a client who has taken a policy against failure to wed a rich fiancee, it is a rapid-fire series of alternate thrills and laughs.

A sensational fight, staged in Denny's best style, a chase in a speeding auto that adds further thrills, and a daring kidnaping are interspersed among hilarious difficulties resulting from a threatened breach of promise suit, a bogus claimant to a title and the faked theft of a nobleman's ancestral pearls.

Ruth Dwyer is seen as the heiress in question, and Denny plays the guardian angel from the insurance company—until he falls in love with her. Others in the cast are Hayden Stevenson, William Austin, May Wallace and John Steppling.

Strand Theater

The hitherto paradoxica figure of speech "clothed in nudity," actually is made real by Nazimova in her newest photoplay, a film version of Oscar Wilde's Salome, which is one of the feature offerings at the Strand today and Thursday. In the famed Dance of the Seven Veils this great Russian star has contrived to portray the daughter of Herodias as she slips out of the last and seventh veil without giving any basis for censorship.

Nothing like Salome has ever been projected before on any screen. As a work of art it stands apart, defying criticism and eluding classification. It is something different and something that must be seen.

One the same program Big Boy Williams in a different kind of a western feature The Eagle's Claw will also be shown. Williams, while perhaps the latest of the young screen stars of this type, is fast becoming a sensation for fearless and daredevil deeds on the screen. In the Eagle's Claw his latest effort he is seen in many exciting situations and many thrilling moments happen during the action of the picture. A Husband Wanted, a comedy and the Cross Word Puzzles will be the short features on the program at the Strand today and Thursday. Several local amateurs have already entered for the tryout night at the Strand Friday and with the vaudeville tryout acts as the added attraction Friday night this popular theater will no doubt be taxed to capacity.

Palace Theater

Anna Q. Nilsson has five leading men, including several stars, in one scene of Ines From Hollywood, the First National picture to be shown at the Palace theater next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Antonio Moreno, Wallace Beery, Lloyd Hughes, Ben Lyon and Ford Sterling all appear in one sequence, having luncheon in her studio dressing room. It affords an intimate glimpse of studio life, and goes a long way to prove that one can not judge motion picture people by the personalities which they register on the screen.

Lewis Stone is co-featured with Anna Q. in this production, and although he does not appear with the above mentioned stars in the "vampire's" dressing room, his role supplies one of the finest dramatic characterizations of his eminent career.

Miss Nilsson plays in this picture the part of a woman who has won notoriety as a home-wrecking "vamp," but who, as soon as her work is done, throws off her mask of meretricious appeal and becomes a very human and likeable young woman.

The picture was directed by Alfred E. Green, and has in the supporting cast Mary Astor, Laurence Wheat, Rose Dione, Snitz Edwards, Ray Hallor, E. H. Calvert and Harry Depp.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

A loss of approximately $30 in change from a burglary at the Blumenthal store, formerly owned by N. A. Jordan, in the town hall building, was reported to the police Tuesday morning.

Entrance to the store was gained by breaking out a glass in a door in the north side of the building, this being the rear entrance to the store, and slipping the bolt. The break evidently was the work of someone familiar with the layout of the building and the store selected for robbing.

The break was not discovered until the store was opened Tuesday morning. A draft coming from the rear of the store attracted attention and investigation showed the door in the rear to be open.

There was no apparent effort upon the part of the burglar, or burglars, to molest the stock. This is the second break to be made in Danielson within a few days, the M. Goldwater store in the Davis block having been burglarized a little more than two weeks ago. An unsuccessful attempt also was made to break into the store of the Shumway Clothing company on the same night the Goldwater store suffered a loss.

It is probable that the break reported from the Blumenthal store on Tuesday morning was the work of some one resident here or hereabouts.

Stockholders here of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company found satisfaction in study on Tuesday of the annual report of the stockholders, as of December 31, 1924. Outstanding in this report is the statement that the profits and surplus of the great corporation for the year 1924 was 12,161,940.33, or approximately twice the assessed value of all the property in the town of Killingly—lock, stock and barrel.

With the surplus at the end of 1923 added in the corporation had a surplus on December 31 last of $25,798,576.51.

Here is the answer to the croakers that could see nothing but gloom ahead after the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company suffered severe financial reverses in the nation-wide collapse of big business in 1920. The corporation, after tremendous financing difficulties has come back with a rush. The Goodyear mills here are working on a full time schedule and some departments have been running nights for many months. Hence Killingly shares in the general prosperity of the company.

Quoting from the report to the stockholders one finds that: "The annual increase in dollar sales has been gained in the face of substantial price reductions each year, and the accompanying improvement in earnings clearly reflects a considerably better operating and selling efficiency for the Goodyear organization as a whole. We have continued to produce and sell products of the highest quality and in return have enjoyed a public acceptance of Goodyear products that is by far the greatest in the company's history."

"Our dollar sales have been exceeded in the past, but only due to the high selling prices of the war period and in the post-war years. More rain came Tuesday to contribute to the upbuilding of the water reserves hereabouts. PUTNAM

The people of this community, especially the members of the local chapter of the D. A. R. are highly gratified over the fact that the state has taken over the sight of the Wolf Den in Pomfret and make it a part of the forestry and park lands. Twenty years ago Elizabeth Porter Chapter, of Putnam, purchased a tract of 90 acres which included the cavern made famous by the exploit of General Israel Putnam. The purchase price was $1,900. During the time that the land was held by the chapter considerable money was spent in clearing the tract, in making an accessible roadway to it and in erecting a bronze tablet recording the prowess of General Putnam.

To keep it clear of underbrush and maintain the driveway with the other necessary expenses was a heavy drain on the finances of the chapter and it was decided to offer the site to the state for the amount originally paid, $1,900. Mrs. Edgar M. Warner and Mrs. S. M. Wheelock were empowered to treat with the forestry and park commission and the negotiations finally ended in the state becoming the owner.

It is one of the historic spots of New England, and from coast to coast the city of Putnam is associated with the fact that the Wolf Den is in its neighborhood. Since the advent of the automobile tourists, citizens have begun to realize the extent to which it is known. A large proportion of summer travelers who pass through here in their cars inquire about and visit the den. This is especially true of those who live in other states. The location is not easy of access and the park commissioner would do a good thing in clearing the roadway, keeping it in good condition and in erecting signs to direct travelers.

After a strenuous two months' tenure of office, Howard Bullard has resigned as dog warden. There have been complaints that he was entirely too zealous in performing his duties, that he has gone onto verandas of houses where the family dog was enjoying a siesta without a leash and carried it away to the pound. One irate owner, a woman, is said to have recovered her dog, when captured under such circumstances, by using a kitchen broom on the official. In another instance a well known citizen was informed by telephone that the warden was on his way out Grove street leading a dog belonging to him. Stepping into his car the owner soon overtook the official, jumped out of the car, picked up the dog, deposited it on the back seat, and drove back home. And not a word was exchanged!

The call has been issued for the annual city meeting to be held at the Municipal building, Monday, March 2. The city council has recommended appropriations of $51 700, which is a decrease of $1,400 since last year. They have also recommended the same tax rate as last year, nine and one-half mills on the dollar for general expenses and one and one-half mills for sewer purposes. There is some question as to whether this rate will raise the desired amount or not as there will be probably a material cut in the grand list. The amount returned by the assessors was slightly in excess of the valuations of a year ago but the board of relief has been faced with requests for some heavy reductions. One textile concern claims that machinery to the amount of $80,000 was sold and shipped from here since the appraisal of 1924, but that there has been no reduction in the amount returned for taxation purposes. Friday, Feb. 20, is the last date on which claims for readjustment can be filed with the board of relief.

His mother was notified Monday and she left for Brooklyn that afternoon and was with him during his short illness.

Rev. Gallup has had 12 years' experience as a minister and it is his second year at Connecticut college. His letter follows: "To the Officers and Members, Second Congregational Church, Inc., Stonington, Conn.:

"The result of the church meeting held last Monday evening has been communicated to me, and I am sure you expect me to respond as soon as possible. There have been several considerations in my mind in relation to this work, among which two have been outstanding. First, will it be best for the church to have such leadership as I, from a distance, and with another task that must always claim first obligations, could offer? Second, shall I be able to give the service the people of the church will expect?

"I have sought advice from many sources as to both of these matters. I trust that my ideas on the second matter have already been communicated to you. But I feel we should all be quite clear about the matter as a whole. If I should accept this work it would be with the understanding that the arrangement could be severed at any time, by mutual agreement should it seem that another leadership seemed wiser, or that the burden had become too great for me.

"After a great deal of thought and counsel and prayer on the matter, and with these considerations in mind, I have decided to accept the invitation of this church to be its minister for the rest of the year. I pledge you my best, in preaching, in participation in your various organizations so far as possible, in the Sunday school and in sharing of your personal lives, especially in times of trouble and need, as I may have time and strength for.

"It is my earnest hope and prayer that this decision will prove wise, for you and for me. Together we must consecrate ourselves to a vigorous year of Christian fellowship. I shall begin at once to acquaint myself with the work here, and wish to begin my full duties on March 1st.

"Faithfully yours,

"WALLACE S. GALLUP."

ANOTHER ARMS CONFERENCE.

One armament conference has been held that made an excellent record for accomplishments. Others have been suggested and others will some day be held, but it is evident that something more than the desire on the part of one nation to issue a call is necessary before any is likely to be held, or before anything bids fair to be accomplished should one actually take place.

There was talk of another one being called by this government when the Geneva protocol was signed carrying provision for a conference on the limitation of arms. That naturally ended whatever efforts had been put forth in this country. There would be no ground for entering into competition regarding the place where a conference would be held for meeting a common object. Inasmuch as the countries of Europe desired to make a try in that direction it was evident that they should be allowed to do so.

With the change of mind which is responsible for the report that the Geneva protocol will be changed so that conference provision will be eliminated it leaves this country free to go ahead if it so desires. But what is to be inferred from the sentiment which backs this proposed revision? Does it mean that the nations of Europe have come to realize that they are not ready for such a move, or does it mean that they are desirous of having it held on this side of the water?

There are good reasons for believing that President Coolidge will make no move looking toward an arms limitation conference until he is fully convinced that the other nations are ready to take some action. Such conferences are held for the purpose of getting action, not for the sake of meeting and adjourning without doing anything.

It has been said with a full understanding of the situation, that Europe is not ready for any move in the direction of reduced land armaments. There are several things to support such a belief, including the decision to abandon the plan to hold one of their own. Such conferences cannot be called hit or miss and expect to get desired results.

PICKING ALASKA'S GOVERNOR.

One of the interesting instances of the office seeking the man is revealed in the naming of Engineer George Parks of the department of the interior to be governor of Alaska. Engineer Parks wasn't even a candidate. He hadn't thought of such a thing and when news of his nomination reached him he surprised that he should have been chosen for such a post and did that unheard of thing among those who would seek such an appointment of questioning his own ability to handle the job.

Parks has spent nearly a score of years in the territory for which he has been named as governor. He has made an excellent record as an engineer and moved up the line whenever opportunity presented because of the manner which he attended to business and the excellent demonstration which he gave of rendering service to his government. He wasn't looking for opportunities to get something for nothing, to get all the political plums that were possible, but to do his work faithfully and to the best of his ability.

There may be instances when such individuals fail to get proper recognition. Such wasn't the case in this instance. It was before of this record and the manner in which he had administered small things that he was called upon to assume greater responsibilities. Had he been disposed to dodge his duties, shift responsibilities to others or to shirk it is quite evident that he would never have made the impression upon President Coolidge that would have brought his appointment.

Parks has proved by his services up to now that he is the type of a man the presidents wants to succeed Governor Bone, who seeks release from the governorship of Alaska. He has been picked because of his qualifications, and while the decision may have come as a surprise to others as well as Parks it is a nomination that cannot fail to create the right kind of an impression. It jibes with the president's demand for sound men who can be relied upon to carry out his policies.

GASOLINE TAXES.

In more and more states interest is being awakened in behalf of a gasoline tax. There is a growing recognition not only of the importance of good roads but of the fact that those for whom they are constructed and those who use them should be directly concerned in providing for their upkeep.

There is opposition to the gas tax on the ground that the automobile owners are taxed enough already. That they are obliged to stand a number of taxes is no secret, but it doesn't ensue that the fellow who has no automobile should be made to bear the same burden of taxation for modern roads and their maintenance that those who use the expensive roads and for whom they are constructed do.

When there is a gasoline tax levied, the proceeds from which go into the general treasury of the state, there is good reason for an outcry against it under the claim that it is class taxation, but when the proceeds of such a tax are devoted to highway maintenance, or a direct benefit to those who pay it, there is merit to it. It is in fact only what it should be. The big objection to taxation is that so much is exacted for the small amount of benefit that is obtained in return. With the whole gas tax turned to the advantage of those who pay it, whether they happen to be residents of the state or not, there is no ground left for opposing it.

The excellent results obtained in the states where gas taxes are devoted to bettering the highways should be sufficient reason for getting favorable consideration in those states which are not now getting the benefit of such a method of meeting highway maintenance expense.

It is a tax that falls upon those who operate motor vehicles upon the highways, and the amount of the tax varies according to the use that is made of the roads. It is a pay as you go arrangement that provides a general distribution without imposing any burdens.

COSTLY EXPERIENCE.

Happily there was no loss of life but there was a loss of property at Kansas City, in its two million dollar fire which wiped out its practically new exhibition pavilion, which directs increased attention to the manner in which preventive measures are ignored and the results which are bound to accompany such carelessness.

Kansas City had been having a big automobile show and 375 cars were destroyed in addition to the building. At such a time it is to be expected that there will be an adequate amount of lighting, the more or less elaborate scheme of decoration and the presence of many people. Fortunately the crowd had gone, but indications point to the fact that the fire was entirely needless when it is declared that the fire was due to defective wiring which ignited the flimsy decorations and before the blaze could be checked it had made a wreck of the building and its contents.

Measures that are adopted for the prevention of just such fires amount to nothing unless they are enforced. Defective wiring, if that was the actual cause, is a poor excuse. Not only should there have been care taken to prevent anything of the kind on the part of those responsible for the installation, but it should have been subjected to inspection so that discovery of the dangerous condition should have been made before any trouble developed.

The explosions that occurred during the fire were attributed to the gasoline in the tanks of the cars on exhibition, and yet such tanks were supposed to have been drained in keeping with the regulations.

The whole affair reveals gross if not criminal negligence. Instead of aiding in the prevention of fires encouragement was given to just what developed. Kansas City has had a costly experience and it remains to be seen whether it will produce any effective results in the way of better fire prevention in the future.

THE ATLANTA DISCLOSURES.

Some time ago there was evidence furnished which indicated that there was needed a thorough housecleaning at the Atlanta federal prison. Attorney General Stone hasn't been doing a lot of talking about it but he has been taking some very pointed action. He has preferred to do the trying in the courts instead of through publicity channels and from the disclosures that are being made as the result of the hearings in the district court he is not only determined to bring the whole situation to light but to apply punishment where it is needed and where it has openly invited.

When it gets so that the authorities in such an institution are so unmindful of their responsibilities that they are ready and willing to take money for assigning this one or that one to easy jobs it is time it was known and the practice corrected. The court action has no indication of being a whitewashing operation. It is intent upon applying the needed punishment to those who are deserving of it, and in view of the practices which are being revealed, whereby those with money found the prison to be not much different than a club room, it is to be expected that following conviction that there will be meted out such punishment as the acts call for. Because of the very offices which they held there can be no sympathy for those involved.

HELPFUL HANDS

"I like 'em lazy," said the grim lady, biting off a thread. "When they come home from the office I prefer to have them flot down in a chair and yell for slippers, matches, the last magazine and refuse to answer the door bell when it rings. I don't want any husband a helpful soul around the house.

"When they get that complex a perfectly honest person might say that they are total losses. I know that there are wives who feel it their duty to trot around after the destroyer and murmur admiringly how clever Herbert is, isn't he, and how thankful they are to have a husband who is handy and can do things when they are needed around the house. But that kind of husband is a nuisance, I speak from sad experience. For instance, here was our bedroom furniture.

"Billings got the inspiration when he found that the set I was admiring in a downtown window tipped the financial scales at $11,50. When he recovered consciousness after the shock he sent home special messengers bearing cans of enamel and paint brushes and a letter begging me not to order the set or anything like that because he was going to make me one almost like it from what was now the guestroom. We were getting along and anything we could do to save a wad of money was to be commended, and had I paused to think that we should have to enlarge the house to encircle a bedroom set of eleven pieces like the one I craved?

"It is unbelieveable that painting a bedroom set in the basement should send out waves of disorder sufficient to reach to the attic, but such was the case. Billings would labor a bit with the paint brush and then come upstairs to ask me if I knew how to get paint off a $3 necktie, absentmindedly carrying a dripping brush up with him. He laid that brush down successively upon my Italian dresser scarf, the chair I afterward sat down in with my best dress on at the time, on top of the sleeping and defenseless cat, and in the midst of a set of napkins that I had just hemmed.

"There was paint spattered all over that basement. There were nine quart mason jars, a dozen pits and five tin coffee cans sitting around tenderly sheltering paint brushes in various stages of wet, very wet and dripping Whenever I touched a bottle Billings would yell feverishly to stop, that it was full of turpentine or paint remover.

"And he was constantly needing rags. He wanted rags to wipe furniture, to wipe up paint, to spread around to keep paint off and to shelter the paint that was on.

"But in spite of this he got paint on eight good shirts, three collars, two of his best business suits, his shoes and every hair on his head, and he ate dinners in five minutes, bolting to the basement in deep abstraction just when the rest of us had reached the salad stage.

He was a total loss as a household pet. Dreadful things happened to the paint, too. Either the first coat would sink in or the second one wouldn't, and when he tried to rub them down he rubbed them off, because in his enthusiasm he would not wait for them to dry.

"There was a constant atmosphere of excitemente, nervousness and unhappy expectation around our home and none of us could settle down to peace and quiet. Billings certainly developed a nervous temperament, as befits an artist. Touchy was the word, my soul! I certainly don't think enough praise and bouquets have been laid at the shrine of Mrs. Michelangelo and her sisters in misery!

"After he had attempted to stencil some charming flower designs on the things Billings just went sort of Berserker and called up a charity organization telling them to come around early, 6 A. M., if possible, to collect quite a lot of furniture. However, I felt that he is cured of being a household help for some time to come!"

"I guess, after all, I won't let George build that birdhouse," mused the entranced listener. "He might decide to take off the roof of our house to get the lumber."—Exchange.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Buster Bear Asleep

Acquaintance often makes it clear
Just what a bugaboo is fear.
—Jumper the Hare.

Of course Jumper the Hare just had to stay in Buster Bear's bedroom for some time. He didn't dare go out. In the first place, he had got to rest. Then, too, he didn't know where Old Man Coyote was. Old Man Coyote might be waiting for him to come out.

At first Jumper's heart went pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat at the mere thought of being so close to great big Buster

Oh, Peter! cried Jumper. "Where do you think I've been?"

Bear. It was rather frightening to one so timid as Jumper the Hare. For that matter, it would have been rather frightening to almost any one. But little by little Jumper's heart stopped its thumping. After awhile he was no longer afraid. You see, Buster Bear hadn't moved. He was sound asleep in that strange, deep sleep such as only he and Johnny Chuck and a few others ever know—the sleep that lasts all winter.

At first Jumper crouched as far from Buster Bear as he could. But as his fear grew less his curiosity grew greater. He didn't know of any one who had ever seen Buster Bear in his winter sleep. It would be something to boast about. So after awhile Jumper stole a little nearer. Then he went nearer still. Buster Bear didn't move. He was as still as if he were dead. He was lying on a comfortable bed of small branches and leaves which he had taken in there in the fall. To Jumper he didn't seem to be breathing. Of course he was, but he was breathing very, very slowly.

Accidentally Jumper touched one of Buster's big brown paws. You should have seen him jump. Of course I mean Jumper. He was frightened half to death. But Buster Bear didn't move. It was quite clear that he didn't know he had been touched. After a bit Jumper crept back. He touched that big brown paw again, only this time he did it purposely. Still Buster didn't move. After that Jumper lost all fear. He gradually began to understand that he couldn't waken Buster if he tried.

Such a queer feeling as Jumper the Hare had. Here was the biggest, strongest of all the people of the Green Forest, the one most respected, the one out of whose way everybody kept, and he, the most timid of all the people of the Green Forest, had nothing to fear. It certainly was a queer feeling. It was hard to believe that Buster Bear was alive. In fact, after awhile Jumper began to wonder if Buster was alive. He couldn't have been more quiet had he been dead.

Jumper spent the rest of that night in Buster Bear's bedroom. When he went ou the next morning he was thoroughly rested and he was brimming over with excitement. He just ached to tell his friends how he had spent the night with Buster Bear. He knew they wouldn't believe it. Of course not. But just the same he was so excited that he simply must tell some one. And so he hurried to the Green Forest looking for some one to whom he could tell the wonderful news. As luck would have it, the first person he met was Peter Rabbit.

"Oh, Peter!" cried Jumper. "Where do you think I've been? Where do you think I've spent the night?"

"I haven't the least idea," replied Peter.

"In Buster Bears bedroom!" cried that?"

"I simply don't believe it," replied Peter frankly.

Replogle's Hopes Swept Away by a Flood

Happy and successful in his studies, J. Leonard Replogle looked forward to the time when he would go to college, but a catastrophe swept his home and his hopes to destruction.

Seventh of 12 children of a minister who struggled along on a salary of $50 a month in New Enterprise, Pa. the lad entered public school and at nine was taken to Johnson by his parents. Diligent in his studies and starting each morning at 4 o'clock on a newspaper route, he saved much of his salary of 60 cents a week and dreamed of acquiring a higher education.

Then came the Johnstown flood, which carried the Replogle home and family two miles downstream. Leonard's aunt and cousin were killed in the house and the boy and his family sought refuge in a school building where they were found 17 hours later.

The family finances now acute, the boy, at 12, started as office and messenger boy for the Cambria Steel Company at $5 a month. Gradually he climbed to better positions during the next 20 years. His invention for making bolts helped him to land the order for 4000 tons of bolts for the Hudson tubes at New York. His new process for making steel axles for railway car wheels was successful, and he thought of becoming an inventor, but preferred salesmanship.

Made vice-president at 38, he set new records for the company. At 39 he was made vice president of the American Vanadium company. A year later he organized a syndicate to control the Cambria Steel Company and effected its sale to the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company.

Two years later he became president of the American Vanadium Company, and during the war was director of steel supply for the War Industries Board. Later he added the Wharton Steel Company of New Jersey to his many holdings.

And at 48 Replogle is rich and is actively preparing to do even bigger things.

An Uninvited Passenger

"Look in the rear seat of your automobile before you step in," is the advice given by a traveling salesman. An uninvited passenger bobbed up in the rear seat of his car while he was driving home one evening recently.

Arthur steered his car to the side of the road and stopped. After he got out of the car he invited the stranger to get out. He did and Arthur drove on without inquiring who he was or why he had chosen that car to ride in.

CREAMY

To ALL its other virtues as a cooking fat, Snowdrift adds another virtue—convenience.

It is always creamy.

Snowdrift never gets too hard or too soft, no matter what the weather. It is always just the right creamy consistency that you find quickest and easiest to use.

You may have tried shortening that got hard as a candle in cold weather or in the ice-box, and then much too soft in warm weather.

Snowdrift stays stiff enough in warm temperature and soft enough in cold, so that it is always convenient to use.

POETRY

THE LAST BUCCANEER.

The winds were yelling, the waves were swelling,
The sky was black and drear,
When the crew with eyes of flame brought the ship without a name
Alongside the last Buccaneer.

"Whence flies your sloop full sail before so fierce a gale,
When all others drive bare on the seas?
Say, come ye from the shores of the holy Salvador,
Or the gulf of the rich Caribbees?"

"From a shore no search hath found from a gulf no line can sound,
Without rudder or needle we steer;
Above, below our bark dies the sea-fow and the shark,
As we fly by the last Buccaneer.

"Tonight there shall be heard on the rocks of Cape de Verde
A loud crash and a louder roar;
And tomorrow shall the deep with a heavy moaning sweep
The corpses and wreck to the shore."

The stately ship of Clyde securely now may ride
In the breath of the citron shades;
And Severn's towering mast securely now flies fast,
Through the seas of the balmy Trades

From St. Jago's wealthy port, from Havana's royal fort,
The seaman sees forth without fear;
For since that at my night not a morta. hath had sight
Of the flag of the last Buccaneer.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c

Mothers who have precious little lives in their keeping realize the danger to delicate stomachs of so much medicine.

That is why so many millions of mothers now depend entirely upon Vicks for croup and children's colds.

There is nothing to swallow — you just rub Vicks over throat and chest at bedtime and cover with a warm flannel, leaving the bedclothes loose about the neck so that the arising vapors may be freely inhaled. The child is usually better next morning.

Vicks can be used freely and often with perfect safety, even on the youngest member of the family.

NORWICH TOWN

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith of Elm avenue, Tuesday afternoon from four to six a company of children was pleasantly entertained in observance of the eighth birthday of their little daughter, Florence. Those present were John Lucas, Richard Quinn, Leonard Woodworth, Sandy Abbott, Russell Edmonds, Edward Jordan, Evelyn Burdick, Dolly Edmonds, Charlotte La Pierre, Mary Ellen Mero, Helen Moran, Betty Spear, Dorothy Hislop, Peggy Mara, Flora Kinney, Barbara Binns, Janet and Thomas Giord, Norine and Paul Doyle, Ruth Bliven and Virginia Chapman.

The children played indoor games. In pinning the tail on the donkey, the prize went to Helen Moran, Janet Giord winning the prize in the peanut hunt. During the afternoon Mrs. Richard Quinn entertained with several selections on the piano, also gave a number of songs, playing her own accompaniments. The color scheme was red and white. This was effectively carried out in the dining room where the table laden with good things was decorated with candles and valentine favors. The birthday cake with eight candles was the special feature. Mrs. Smith was assisted by her mother, Mrs. E. Freeman, Mrs. C. A. Spear and Mrs. George Gifford in serving sandwiches, cake, ice cream and punch.

Little Miss Smith received many beautiful gifts.

Kimball, of Washington street, who left a few weeks ago on a business and pleasure trip to England and Ireland, have learned that they are homeward bound having cut their journey short by several weeks, as they were not expected to return until the latter part of March. BURGLAR LOOTS CASH REGISTERS AT THAYER BUILDING STORE

Six or seven cash registers in the store of the Tanney corporation in the Thayer building were looted some time between 6.30 and 9 o'clock Tuesday evening and from $3 to $9 secured by a burglar or burglars who got into the store through a window at the rear. The evidence seems to indicate that it was the work of boys.

The burglary was discovered by Abe Tannenbaum, one of the firm, when he returned to the store about 9 o'clock, having locked up the place a little after 6. He noticed a sweater which had been on one of the counters was on the floor near one of the cash registers and that the cash register was open. Going to the six or seven other cash registers about the store he found each one had been opened and money taken. As only a small amount of money is left each night at the store it is believed the burglary netted less than $10.

Mr. Tannenbaum notified Captain Thomas Murphy at police headquarters and officers were sent to the store to make an investigation. It was found that a window at the rear that opens into the office had been pried up a short distance, making a space about wide enough for a boy to squeeze through. The police made a search for what had been used to pry up the window but nothing could be found, and the investigation was continued actively through the night in an effort to locate anyone who might be under suspicion of knowing about the break.

ILLEGAL OPERATION IS CAUSE OF GIRL'S DEATH

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 17.—Septic poisoning, following a criminal operation, is the cause of the death of Dolly Wench, 21, of 102 Baltimore avenue, Hartford, Conn., today, while visiting at the residence of her fiance, John Woods, of 23 Ocean avenue, a well known athlete and an employe of the S. N. Ellis company. The determination of the cause of Miss Wench's death resulted from an autopsy at an inquest conducted late this afternoon and tonight by Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman. Where the operation was performed that resulted in the sudden death of Miss Wench could not be determined, but it is the opinion of Medical Examiner Kaufman that the operation was performed in Hartford or the immediate vicinity. The finding of Medical Examiner Kaufman was forwarded to Coroner Jeremiah J. Desmond at Norwich, tonight, and that official will take up the matter of endeavoring to determine who was responsible for the girl's death with the Hartford police tomorrow morning.

John Woods was questioned at great length tonight by Medical Examiner Kaufman. Woods declared that he had no knowledge whatsoever of the condition of Miss Wench and he was as much surprised at her death as was the girl's mother who arrived in New London this afternoon, following receipt of the news of her daughter's death this morning. Woods stated in a two-hour interview with Medical Examiner Kaufman that the girl came to New London to convalesce from a form of stomach trouble, so far as he had any knowledge of the matter. Woods stated that the girl was subject to stomach attacks and had been to his home on a previous occasion to recuperate.

Mrs. Wench, the girl's mother, was shocked beyond expression upon the revelation being made as to the cause of the daughter's death. Mrs. Wench stated that her daughter was out but seldom in the evening and was almost always accompanied by her friends. Miss Wench had been employed as telephone operator at the Southern New England Telephone Exchange at Hartford and had always borne an exceptionally good reputation.

Miss Wench came to New London last Saturday and was apparently in the best of health, intending to visit a married sister residing in Boston upon the termination of her stay in New London. Miss Wench retired about 11 o'clock Monday night and was not complaining of illness. She awakened early this morning, suffering abdominal pains which gradually became worse and with hemorrhages resulting, a physician was summoned. With the arrival of the physician and less than 15 minutes after the girl had been prescribed for, she expired, while treatment was being administered.

The feature attraction of the evening was a sketch entitled, Wild Nell, the Pet of the Plains, or Her Final Sacrifice, being given under the auspices of the Pullem Film Co. FOUND NOT GUILTY OF DRIVING UNDER INFLUENCE

The case against Stewart Long, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor was continued until Saturday morning when it came up in the city court on Tuesday morning. Long, it is charged, took a machine from the Majestic garage without permission about 1.30 o'clock Monday morning, the machine being owned by Jesse James. While driving up Broadway the machine was damaged when it hit a stone post. It is said Long did not have a driver's license. The local police investigated the matter and as a result Long was arrested Monday night on a warrant charging operation of a car while under the influence of liquor. Long obtained bonds of $300 Tuesday.

Arthur B. Jopson of this city was given a suspended jail sentence of six months. He was charged with embezzlement of $66.69 from the L. A. Gallup Co., while acting as a salesman and collector.

Thomas Newman, 51, of Franklin, a member of the school board and a justice of the peace of that town, was discharged by the court on a charge of operating a machine while under the influence of liquor. He was arrested on the West Side several days ago. He parked his machine on a "no parking side" of the street and went across the street. Then he drove the car a little further down the street and again parked it. When he came back for his machine he got into the wrong car, one similar to his own, and was about to start it when Officer Thomas Dunlon questioned him. He claimed the car was his and was then escorted to his own machine by the officer who had been watching him. He was then arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence. Newman testified to having had several glasses of cider during the day. Two physicians who examined Newman as to his condition, testified that they could not see that he was under the influence of liquor or drugs.

JURY DISAGREES IN AVERAGE PARENT TRIAL

After deliberating for a full half hour the jury in the case of Youth vs. Mr. Average Parent in the Court of Public Opinion at the Elizabeth street school house Tuesday evening, failed to reach a verdict and were discharged by the court. The jury, of which Rev. Edward C. Dunbar was foreman, stood seven to three for a verdict of guilty. The trial of Mr. Average Parent was the feature number on the entertainment programme given by The West End Community Association. The attendance was unusually large as news of Mr. Average Parent's predicament had spread far and wide, and when court was opened about 8 o'clock practically every seat in the school hall was occupied.

The programme opened at 7.45 o'clock with concert numbers by the recently organized West End Community orchestra which made a splendid showing under the leadership of their leader, Mr. Otis. About 8 o'clock the mock trial was started, the principals in the cast being as follows:

Judge of the Court, Hon. Allyn L. Brown, judge of the superior court; prosecution, Judge John T. Barry of Jewett City; attorney for the defense Judge Arthur F. Libby of the local city court; the defendant, Mr. Average Parent, Paul A. Brown; court clerk, John T. Walker, assistant clerk of the superior court for New London county; court officer, Sheriff George H. Stanton; witnesses, Heza Sheik, Albert Leffingwell; Ima Liberal, Miss Madeline Thune; Miss Bee Have, Miss Margaret Sullivan; Miss Treat Ded, Miss Marion Royce; Miss Spenda Lott, Miss Phyllis Brown; Abe Used, Donald Royce; Sonny Day, Robert Billings.

The court was opened by Sheriff Stanton and Judge Brown was informed by the prosecutor that there was one case on the docket, to wit, Youth vs. Mr. Average Parent. The following jury to hear the case was chosen, the names being called by the court clerk; Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, foreman; Max Brokowski, Sam Safenovitz, Ruth Mullen, Rose Mary Hourigan, C. E. Carpenter, N. E. Perry, Miss L. Kasselman, Herman Pukallus, and Fillmore Sage. After the jury had been "sworn" by the clerk, the "charge" against the accused was read by the prosecutor.

Ima Liberal was the first witness called. Are you related to the defendant, asked the prosecutor.

Answer—Yes.

Q.—You charge the defendant with being narrow minded?

A.—Yes.

Prosecutor—Tell the court about it in your own words.

Witness stated that she was reading a book and that her father told her that she was too young to read such books.

Prosecutor—Do you think it was a proper book for you to read?

Witness—Yes, it is a classic.

Miss Treat Ded was next called.

Prosecutor—You charged your father with negligence?

Witness—Yes.

Witness then told of attending a party Christmas eve and of how her father nagged because she got home after midnight. He nagged because I didn't help mother around the house, he nagged at the way I dressed, the way I ate and he didn't like my friends.

Witness was then cross examined by counsel for the defense, Judge Libby.

Judge Libby—When your father scolds what do you do?

Witness—I answer him back.

Q.—Do you ever put your arms around your father's neck and tell him how much you love him?

A.—No, I am too old for that.

Next witness called was Heze Sheik who charged the defendant with being old fashioned. I like to be popular with the boys and girls, especially the girls, witness testified. My father talks so much he gets on my nerves. I know more of life than he ever did.

In answer to a question as to whether he ever sat down and talked things over with his father in a friendly way witness said, "No. He is too busy. We wouldn't want him around anyway."

Judge Libby, cross examining witness—Do you go to Sunday school?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know the ten commandments?

A.—No.

Q.—Your father is a respected citizen?

A.—Yes. He is a director of the bank.

Miss Spendalott charged her father with not giving her enough money to buy clothes. Her idea of a wardrobe included four pairs of shoes, about seven pairs of hose, six suits of underwear, two or three coats, and two or three new hats a season.

Prosecutor—Do you consider all that wardrobe necessary?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Why?

A.—Because all the other girls have them.

Judge Libby—How does your father get his money?

A.—He earns it.

Q.—How much does your father earn?

A.—I don't know.

Sonny Day testified as to his father's lack of appreciation. He said he cleaned up the cellar and did a good job, too, but his father never said anything to him about his good work.

Prosecutor—Did you ever tell your troubles to your father?

A.—I tried to once or twice but he only bawled me out.

Don't you know it is your duty to help around the house, Judge Libby, asked the witness.

Miss Bee Have charged her dad with being suspicious of everything she did. Dad always thinks I am doing something wrong, she testified.

Prosecutor—Do you ever do anything wrong?

A.—I try not to.

Judge Libby—You disobey your parents when you go auto riding at night?

A.—I always make it a point to keep my engagements.

Q.—Do you ever have any petting parties on those rides?

Witness—Just what is your idea of a petting party?

Judge Libby here appealed to the court and the court ruled that the witness must answer the questions and not ask questions of the counsel for the defense.

Next witness called was Abe Used. "He wants me to do all the work around the house," said Abe.

Prosecutor—Did you ever tell your father you wanted more time to yourself?

A.—Yes, but he called me ungrateful.

Q.—What do you expect to be when you grow up?

A.—A tramp. A tramp can do anything he wants to. He doesn't have to do girls' work. He can go out to the country and into the woods.

Judge Libby—Your father has been sick lately?

A.—Yes.

Q.—That is why you are doing a little extra work?

A.—Yes.

The accused then took the stand. He told of his early life on a farm in Vermont. He did many chores and walked three miles to school. His father died when he was 14 and he went to an uncle's farm where he received $10 a month. Later he went to work in a grocery store and at the present time he is a salesman for a wholesale grocery concern earning about $5,000 a year.

He denied that he was narrow minded, or that he nags at his children. Asked as to whether he is old fashioned he said "Yes or no." I am considered by my business associates to be up to date. According to Heza's idea I am old fashioned. He charges me with being old fashioned to excuse himself.

Prosecutor—Did you ever break any laws when you were young?

Defendant—No—Oh, yes, I went to a cock fight once.

The testimony being all in the arguments were made by Judge Barry and Judge Libby and then Judge Brown charged the ten true and faithful men and women who retired to the jury room. A half hour later they filed back into the court and after the roll had been called by Clerk Walker, Foreman Dunbar stated that the jury could not reach an agreement. The jury was discharged by Judge Brown, after which Sheriff Stanton declared that the Court of Public Opinion was adjourned without day.

During the evening Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins spoke briefly on the plans to raise a fund for a new dormitory at Connecticut College and spoke of two sacred concerts to be held next month for this purpose.

E. A. Harris, manager of the Boy Scout campaign now being carried on, spoke briefly of the campaign and made a plea for subscriptions towards the fund of $5,000. Scout Executive F. A. Benton also spoke relative to the Boy Scout movement and the local campaign.

The West side Boy Scout troop then gave a splendid demonstration of Scout craft, under the leadership of their scoutmaster, Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, and the evening came to a close with a selection by the community orchestra.

John D. McWilliams was in charge of the programme.

YANTIC CHURCH GIRLS PRESENT CLEVER PLAY

Under the auspices of the Girls' Friendly Society of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, a large comedy entitled Tommy's Wife, was presented Tuesday evening in the First Congregational chapel, Norwich Town, before a large and appreciative audience.

The cast was as follows: Thomas Pittman Carothers, a promising young portrait painter, as yet unknown to fame, Miss Lila Smith; Rose Carothers, his sister, Miss Rose Matassa; Dick Grannis, Carothers chum, in love with Rose, Miss Phyllis Irvine; Patty Campbell, a student at the Broadway Dramatic school, Miss Dorothy Harvey; Mrs. DeForrest Smith, a wealthy society woman, Miss Lois Manning; Sylvia, her daughter, "young and impressionable," Miss Marjorie Harvey; Pierre De Bouton, a French fencing master, Miss Marion Gibbs; Edith Bronson, a friend of Rose, interested in charities, Miss Olice Bishop.

The participants, each one especially adapted to the part assigned to them, displayed good amateur ability. Much of the success of the entertainment was due to the efforts of Mrs. Albert W. Johnson, chairman of the committee in charge, who carefully coached the young women at rehearsals. Mrs. Johnson was assisted on the committee by Mrs. Ellis Bentley, branch president of the Girls' Friendly society.

Preceding the performance and during intermission, music was furnished by Miss Marjory Merry, piano, and Miss Ruth Sterry, violin.

From the library, Mrs. C. Edward Carpenter dispensed delicious homemade candy, arranged in daintily trimmed boxes, also chocolate bars, etc. The young women who assisted her during intermission were the Misses Florence Congdon, Estella Kilroy, Allison MacArthur and Helen Schwenk. Each carried a black tray trimmed with red ribbon and hearts, and wore valentine aprons and caps.

The ushers were the Misses Mabel Erickson, Catherine Brown, Ida Maynard and Edna Hastedt, who also were attired in caps.

In presenting the play, the Girls' Friendly Society co-operated with the Young People's Christian Endeavor society of the First Congregational church, from which the proceeds are to be equally divided.

In arranging the stage settings prior to the performance, Miss Ida Beebe, chairman of the Congregational C. E. Society social committee was in charge, having the assistance of others in getting things in readiness.

DOCTOR GIVES TALK TO EMPLOYED BOYS' BROTHERHOOD

The employed boys brotherhood held their weekly meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday evening.

The meeting was called to order at 6.15 by President Albert Leffingwell, members, and during the supper a number of popular songs were sung. Supper was served to twenty-eight with Richard Oat acting as song leader. Mr. Smith officiated at the piano. Robert Otis assisted with the cornet, and Harry McGlone with the violin. Special numbers were also rendered by Harry McGlone, accompanied by Mr. Smith. As President Leffingwell had to be excused at this time, the meeting was turned over to Vice President Floyd Lambert, who immediately introduced Dr. Varney of the Backus hospital as the speaker of the evening. He gave the boys a splendid talk, and one that the members will remember for a long time. They immediately requested that Dr. Varney come back again at some future date which he consented to do. Following Dr. Varney's talk one of the members spoke of the fact that Fred Williams and Roland Harris were away at school and suggested that the club might send the Norwich Bulletin to them for three months. A collection was taken and enough money was secured to do as suggested. Thus these fellows will be able to keep in touch with happenings here at home, while they are away. The meeting adjourned at 7.30 p. m.

SENIORS SHOW ATHLETIC SUPREMACY IN BULKELEY INTER-CLASS FIELD MEET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 17.—Opening the indoor track season this afternoon at the Y. M. C. A., the Bulkeley interclass track meet attracted a capacity crowd and furnished thrills a-plenty as several unofficial records were discarded in favor of new marks reached this afternoon. After some keen interclass competition for the leadership and individual races, the seniors with a total number of 25 points won the meet with their score doubling the efforts of either the sophomores or the juniors, who were tied for second place, each with 13 points.

The meet was a success from every point of view, and a good deal of the fine showing of the various individuals entered in the meet is due to the coaching of Frank B. Hamlin, a member of the faculty. The success of the meet was also directly responsible through his diligent efforts.

Events from the short to the long runs and the events in the field were all hotly contested. There was an unusually keen rivalry manifested by all classes, to take away the athletic power of the seniors. But they were not dislodged from their position, even though it looked doubtful at the beginning. The balance of senior entries in all events proved to give them a good lead from which they were never headed.

Individual honors went to George Shefiott, who finished in first place in two events. He was also a member of the relay team which established unofficially a new record for a four-man team for the two-lap run. The entire senior team literally flew around the track in record time, but their performance was disqualified due to a misdemeanor which put their placing of first in this event into the waste basket. Edward Henkle also gave a good account of himself in the shorter runs, while a new record was established in the shot put by Joe Barry. Barry heaved the ball for 39 feet and 5 inches.

The judges were Thomas Cook, Ernest Falconer and Clarence E. Norris; referee, A. B. Dawson; starter, A. B. Dawson; timer, Rafferty; clerk of course, Joseph Watterson; announcer, Jeremiah Dillon; assistant, Robert Donohue. Below are the events compiled in a form which will be easy to follow:

The Summary.

Shot put—Won by Joe Barry, 39.5 feet; second, Paton, 36.5; third, Gentilella, 36.4.

Running high jump—Won by Decker, 5.2 feet; second, Paton and Stebbins tied with 5.1.

Standing broad jump—Won by Shefiott, 8 feet, 7 inches; second, Olsen, 8 feet, 3 1-2 inches; third, Sullivan, 7 feet, 10 inches.

Finals of 20 yard dash—Won by Shefiott; time, 3 seconds; second, Henkle; third, Parisi.

Finals of dash relay—Won by juniors; time 14 sec. 5.

Three lap dash—Won by Henkle; time 22 sec. 2-5; second, McGrath; third, Locke.

Six lap run—Won by Firmin; time 67 sec. and 3-5; second, Shovlin; third Palmer.

WILLS FILES FORMAL CHALLENGE TO DEMPSEY

New York, Feb. 17.—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, through his manager, Paddy Mullins, today filed a challenge for a match with Jack Dempsey with the state athletic commission today. Accompanying the challenge was a certified check for $2,500 in accordance with the commission's rules.

In presenting the challenge Mullins said that in the event Dempsey failed to accept within a period of six months Wills would claim the heavyweight title. The commission refused to act on the challenge today, deferring action until its meeting next week.

Frankie Carpenter of Freeport, L. I., was suspended until April 1st for participating in a match with Mike McTigue in Massachusetts last November. McTigue is in disfavor in this state and all who meet him anywhere but in New York state are blacklisted for six months.

A communication was received by the commission from the Panama boxing commission, thanking the New York board for extending an invitation to send a representative to the lightweight elimination tournament. The invitation was rejected owing to the lack of any material which would make an appreciable showing in the tournament.

Commissioner William H. Muldoon presented a new rule which would make it a foul for a wrestler to toss his opponent from the ring. Such offense will result in disqualification if the rule is adopted.

AGGIE TEAMS CLASH AT AMHERST TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, Feb. 17.—One of the best college basketball games of the season in New England will be staged at Amherst tomorrow night, when the rival fives of the Connecticut and Massachusetts Agricultural Colleges meet on the chalked court. Both institutions are represented by first class teams this year, and Massachusetts Aggies in particular has a team that to date looms up as the best in the history of the institution. The Connecticut team, with a record not quite so impressive as its Massachusetts rival, is nevertheless considered one of the best ever turned out at Storrs, and one that will give the Bay Staters plenty of opposition tomorrow night.

The Bay Staters will take the floor the favorites tomorrow night, both for their more impressive record to date, and the fact that the contest is being staged on the Mass. Aggie court. The latter in particular has always proved advantageous to the Amherst teams, for the narrow court and low ceiling has handicapped the play of teams used to larger and more open playing surfaces. The Storrs team will be greatly handicapped in playing on the M. A. C. court, and Coach Dole has tried in his practice sessions this week to make the Hawley armory court approximate the Mass. Aggie conditions. The width of the floor has been greatly cut down by placing a row of chairs on each side of the court, and ropes stretched across from the running track have made it impossible for the men to attempt any high shots.

Dole put his men through a stiff session of scrimmage yesterday, but in his final preparation today, nothing but light work was attempted, with much emphasis being placed on plays and formations.

PREDICTS CARDINALS WILL BE A REAL SURPRISE

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 17.—The St. Louis Cardinals this season "will be as great a surprise as were the men who made such a great finish in 1921 and who nearly won the pennant in 1922," Manager Branch Rickey said today. His team starts Friday for Stockton, California, on the spring training trip.

"Nobody picks us to finish anywhere high this year, I notice," Rickey said. "But we have far more strength than we are generally credited with having.

"I can say without being optimistic that our team certainly has pennant possibilities."

WANDERERS TO PLAY STAFFORD KACEYS FRIDAY

The Baltic Wanderers basketball team will play the fast Stafford Springs Kaceys Friday night on the Baltic gym surface. The visitors will bring down their regular lineup and the fans can be sure of a fast game as the Wanderers will play their regular line up with Ridgeway and Simoneau, forwards; Charron, center; Ralph Robertaille and Swanson or Coady, guards; Swanson, who is on the sick list, will try to be in the lineup.

In the preliminary game the Bantams will play the fast Jewett City five.

GIBBONS TO FIGHT DEMPSEY IN CALIFORNIA

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Eddie Kane manager of Tom Gibbons, said here today that he has accepted terms for a match with Jack Dempsey in California, either in May or June. It is reported the proposed match may be staged in the Rose bowl at Pasadena, which has a seating capacity of 53,000. Gibbons, he said, will start training for the match next month.

NORWICH BOY IS ELECTED CAPTAIN OF MASSACHUSETTS TECH VARSITY CREW

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 17.—William Harris Latham, of Norwich, Conn., has been elected captain of the varsity crew of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Latham replaces Dave Sutter of Detroit, captain-elect for the coming season, who was obliged to leave school because of illness.

Several crews in charge of Coach Haines are expected to take to the open water on the Charles river by the end of this week, for the first outdoor practice of the season.

William Harris Latham is the son of Prof. and Mrs Allen Latham of Scotland road and was graduated from Norwich Academy in 1921. He is now a member of the Junior class at Massachusetts Tech. During his freshman year at Tech he rowed in the freshman boat and even then attracted favorable attention from the coaches.

Last year he was shifted to the varsity boat early in the season and remained there during the entire rowing season. His position in the boat was No. 6 where he wielded an oar that caused favorable comment from the coaches. This year it is expected that he will row in the same position. He is extremely popular with his fellow members of the crew as well as with the entire student body as was shown when he was elected captain of the varsity crew when Captain-elect Sutter was forced to give up rowing owing to illness.

JUNIORS STILL UNDEFEATED IN STORRS CLASS LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, Feb. 17.—Placings in the interclass basketball league remain the same as a result of the games played last night in Hawley armory. The sophomores strengthened their grip on second place by downing the School of Agriculture, while the Seniors sent the Freshmen still deeper in the cellar by handing them another setback. The Juniors were not scheduled to play last night, but their record of four wins in as many starts has given them a large enough advantage to still retain their first position.

The Interclass league has now reached the halfway point in the number of games played, and as the situation shapes up at the present time as though the last lap would see a neck and neck race between the Juniors and Sophomores for first honors. The upperclassmen have a one-game lead at the present time, and if they can defeat the sophs when the two play again, they should finish on top of the head.

The Interclass standing:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Juniors	4	0	1.000
Sophomores	3	1	.750
Seniors	2	3	.500
School of Agri.	2	2	.500
Freshmen	0	4	.000

In the report of John H. Farrell, minor league secretary, it shows that Jack Clabby of Norwich, Conn., has signed for the season with the York, Pa. team in the New York-Pennsylvania league. The Allentown team took a winter tour of the south but Clabby returned to his home in Norwich.

SPORTING NOTES

Roy Corgan, who has been named manager of the Okmulgee team of the Western Association by Red Snapp, was an important factor in winning the pennant for the Drillers in 1924. He batted .341 and was regarded as peer of the infielders in the circuit.

Joe Mathes, manager and stockholder in the Des Moines Club of the Western League, has gone to the Booster city from his home in St. Louis to straighten out things with Lee Keyser for the 1925 season. He plans to be in Des Moines about two weeks. Joe has lined up a likely looking roster of players.

Al Mamaux, baseball's sweet singer, who at first balked at being sent to Minneapolis by the Yankees has changed his mind and will be with Mike Kelley in the spring. Al figured he was entitled to be a free agent under the ten-year rule of the majors, but Ed Barrow pointed out to him that he does not come under that classification.

President Seabough of the Western Association has announced the selection of six umpires for the 1925 season. They are, Mike Jacobs, Louisville, Ky.; George Barr Tulsa, Okla.; Jack Williamson, Muskogee, Okla.; Tom McQuillan, Pueblo Colo; Harry Lipe, Irving, Ill.; Dutch Myers, St. Joseph, Mo. The other selections will be announced within a few days, Seabough stated. Seabough said that the umpires would wear regular big league uniforms the coming season.

The owners of the Waco Texas Association franchise want to put an end to Walter Johnson's worries as to becoming a club owner. A wire was sent to the veteran pitcher last week asking him to consider the proposition of taking over the Waco franchise.

Frank Matthews has been appointed manager of the Mexia Texas Association club for this year. Matthews managed and won a pennant for the Coffeyville Club of the Southwestern League in 1923. Last year he managed an independent team at Pitcher, Okla. In addition to his managerial duties Matthews will play second base.

John (Buddy) Ryan, manager of the Sacramento Club of the Pacific Coast League, suffered a fractured skull, last week, when an automobile in he was riding turned over.

Purchase of Jimmy Higgins, a first baseman from Houston of the Texas League, has been announced by Fort Smith of the Western Association.

Loafing and fraternizing on the field by players in the Pacific Coast League is forbidden in a resolution adopted at the league meeting last week. The new ruling prohibits visiting of players of rival teams in front of the stands or bleachers or near the bench of either club, and also bans players from conversing with fans during a game. Players failing to conform with the ruling will be fined $25.

Larry Arnold owner of the Lincoln Club of the Western League, and Fred Clarke former manager of the Pittsburg Pirates, are interested in the purchase of a Pacific Coast League club, preferably Vernon. Arnold is at present in Los Angeles discussing terms.

Charles Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is to get the jump on his players in the matter of condition. He has ordered Doc Hart, trainer of the Dodgers, to report at Clearwater, Fla., immediately to give him two messages daily.

Three $30,000 cash offers have been made for Jess Petty, star pitcher of the Indianapolis American Association club, according to William Smith, vice-president of the club. "The three clubs to offer us cash for Petty, who won 23 games and lost only eight during the past season, were the New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators," said Smith. "There is no chance of such a deal going through unless players come in exchange," he added.

Frankie Thompson, well known in major and minor leagues circles, was seriously injured last week, in a fall from a telegraph pole on which he was working as a linesman. He received a broken arm and internal injuries. Thompson was with the St. Louis Browns several years ago and since has played with Tulsa, Des Moines, Joplin and Bartlesville. He was with the latter two clubs the past season.

Although Herb Pennock, veteran southpaw star of the New York Yankees, has not come to terms with the club for this year, he wants it known that he is not a holdout. Pennock is said to have received $13,000 for his work last season.

A judgment for $2,000 has been entered against President Al Tearney of the Western League in behalf of the Lincoln Club. Lincoln contended that Tearney had failed to keep his agreement to Guy Stokes, now with Des Moines, and Pudry, another player, from the Lincoln Club of the Nebraska State League at the time of its transfer to the Western League.

Albany has put through a deal by which it turns over to Rochester, Pitcher Lefty Thormahlen for Artie Butler, veteran infielder, and a pitcher, the latter under option. Butler was with Bridgeport last season and the fact that Stallings and Hapgood now own that club made possible the switch. Thormahlen was regarded as one of the most likely pitchers on the Albany staff last season, while Butler is a sure .300-hitter and can still play the keystone bag in bang-up style.

Al figures that if the feature can be sold, he won't have to worry anymore about getting his arm in shape.

WHOLESALE THIEVERY AT SUB-BASE BROUGHT TO LIGHT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 17—For a number of weeks it has been known that wholesale plundering has been in progress at the submarine base; for besides provisions and linen and silverware known to have been stolen, it has been revealed that parts of automobiles, practically everything but the chassis, have been a portion of the loot stolen from the government reservation. Already two arrests of sailors have been made and the accused are held at the base pending a court martial. Tonight another arrest was made in New London when a search was made of the residence of Gleason Jackman, 11 Woodbridge street, steward at the base, and a quantity of plunder was recovered. Jackman makes the third prisoner now under arrest by the naval authorities and other arrests were expected to follow.

The loot recovered tonight included cartons of canned goods, 100 pounds bags of sugar, silverware, underwear, blankets, linen, etc., the plunder it is estimated, being worth several hundreds of dollars. Besides the government plunder recovered, a still was also seized.

Having evidence that incriminated Jackman in some of the thefts, naval officers this afternoon laid their information before Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky, who issued a search warrant, ordering the premises occupied by Jackman and his wife to be searched. The warrant was given Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney, who ordered Patrolman John Sullivan to institute the search. Sullivan was accompanied by two lieutenants from the base, a petty officer and three sailors. At the Woodbridge street residence, the searchers soon came upon some of the stolen government property, the plunder being easily identified as provisions and supplies recently missed from the reservation. All of the seized goods were taken to the police station in a base motor truck and are being held there, pending disposition by the federal authorities.

Following the raid at the Woodbridge street residence the Groton police, possessed of a search warrant issued by Prosecuting Attorney Warren B. Burrows, of Groton, and accompanied by naval officers, visited the residence of H. E. Guy, 81 Allen street, where a complete search of the house was made and a large quantity of tools, apparel and provisions, alleged to have been stolen from the base, were recovered Guy, a sailor stationed at the submarine base, is now under arrest at the base, pending his trial by court martial.

A man, a stranger in the city, and a lodger at the home of Mrs. Emily D. Montague, 76 Golden street, was taken into custody tonight by Patrolman Braxton Hill, upon complaint of Mrs. Montague, who charged the stranger with breach of the peace. The man went to the Montague residence in an intoxicated condition and persisted in annoying Mrs. Montague, finally creating a disturbance and in order to protect herself, Mrs. Montague seized a kettle of hot water from a stove and emptied the contents upon her annoyer. Mrs. Montague then sought and obtained the arrest of the stranger.

Eight youths were taken into custody this afternoon by Patrolman John Sullivan and will be given a hearing in the juvenile court this week. The youths have forced an entrance to the bottling works of the M. A. Kane company, corner of West Colt street and Jefferson avenue, several times of late. Complaint was made to the police this forenoon with the result that the entire gang was rounded up.

Lane, as diphtheria last Friday, a culture forwarded to the state laboratory at Hartford to assure the nature of the child's malady, was returned this forenoon as being negative. Dr. Lane, however, does not agree in his judgment with the state's chemists, for this afternoon when informed of the decision the physician declared that the child was suffering from a positive case of diphtheria and that he would not change his method of treatment, but on the contrary, would continue to prescribe for the child for the contagious malady.

The condition of Mrs. Henry G. Keeney, ill at her home, 117 Blackhall street, is reported as being greatly improved.

Miss Edna Green, stenographer in the office of City Clerk Julian D. Moran, is ill at her home on Home street.

It was revealed this afternoon that the gunman who sought to take the life of Mrs. Joseph Verdi, 18 Brewer street, last Sunday night, was known under an alias, for instead of being Michael Madonna, the name he was known here, the would-be slayer is Michael Baladassa. This was determined this afternoon when Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh went to the Baladassa residence, 76 Shaw street, where it was believed possible that Baladassa was in hiding, and forced an entrance to the place. Baladassa had placed a padlock on the front entrance and this was smashed by the officers. Entering the house a complete search of it was made for the man, but he was not found. The effects of Baladassa were then examined and from letters found, including Baladassa's army enlistment during the World war, it was revealed that Baladassa had been using the alias.

The police are of the opinion that Baladassa, who was known among the Italian population in the vicinity of Shaw street as a gambler, and who was a frequenter of a Bank street pool room resorted to principally by Italian young men, is in hiding at the home of an acquaintance here. The opinion of the police that Baladassa has not fled from the city, was given greater credence when it became known this afternoon that Baladassa's friends have been interrogating attorneys for the purpose of ascertaining the maximum sentence that Baladassa would receive should he decide to give himself up to the authorities and stand trial. The address of his wife and family, who moved to New Britain three weeks ago, has been discovered and it is known that the fugitive is not in hiding in that city, Baladassa is well known among the Italian population. He is the type of man who does not work unless forced to do so.

Charles Bronstein, son of the late Samuel Bronstein, a tailor in this city, was before the police court this morning for having in his possession at a so-called restaurant on Main street, The Nest, a quantity of liquor for the purpose of selling it. He was represented by an attorney and demurred to the complaint. He was fined $20 and sentenced to a term in jail, but the jail penalty was suspended for a year, Bronstein being given the assurance that he would go over the line if he proved false to the chance he had to go out of the business without serving a jail sentence. Bronstein is said to have sub-leased the place and to get it paid a higher rental than was charged to the original lessee. The police went there yesterday to warn Bronstein that a complaint had been made against the place because of its character and to warn him that he must change the patronage of the place or suffer prosecution. They looked around the place, however, and found wine and beer and "empties" that left no doubt of the character of the place so they arrested Bronstein. He claimed to be the owner of the place, though that is doubted. He has never before been arrested so he was shown some leniency by the court.

Groton people have been grumbling because they were denied the service of the trolley cars last Sunday and because the ferryboat did not begin trips until noon. They said that residents in that town were unfortunate that they had to depend on the established means of transportation. There were repairs to be made to the bridge and no notice of this was given to the public.

MISSING JOHN B. STODDARD IS LOCATED IN BOSTON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 17—Suffering from amnesia, John B. Stoddard, missing from Groton, is under treatment at the Boston City hospital, where his condition is considered serious. This became known this afternoon when the Boston police notified Captain Andrew McCarthy, of the Groton police department that Stoddard was under treatment at the Boston hospital and it will be several days before he can be allowed to return to his home.

Stoddard, who mysteriously disappeared eleven days ago, was found roaming aimlessly about Washington and Cassell streets, Boston, three days following his disappearance from his home. At the time Stoddard was unable to give any account of himself, his mind being a blank. A search of his clothing revealed a letter bearing the name of "Mrs. Lyman Gard, 11 Latham street, Groton, Conn." Following a letter sent to Mrs. Gard, another letter was sent to Capt. McCarthy. A day or two ago, a reply was received by the Boston police from Mrs. Gard in which Mrs. Gard had written to Stoddard with relation to insurance. Capt. McCarthy was then notified that Stoddard was in the Boston hospital.

Stoddard was employed by the local office of the Prudential Life Insurance Company and his disappearance was most sudden. He is married and has several children.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

REACTION IN MARKET.

New York, Feb. 17.—Stock prices went through another period of sharp reaction early today during which a number of the popular issues sold down 1 to 7 points, but strong buying support made its appearance in the late afternoon and the general list closed irregularly higher. Total sales again exceeded two million shares.

One of the features of the session was a sharp break in American Smelting and Refining, which dropped from par to below 93 on selling inspired by an unfavorable federal court decision in California involving the use of its smelter process. The stock rallied above 94 later on the announcement of company officials that an appeal would be taken and that the damages involved were about $350,000 and not several million as reported in news dispatches from the west.

Weakness also was shown by the commercial solvents issues, Laclede Gas, Commercial Investment Trust, Federal Light and Traction, International Harvester, Sears-Roebuck, Stromberg Carburetor, Virginia Railway and Power, and West Penn Power, the declines in which ran from 2 to 7 points.

Baldwin was carried down to a new low for the year at 126 1-4 on selling influenced by the publication of the annual report for 1924 showing net profit of $1,320,024, or less than the preferred dividend requirements, as compared with $6,616,465 the year before. Fresh buying developed in that issue later, however, when the attention was drawn to the possibilities of the new Diesel Engine locomotive, the stock rallying to above 131 and then easing to 130 5-8 for a net gain of 3 5-8 on the day. This started a rally in the general list, which was still under way when the market closed.

United States Steel common closed fractionally higher at 122 1-4 after having sold as low as 122 1-8. American Can fluctuated between 172 and 166 1-8, closing at 170 1-4 for a net gain of 2 1-4. Studebaker closed fractionally higher at 43 1-4.

Atchison was the outstanding feature of the rail group, soaring six points to 124, the highest price since 1910. New York Central moved up nearly two points to 121 1-2 while Southern Railway, New Haven, Texas and Pacific, Wabash Preferred A, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie first preferred, the Missouri Pacific issues and Western Pacific moved up a point or so. Lackawanna was heavy, dropping 1 3-4 to 136.

Sharp recovery also took place in some of the high priced specialties. United States Cast Iron Pipe soared to 221 and then slipped back to 218 3-4, up 8 3-4 while net gains of 3 to 7 1-2 points were recorded by Nash Motors, New York Shipbuilding, Postum Cereal, Tobacco Products and United Cigars.

The rally in the oils was stimulated by another increase in Mid-Continent crude prices. General Petroleum, the Pan-American issues and Independent Oil and Gas each closed about two points higher while a number of others improved a point or more. Substantial gains also were recorded by such sugar industrials as American Locomotive, American Sugar Refining, American Woolen, Maxwell Motors A and B, Allis Chalmers, Associated Dry Goods, Continental Can, Crucible Steel, International Paper and Universal Pipe and Radiator preferred, the net gain in each case being two points or more.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent and then dropped to 3 1-2. Time money and Commercial Paper rates held firm with business in moderate volume.

A further recovery in French francs, which carried the demand rate to around 5.38 was the feature of the irregular foreign exchange market. Buying of the French currency was prompted by the reassuring statements of Premier Herriot. Demand sterling heavy, again falling below $4.77. Most of the European rates showed only minor changes.
